GREENE'S
OXYGENATED BITTERS.

The stomach is one of the most delicate organs of the human system; and the indigestible food crowded into it by the requirements of modern society, keep it in which is followed by a resort to tonics and alteratives for relief. It unfortunately happens, however, that many of the medicines used for this purpose contain alcohol, which, poured into a diseased stomach produces irritation, creates inflamation, and does more injury than good.

OXYGENATED BITTERS CONTAIN NO ALCOHOL,

but are purely medicinal preparation, which, in cases of DYSPEPSIA, HEARTBURN, INDIGESTION, and other like disorders, at once restores the stomach to its NATURAL CONDITION OF HEALTH.

The OXYGENATED BITTERS have been the most popular remedy for the above complaints for the last THIRTY YEARS, and still maintain their UNRIVALLED POPULARITY.

A Reply to L's last Article

Messrs. Editors: I would not reply to the points made in L's last article,if I did I not believe that the doctrine he elevates is exceedingly pernicious to the temperance morals of the people. This is my apology for appearing again in your columns. Passing over the first and second positions of L. as being too trivial for comment, I come to notice the following:

1. "The wine of the Bible was an intoxicating liquor."

Which wine? It is readily admitted that one kind of wine was intoxicating.—Such as is condemned, and described by Solomon thus: "At last it (such as intoxicates) biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." And the command is: "Look not upon it." Abstain from its moderate use.

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him and makest him drunken also." "Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps." "It is not for kings to drink wine." Such wine is described in in these passages was intoxicating, and condemned—detested—because of its intoxicating quality.

There were other wines not intoxicating in the Bible times—such wines as were most highly esteemed in Palestine, and of those only does God speak approvingly. That there were [illegible] to the Hebrews by different words from that used to designate intoxicating wines, has been proved by recent critical investigations; and the seeming contradictions between those passages of the Bible where one kind is commended, and another kind of wine is severely condemned are [illegible] harmonize. The one was a harmless, mild, palatable drink, the other a raging "mocker," a heating, intoxicating, infuriating poison. Such wine as the pure, unfermented juice of the grape the Savior made at Cana and used at the institution of the Lord's Supper. All doubts on this point will be dissipated by consulting "Alcohol its Nature and Effects," Dr. Lees's "Text-Book of Temperance."

2. "The temperate use of wine has never been forbidden by the church." Which church? John Wesley's church has forbidden it, and that is the only church that comes legitimately into this controversy. The present rule forbids the drinking of spirituous liquors, except in cases of necessity, or as a medicine. Spirituous liquors, being a generic term, include intoxicating wines, as well as brandy, whiskey, gin &c. The difference between distilled liquors and fermented wine is merely of degree. Alcohol, the deleterious and poisonous quality, is precisely the same in both the fermented and intoxicating wines having from one tenth to one fourth, while brandy, rum, gin, are generally a little more than one half alcohol. To get drunk on wine is just as abominable as to get drunk on corn whiskey. It only takes a little more of wine than whiskey. It is solemn trifling with holy things for a man to allege, that our present rule does not prohibit the moderate use of wine, which is as effectually powerful in producing drunkenness, as other liquors. That they meant to include wine in the rule, is clear from this expression found in his printed works: "You see the wine when it sparkles in the cup, and are going to drink it. I say there is poison in it,and beg you therefore to throw it away."

3. The fair inference drawn from L's article is this: That moderate drinking is morally right.

As this is really the ground on which the two parties join battle, I must be allowed a little time to prove, that moderate drinking of wine, or any other intoxicating liquors, is (1) unnecessary to healthy persons, (2) is a dangerous practice, and (3) sets a pernicious example and is therefore positively sinful.

1. Facts collected and embodied show conclusively that men who do not use the said liquors keep themselves in a better condition, mentally physically and spiritually than those who do. In support of this proposition, any amount of testimony can be adduced.

TESTIMONY OF EMINENT PHYSICIANS.

Two thousand eminent physicians of London signed a certificate stating, "That the most perfect health is compatible with total abstinence from all intoxicating beverages." Dr. Emlin states. "That all use of ardent spirit is mischievous." Dr. Franks, "That their tendency, even when used moderately is to induce disease." Dr. Harris says, "The moderate use of liquor has destroyed many who were never drunk." Dr. Massey states. "Does a healthy man need alcohol?" No more than he does arsenic or opium." Seventy physicians of Boston unite in the statement that "Men in health are never benefited by the use of ardent spirits." Forty-five, in Cincinnati, state that, "Ardent spirits are not only unnecessary but absolutely injurious in a healthy state of the system." This conclusive testimony taken from that profession of men, who have a right to know all about this matter, is sufficient, although I have not enumerated one tenth of the authority, that could be arrayed on this subject. It has been demonstrated that alcohol is not food, nor a promoter of digestion, nor a helper in bearing extreme heat or cold. An able writer on this subject says: "The conclusion, then, to which we are drawn by a candid consideration of medical principles, and a wide induction of facts, past and present, in great abundance, is adverse to any use of alcoholic beverages, and in favor of the judgment which treats them as essentially injurious to the physical health and vigor of our species." Dr. Richardson, in discussing the "Physiological position of alcohol." (Popular Science Review, April, 1872) decisively affirms: "The evidence is all-perfect that alcohol gives no potential power to brain or muscle. A fire makes a brilliant light, but it leaves a desolation, and thus with alcohol."

The proposition being fully established, that the use of alcoholic liquors is not only unnecessary but positively injurious: it follows conclusively, that distilling, (which is supposed in this country to destroy annually 60,000,000 bushels of nutritious grain and turn it into a poison) constitutes a degree of immorality sufficient to exclude men engaged in it from the church. And especially is this so, when it is remembered, that the manufacture of intoxicating liquors is the genesis—the fountain head of the drinking system, and therefore the source of its future evils. Liquors could not be drunk, if they were not made. Alcohol is not the product of nature. In the wide range of creation, not a drop of alcohol is found. "The first step toward producing alcohol is the death of the grain or fruit destined to make it." Hence, it no more follows because fruits and grains are nourishing to the human system that therefore alcohol is nourishing, than it follows because vegetables are nourishing, that therefore the poisonous miasma, which the decay of those substances produces, is nourishing." As then distillers stand connected with the great evil of intemperance, as its head—its fountain, they incur such guilt as justify church expulsion

Secondly,—It follows from the propositions established, showing the uselessness of liquors, that the traffic in them either by wholesale or retail is immoral. The traffic in alcoholic liquors has confessedly become to be an art of soliciting and seducing men to drink in order to sell largely for pecuniary gain. Its sale, then, has become an organized system, issuing in the formation of intemperate appetites, habits, customs, awfully destructive to the bodies and souls of men. The seller of liquors is accessory to the crimes of intemperance, and the civil courts hold that an accessory to a crime is equally guilty with the principal perpetrator. In the language of Chancellor Walworth, "Disguise that business as you may, it is still in its true character the business of destroying the bodies and souls of men. The vendors and maker of spirits in the whole range of them, from the pettiest grocer to the most extensive distiller are fairly chargable with making of drunkards." But it is said, "It is not the making or selling of intoxicating liquors, that does the mischief, it is the drinking of them." Suppose a traitor, to his native land in time of war, should make and sell fire arms and ammunition to the enemy, and should say, "It is not the making or selling of fire-arms, that does the mischief, but the using of them." Would such a plea defend him from public indignation, or the doom of a traitor? Certainly not. Bacchus is the great enemy to the church of Christ, and the making and selling of liquor furnish him the fire arms with which he wages a destructive war on the good of society.

But here is a member, who sells only by the barrel in connection with a dry-goods store. He is otherwise a very good man—very clever, pays liberally to the church. "True" he says, "the erection of dirty-shops and selling by the glass, are abominable. Grog-sellers ought to be expelled from the church. But I do not run a groggery; mine is a wholesale establishment: I sell only in large quantities." So much the worse. Suppose a counterfeiter should say:—"True, to make counterfeit bills, such as ten cents, twenty-five and fifty cents bills is an atrocious crime, but I only counterfeit large bills, such as fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, five hundred dollars, &c. Would such a miserable plea stand a moment before the bar of public sentiment? How such men would be scouted from the land, yet the wholesale dealers in liquors occupy precisely the same relation to the drunkenness of the land. The church has a right to protect herself from evil doers; makers and sellers of beverage liquors, as it has been proved, are evil doers; therefore the church has a right to make a law excluding them. It is not necessary to prove that such an ecclesiastical right is based on some express command of the Scripture; the right is vested in the constitution of the church. The right to organize a church carries with it the right to make laws to protect her purity.

Thirdly,—It follows that as all forms of intoxicating liquors are useless as a beverage, it is morally wrong for christians to drink, even moderately. It is an unnecessary tampering with sin. It is a presumptuous exposure to moral peril. Facts show, that such is the nature of these liquors, and such the nature of men, that they cannot use them moderately, without in many cases, the formation of intemperate appetites and habits, which lead them to drunkenness and utter ruin of soul and body.

There is a bloated army of 600,000 confirmed drunkards in the United States. They were once sober persons. They ran the gauntlet of moderate drinking and came out hopeless sots. They never could have been drunkards, if they had at first been moderate drinkers. Why does not the generation of drunkards cease? Simply because, no sooner has one generation passed away than another takes its place from the ranks of moderate drinkers. Moderate drinking is the devil's recruiting officer by whose service his army of sots, thinned out at the rate of 60,000 annually, is replenished. If that officer was killed, but a few years would suffice to rid the earth of the last reeling toper. I hold then, that it is morally wrong for a christian to run the chances needlessly of becoming a drunkard by moderate tippling.

Is it not morally wrong for a christian needlessly to sleep by a magazine of gun-powder when sparks are flying around it? Or climb up on some dizzy crag, or walk among grass where adders hide, or sit under a tottering wall? "Stand in awe, and sin not." "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation.' are warnings, he dare not disregard. Futhermore, if a christian had perfect assurance against the growth into drunkenness, still he has no right to drink moderately, by which he throws the weight of his influence in favor of the drinking usages of society, and becomes a stumbling block to others. "We have just buried," said a man to a Temperance lecturer, "a man who killed himself by intemperance. He was the son of a respectable mechanic who had two sons and took both into his own business when they were young. His practice was to drink moderately, three times a day. His sons did the same. Before they were eighteen they were both drunkards. The oldest lingered on to twenty-three, and died. The youngest can't live to be twenty three. He is going the same way. The father stands it, but the sons are ruined." In this case, and thousands like it, we see how the moderate drinking of the father led his two sons to ruin. In some cases, the father may stand it, but it kills others.

There is no lack of Scriptural authority to sustain the principle I advocate. The language of Paul is directly to the point. "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." Here is the noble doctrine of self denial for the good of others. The preacher, who advocates "the moderate use of wine," loses his power to check the great evil of intemperance. The liquor party count him on their side, and quote his example in justificatiou of their drunkenness. "In a certain convention of Temperance philanthropists, a clergyman made a plausible defense of the moral right of even good men to drink.... When he concluded, an old man arose with much emotion, and said, "I know a young man fast becoming a drunkard. When he is urged to give up the wine cup,he always pleads the example of a certain popular clergyman. He says that while that minister takes his glass and defends it, he means to drink. Gentlemen! that poor intemperate youth is my son; and the clergyman whose evil example he is following is the very man, who has just addressed the convention."—Dr. Cuyler.

Now, I think the sin of making, selling, buying, and using of intoxicating liquors is clearly established; and therefore the new law ought to pass.

H. T. HUDSON.

For the Advocate.

"The Curse of Blood."

BY REV. E. A. YATES.

Messrs. Editors: The first number of a serial article,with the above caption, appeared in the Advocate of Oct. 21st. The writer is no less a personage than my good brother and class mate, Rev. W. M. Robey. His pen leaves a shining wake as truly as his tongue drops eloquence; and right sorry I am to differ with him in doctrine or to be compelled to level a lance at his logic. My apology for so doing must be found in my zeal for the preservation of those old landmarks of doctrine which have come down to us, not only venerable with age, but polished by the subtilest intellects, charged with the profoundest wisdom, and illuminated by the most exemplary piety.—I am not opposed to investigation; but I am fearful of disturbing those old bottom-sills of doctrine, lest we start some of the upper timbers, and set the building so askant as to furnish purchase for the tempest, which has been so long dashed back from her sides and pinnacles. If the heathen are all lost without the preaching of the gospel, of course they are unconditionally lost; and this leaves a mortise for the short, ugly timber of Calvinism. Perhaps Bro. Robey does not see this. But surely his general proposition furnishes an arc of his theological activity, which, properly wrought out, gives an orbital motion around Geneva, with the centripetal force largely preponderating.

The objective point of the argument seems to be the conclusion "that the heathen are all lost without the preached gospel. They cannot get the gospel without the church sends it. Therefore, their blood is upon the church." Now, Bro. Robey's anxiety to find some new and forcible argument for greater missionary labor has led him to mix up here a great deal of error with a little truth. He succeeds in making clear his belief (because he states it in words) that a man—a heathen—cannot be "lost for other men's sins." This is Pauline and Wesleyan. Suppose he squares his proposition by this grand truth. He says, in substance, "If the heathen are saved at all, they must be saved either conditionally or unconditionally." Very true. But it follows also that if they are lost it must be either conditionally or unconditionally.—Now, if they are lost unconditionally, then Calvinism—from which we most devoutly pray to be delivered! But if they are lost conditionally, then what is the condition, and where is it lodged? Bro. Robey's argument is to prove that the condition is lodged in the church—that the heathen goes to hell because the church fails to do its duty! What is this but punishing B because A does wrong? or that "men are lost for other men's sins?" Our heart most emphatically declares that this is unlike our God; whose throne, though wrapped in clouds and darkness, is pillared forever upon justice and judgment. The church, doubtless, does sin in not doing more to convert the heathen by the preached gospel; but God has not entirely coupled the car of a soul's salvation to the slow engine of the church. He who is infinite in goodness sweeps with His love a circumference that is larger than this, and evolves from His wisdom a condition that swings heaven's golden chain of salvation within reach of every soul. Surely God would not make disbelief of the gospel the condition of a heathen's damnation, when He knows the heathen has not the gospel to disbelieve. So, if on the other hand, He has made the condition something else, and lodged it in Bro. Robey, for instance, then it follows that the best heaven has done for us is this: The poor, ignorant son of Ham lies down in his lonely jungle and goes to hell because Bro. Robey fails to do his duty!

Our good brother misleads himself by investing the term gospel with an ambiguity of meaning. There seems to be lurking in his mind a notion that limits the extent and application of the Atonement by the preached gospel. But there is another way by which the benefits of the Atonement may reach the soul besides that of preaching. Cornelius felt its touch and was a devout man before he sent to the Tanner's house for a preacher; and if he had died before Peter took his text, he would have been sure of heaven: but God had more to accomplish by the process, and hence the preaching. It is by the Atonement that the Holy Spirit is in the world. Christ is the light "that lighteth every man that cometh into the world."—The Holy Spirit by virtue of the Atonement gives the heathen in his conscience a knowledge of right and wrong; and therefore he who is without the outward preaching has a law within, which if he obeys—lives up to the light he has - will save him. And this conscience-law is a quantity in the sum of the gospel in its generic sense. Unbelief is the damning sin in a land where the gospel is heard, or may be heard. "If ye believe not that I am he ye shall die in your sins."—But of necessity something else must be the damning sin in a land where there is no preached gospel; unless we conclude that those who are damned are damned without sin, which is cruelty; or else damned because Bro. Robey does not go and preach the gospel to them, which is injustice!

Our good brother will excuse us for saying that he has misapplied the quotation from the Epistle to the Romans—"how shall they hear without a preacher," &c. The Apostle is not in this place making a statement as to the extent and application of the Atonement, nor making an argument, like Bro. Robey, to show that all who die without hearing the gospel preached are lost, but simply showing that the gospel is for the Gentiles as well as for the Jews, and justifying himself in going to the Gentiles. So that, an epitome of the Apostle's statement is simply this: "In order that men may call on the name of the Lord, or lead a religious life,and be saved according to the gospel plan, which is for the Gentiles as well as Jews, a preacher must be sent to them. Hence, I am the Apostle to the Gentiles, and magnify my office."

That he was not making an argument to show that the heathen who die without hearing the gospel are necessarily lost, is evident from passages which state just the contrary, to wit: "For when the Gentiles, (heathen,) which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, [written or preached,] are a law unto themselves."—Rom. 2-14. And Mr. Watson says the heathen have always been under moral law. Again: For as many as have sinned without law, [written law, of course,] shall also perish, [or be judged,] without law; and as many as have sinned in the law, [written law] shall be judged [or perish] by the law."—Rom. 2-12.—Now, how could any sin without law—or written law—unless there was a law in their conscience, which they had transgressed? Does Bro. Robey teach that one can sin absolutely without any law? Moreover, is not the inference clear and logical, that, as "some have sinned and been judged or perished by this conscience-law, so others have not sinned and have been judged and saved by the same law? We therefore conclude that some of the heathen who have not heard the gospel are saved, just as some sinners who have heard it are lost!

And this brings me to Bro. Robey's question: "Can the heathen be saved without hearing the gospel? If they can, why send them the gospel?" As I have answered the first affirmatively, I propose to answer the second as clearly as I may be able. My good brother cannot be ignorant of the fact that this seeming difficulty is the string upon which infidels delight to harp. And this is their music: "Dilemma—the whole heathen world without the preaching of the gospel must either be lost or saved. If God could save them without the gospel, then he could save all men without it, and therefore it is a useless superfluity. But if they are all lost without the preaching of the gospel, then what kind of God is yours who damns the millions of poor ignorant heathen because you pitiful handful of christians do not spread your book, or give your money to send a preacher to them!" How will Bro. Robey meet this? The only answer is the Scriptural one: "They are a law unto themselves, and their consciences accuse or else excuse." But Bro. Robey urges, "Why send the gospel to them?" Well, for several reasons, chief of which is, God commands it. And if I fail to furnish the rationale, I fall back upon this command, which is itself sufficient for me.

1. We do not send the gospel to the heathen because they are all lost without it, but we send it because some of them are better served with it. An analogous question to that of Bro. Robey's is, can a young lady get along in life without an education at Davenport College, or some other equally as good? The answer is, Yes, but she can get along much better with it! So God acts as every good parent—does the best. Besides, does not Bro. Robey see that more of the heathen can and will be saved with the gospel than without it? An ignorant man can observe eclipses of the Sun and Moon; and it requires only a slight hint to enable him to discover the cause of eclipses. But the teaching of Astronomy, and building of observatories and optical apparatus make more and better Astronomers. So, some of the heathen may be saved without the preaching of the gospel, but the gospel enlarges the harvest.

We said they were better saved.—Now, we must remember that hell and heaven are not arbitrary arrangements of God. A godly soul might hunt the universe and it would never find a hell; and so, a wicked soul would never find a heaven. Men are rewarded according to the deeds done in the body; and there are degrees, therefore, in punishment and reward. So that the heathen saved without the preaching of the gospel, takes a low position in the scale of salvation. The ignorant sinner may say this is enough; but God and the Christian do not say so.

2. We send the gospel to the heathen because of its humanizing, civilizing and ennobling influences. The revival, or bestowal, of letters, the inventions of genius, the elevation of woman to her proper sphere, the adoption or bestowal of juster principles of government, and ten thousand other blessings, follow the gospel of Jesus as surely as the tides of ocean spring to the attraction of the moon, or the flowers of earth leap up to drink the dew and kiss the sun.

But, Mr. Editor, to a scholar so erudite as mybrother Roby it is unnecessary to elaborate this part of the argument, and I close.

For the Advocate.

Dr. Pierce and L on the Proposed Change in the Discipline.

(Concluded.)

3rd. The use (as a beverage) of alcoholic or intoxicating liquor. The church has an express law forbidding this now, and it ought to. It only needs to be enforced to effect an astonishing amount of good. We have met with old, intelligent (otherwise) officers of the church, who did not know of that law. Whose fault was that, aye, whose blame? Seeking popularity at the expense of duty and the fear of offending by discharging duty are topics for the careful and prayerful consideration of the Pastors, we humbly suggest. Names, dates, facts and figures are at command.

L. as well as Dr. P., may properly be noticed here, and we propose to be as brief as possible. Proverbs 31-4, 5. "It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine, nor for Princes strong drink: Lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted."—This forbids liquor drinking to rulers, by positive precept. Numbers vi. 2, 3. "Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When either man or woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to separate themselves unto the Lord; He shall separate himself from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried." This, as applied to the (Israelites) professed christians, will, we think, bear, without violence in view of Biblical phraseology, this interpretation, viz: that when a person vows unto the Lord his vow of separation from the world, its lusts,pleasures &c. to become wholly the Lord's, he is to give up wine and all drinks that can intoxicate and in order to avoid every appearance of evil and be entirely safe, he must give up all that tends or may lead to them; whet the appetite for, or strongly suggest them, as grapes, moist or dried, since from them the wine is made; the taste whereof may excite the curiosity to test the wine.—This idea is neither strained nor far fetched, for the Temperance Societies acting upon it forbid the use of sweet cider—which is a pleasant, and not only harmless, but, judiciously used, a most healthful beverage.—We think therefore that we have Scripture precept forbidding its use. But aside from this, should our theory be incorrect, we have an abundance of testimony against it. Whether to drink drams for their sake be, per se, right or wrong, St. Paul clearly sets forth the doctrine that if it be right to use a thing, the use whereof is considered wrong by others then it is wrong, a sin, to use it 1 Cor. VIII—13:

"Wherefore if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." Romans 14-21. "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth,or is offended, or is made weak." Drinking wine or other things of a kindred nature by some, causes other brothers to stumble, others to be offended, and others to become weak; therefore it is good not to drink it, which, in this connection we presume, means that it is a sin to drink it.

And now we think the case is made out and our propositions sustained. The case of our Saviour converting water into wine is, most unaccountably to me, relied upon to justify wine-drinking. A reference to the original will show that the word translated "wine" is "oinos," which means the fresh juice of the vine and also of other fruits, which contains not a particle of intoxicating property; a harmless wine. We have no account of the effect produced by that wine, only the Gov. thought it the best; no mention of any inebriate there, although they had been drinking before. It does seem to us a most preposterous idea (to use no harsher term) that our Saviour was countenancing by his presence an assemblage of drinkers of intoxicating liquor and endorsing the practice by performing his first miracle in order to give them a fresh supply after, as it seems, they had drank up all they had: setting before them a still better liquor, tempting them to drink, while he was declaring that "no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven." What a spectacle! The Savior, God, working a miracle to place before those for whose salvation he came to suffer and die, a strong temptation to do that, which, he declared if they did do, they should not be saved, but should be damned, working a miracle calculated to thwart his own designs. He fully understood the nature, the utter corruption of men, himself declaring his total unsoundness of body, mind and spirit. To change this and purify and make mankind,—healthy, was the avowed object of his presence: he knew how he should suffer, how his agony would force his blood, as sweat, through every pore of his body; how the nails would lacerate his tender flesh, and that in his death agony, the climax of his sufferings, deserted by friends, insulted by foes he should cry, "Eloi, eloi, lama sabacthani!" that all this was necessary for him to do to save man, and yet with this knowledge he inaugurates the wondrous work by miraculously aiding men to become drunken and be guilty of the wickedness which are the fruits or concomitants thereof. I confess freely that such an idea is entirely beyond my comprehension. I cannot realize it; without help such a thought could never have penetrated my obtuse brain. When Paul advised Timothy to use a little wine (this does not touch the question, since Timothy was sick and Paul prescribing for him) he used the same word "oinos," and wherever we have examined the original, "oinos" is the word used when there is nothing bad connected with the circumstances; but when there is, the word "methu" is the word or the root of the word used, while in our language they are indifferently translated wine. These Scriptures, therefore, rather argue against, than for, the wine advocates. Where did L. learn that the apostles drank wine, as a beverage, which he insinuates when he says that they would probably have to promise to reform their lives in order to get into the Methodist church? After full reflection our conclusion is that L. wrote his article as a "feeler," to get up a discussion.

We think we have shown L. that to make, buy, sell, or use as a beverage, "spirituous liquors," is forbidden by the word of God, as plainly, at least, as he is forbidden to burn down my house, or to dance or gamble. If we needed it, human ingenuity can create or devise no law higher than God's.—In so important a matter as this, let us have the benefit of your name, L., and not a nomme de plume.

One word more: if we did not misapprehend our learned and beloved brother Pierce he assumed this ground also, that the change was not needed, for that under the laws now existing the cases contemplated by the change can be dealt with. If so, then the laws already existing must be wrong if the proposed ones are, and if so, then no change is proposed but simply an explanation or simplification. Mr. Editor, my task is done, very hurriedly amidst a press of many cares. I think the importance of the subject demands, in some way, an expression of opinion from, not the Conferences only, but the whole church. I am well aware that the name appended hereto, carries very little weight or influence, but am conscientious in the belief that I ought to express myself, since by the result of this movement my children's children may be affected, as the church and the world must be. I hope and pray that the proposed rules will be made and religiously executed.

THE QUESTION.

Is it Expedient to Change?

Numberless questions have been suggested which if not imaginary, are irrelevant to the real issue; many more may be started by captions and critical minds until we go back to the metaphysical controversy, about general and particular ideas.

The question above is paramount. Is it expedient? is it wise to substitute a new "specification" under general rules which is of doubtful utility—a mere experiment—for an old rule under which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has prospered and flourished since 1845?

Provisionally ignoring all other church organizations, a wise consideration of the present condition of the M. E. Church, South, ought to settle the question at once. There is not at the present time—perhaps there never was but once before, so large a body of freely thinking and speaking men who were more united than the Methodist E. Church, South was, prior to the proposed change. In doctrine, in moral piety, in scriptural economy all are at one. Individual exceptions are comparatively few. At this hour all are agreed as to the dreadful consequence of drinking spirituous liquors as they are commonly used, and that the most wise and efficient remedy for the evils they entail is in total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks, used as a "beverage," or for culinary purposes.

While the M. E. Church is thus united and prosperous,she has enemies enough without to disintegrate and absorb her,if there could be found (and "Quid non sævit amo.") a crevice in her walls through which the breath of slander could vitiate the pure atmosphere within her impregnable bulwarks. At such a time as this, however desirable, however important it may be to change our tactics, is there an absolute moral necessity to do so? Is the church grown giddy with her prosperity, nodding on the verge of a precipice, ready to be engulfed by her complicity with "Whiskey Rings?" Are her enclosures so infested with distillers and traffickers that she has not moral and spiritual power to reform the drunkard or extirpate drunkenness and drinking spirituous liquors, except in cases of necessity? Must she change the phraseology of a rule which is definite for one indefinite and comprehensive—one that excludes liquors "except in cases of necessity" for one that allows the use of "intoxicating liquors" in every conceivable way except "drinking them as a beverage?" We need not institute a comparison of the two rules, though others may do so. There can be no absolute moral necessity for such a change. The requisite majority will never be had, unless that necessity can be fairly demonstrated. When that is done it will arouse many from the most delicious drams in which they have indulged in their long night of happy ignorance.

For many months past prior to this discussion, and since, thousands and tens of thousands of intelligent, thoughtful men and women, in and out of the church, have weekly read of the unwearied labors of our self denying Bishops; of the increased zeal of our presiding elders, and travelling and local preachers, of the great revivals under their powerful, splendid, and effective sermons; of the unprecedented number of converts and of additions; of the many dear brethren, the Greens, the Pitts, the Marsdens the Reids, the Normans, whose latest breath whispered their love of Methodism in the South; of the innumerable multitude of souls who were quickened by her labors and born to a new life by her inspirations, nourished on her bosom and fed at her altars, and having washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb have gone to join in the grand chorus above; our mothers, our sisters, our brothers. What will these reading, thinking intelligent men of earth think of Methodism,when, turning the page, they read the prophetic dreams of some of our greatest and best men; protraying the "dreadful precipice" the "awful gulf," into which the Church South will plunge if three fourths of the members of our annual conferences do not concur in the recommendation to change a "specification" in our general rules,about which there is disagreement as to its comprehension, and consequently a difference of administration; which disagreement can be reconciled only by a new rule which a respectable minority of its oldest and most devoted members regard as unjust to rights already secured, unscriptural, unlawful, and revolutionary? Must not the readers of our Southern Advocates conclude that there is misrepresentation somewhere? that contrary propositions can not both be true? What must they think of Methodist unity, purity, and prosperity, when they read these cavalier orders. "Fall into line, or stultify the General Conference. Fall into line, or plunge into the gulf! Fall into line, or hide yourself in whiskey rings or hard shell communities. Fall into line or march out of camp?" And why so?

And why is all this bombastic fury? Must the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with her invincible army of two hundred thousand fighting men, with all the pomp and circumstance of a grand ecclesiastical equipment against the world the flesh and the devil, by an adroit movement advance her position to a negation, and march into a total abstinent-temperance Society, "which it is sure christianity does not require?" Who says yea? Not one of God's freedmen who refuses to surrender, at discretion, his spontaneous christian liberty to an imperative less authoritative than that of the Master's who freed him.

Is Your Preacher Paid?

We have several times, within the past few weeks, urged upon the people the necessity of raising the full assessment for their pastor. The importance of the subject is a sufficient reason for another appeal. It is now only about three weeks before Conference. Your preacher is winding up his year's work. What is done in the way of raising his salary must be done quickly. He has labored faithfully for you—the church has been greatly blessed under his ministry. He has done his work well, relying upon you to provide for the temporal wants of himself and family.

Have you done your duty in this respect? Is your preacher paid? While we have reason to believe that the average receipts of the preachers have been nearly or quite as good as those of the past year, we are pained to know that there are a few who have not received half the amount assessed for them at the beginning of the year. Somebody is to blame. You admit that your pastor has done his full duty. Where then is the delinquency? Does the blame rest upon those whose duty it is to support the gospel? The ministers represent Christ; they are his undershepherds. Should the Son of God be allowed to suffer in his representatives? "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto these, ye did it not unto me." Thus the Saviour speaks to the people about his ministers. His word is pledged, and he will hold that people guilty, and will sooner or later punish them, who by forgetfulness or neglect allow their preacher or his family to suffer for want of anything which they can readily supply. It is but right that the people should share with their minister. So long as they have enough to eat, drink and wear, their minister and family should have an adequate supply for their necessities. Put them on an equality with yourselves. Christ would not be displeased if he should see the laity denying themselves in order to treat the preachers better than they treat themselves. They would by this act show genuine respect for the Lord in their treatment of the Lord's servants. The preachers will not ask, and we will not ask for them, that you treat them better than yourselves. All we ask is to share with them in what you have.—Be liberal with them and God will be liberal with you. Make them feel comfortable and happy and God will bestow his blessings upon you in rich abundance.

It is the business of stewards to collect the preacher's salary. That is just what stewards are for. The church creates them for this purpose. They are put into the steward's office not for honor but for work. The faithful steward does work—and loves the work to which he is appointed. His business is to see that the preacher and his family are well provided for—not to guess—to simply presume, but to know by inquiry or examination that it is so, and see to it that every necessity is fully met. People are disposed to do a great deal better than they actually do. Their hearts are in the right place, and only need waking up and to be directed in the line of duty by those who are counted worthy to be officers in the church.—Faithful stewards will make a faithful people and a faithful ministry. The failure, then, of the preacher to receive a competent support, may in some instances, if not all, be chargeable to the dereliction of duty on the part of stewards.

The failure of stewards, however, does not excuse those who are informed as to their duty. They should pay over their assessments promptly and at the right time. Wait not for some steward or collector to dun you, dear brethren, for your quarterage, but go yourself and hand it at once to the preacher, and then urge others to do the same. Take more interest in your preacher and the Lord will take more interest in you. As you love Christ, as you hope for his grace while you live and his mercy in death, see to it and know that his ministers are fully provided for. Do not allow your preacher to come up to Conference and report a deficiency on his assessment. Such a report will not only embarrass the pastor, but damage the standing of your circuit or station

Pay your preacher, dear brethren, and give him a nice suit of clothes for Conference. It will make his heart glad and do your souls good. Try it, and you will find comfort in so doing.

A CHANGE IN TERMS.—DR. REDFORD has changed the price of the Nashville Advocate from $2 to $2.50 per annum. This is as it should be.

The Late Elections and their Lessons.

The topic of the day is the result of the elections held last week in twenty three States. To say that it was surprising to politicians and the people generally, but half expresses the effect produced. The recent elections in the Northwest pointed to a change in the political skies, but no one supposed that there would be that sweeping change in the relative positions of parties which was witnessed at the setting of last Tuesday's sun. In the history of no nation, certainly not in that of America, has there ever been so sudden, decisive and thorough a revolution in political circles. It is not confined to any one locality, State or section, but it has rolled like a tidal wave over all States and sections, bearing with its resistless might upon the props and pillars and vain foundations of temples where men had set up their party-gods—men and principles—for their guilty worship. And, we trust, that it has swept away the debris and rottenness which always clings about party temples, and left the surface cleansed and the air pure and wholesome.

We do not rejoice as a partisan over the issue of the elections, but as a citizen over the triumphs of a people who, seeing the corruption and mismanagement in a government in which they are so deeply concerned as the custodian of their interests and happiness, have determined to apply the corrective and use the remedy which the laws give them. We rejoice as much over the defeat of the Tammany Democratic candidate for Mayor of New York, as we do over the change in the Congressional delegations by which the Democrats have a majority in the lower House of our Congress. We prefer the term "Opposition" to "Democrats" and rejoice more that "opposition" prevails than that the Democratic over-rides the Republican party. In the columns of this paper we have no right to be a Democrat or a Republican; but we have a right, which it is our duty to exercise, to rebuke bad and commend good government:—to point out corruption and joyously salute every honest and earnest endeavor which is made to throttle and destroy it.

The abuses of government since the war have been undisputed and palpable. The ungenerous, not to say unjust and tyrannical, policy toward the "reconstructed States:—the evident effort to keep them depressed and to throw obstacles in the way of their recovery from the blighting effects of the war:—the "Credit Mobilier" operations in which men in high position and holding sacred trusts, were engaged at the expense of their own infamy and the great discredit of the government at home and abroad:—the disgraceful lobbying and open bribe giving and taking;—the prostitution of high public office to a play thing or a door to ease and fortune;—the wish to perpetuate the power of party at any expense, as well as the indefinite rule of one personage;—the cold regard paid to virtue and the sneering at morality and religion by leading men—all these are the misdoings which the people have witnessed and endured, until to endure longer became guilt and ruin.

The verdict given last Tuesday was their disapproval of looseness and immorality in government, as well as in the private lives of men who officered the ship of State. It was not so much an expression of confidence in the Democratic party, as it was of disapproval and condemnation of the course of those who lead and have led the Republican party. They felt that a change was needed, and have, in no uncertain way, made that change.—They look to the 'opposition,' or Democratic party, for better government, and place a golden opportunity in its hands. They expect much and will not be satisfied with a little—they will watch closely and if occasion demands will not hesitate to write before the eyes of the ascendant party the ominous words, "Mene, mene tekel uphar-sin."

The result strengthens our faith in republican institutions. It shows that the populace though many-headed, is clear headed, and has an honest heart beating in its bosom, as well as the ability to assert its rights and take care of itself when need arises. It shows that the people want their government conducted with dignity and even-handed justice—that they are in search of men (may it prove a successful search!) who will keep sacred the trusts confided to them—who love virtue and revere religion,—who "would not flatter Neptune for his trident, nor Jove to thunder with his bolts," and who, when they lay down their offices and lives, can say, each for himself, in the words of grand old Samuel: "Witness against me before the Lord and before his anointed; whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or of whose hand have I received any bribe to blind my eyes therewith? and I will restore it you."

The press of communications on the subject of the 'new rule' prevents our giving the variety to our first page that we would wish to do. Several communications on the new rule, as well as letters from brethren in regard to revival-work on their charges, are crowded out this week.

Conference.

Any member of the Conference who does not expect to attend the approaching session, will confer a favor by so informing me

A. W. MANGUM.

Oxford Orphan Asylum.

We are glad to note an increase in the donations to this noble institution. We publish, elsewhere, the October list of contributions, from which it will be seen that a spirit of liberality and charity, is alive in all parts of the State, having in view the sustaining of the work that has been begun and, under so many difficulties, continued for nearly two years. Enough, however, has not been done to enable Mr. Mills, the faithful Superintendent, and his assistants, to fully meet the demands of the noble cause.

The expenses are necessarily heavy;—one hundred and thirty mouths have to be fed—bodies clothed and minds instructed, and it requires large expenditures to do these things. The sum of $1000 per month, it is estimated, is needed to operate the Asylum successfully, with the present number of beneficiaries. There are many other poor, naked, uninstructed and desolate orphans in the State who would be gladly taken under the protection of the Asylum, if, only, the support given in to it by the people were liberal and large enough to justify the extension of its benefits.

There is no cause that commends itself more strongly to the sympathies and charity of men than the care and instruction of those helpless ones whom misfortune has cast upon the world, fatherless motherless friendless, and without the pecuniary means to secure comfort, education and position. In their desolation, no one knows what heart aches and unsatisfied longings embitter their lives or how often they become the victims of neglect, abuse and cruelty. They are a trust confided to the keeping of those who have been favored by Providence with the good things of the world, and that trust should be sacredly guarded.

DAILY CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE For Conference Week.

The Conference will be of great interest, many matters of importance affecting the good of the church will be discussed and passed upon, and it is desirable that our people should be informed fully of its proceedings as they occur. We are aware that it will necessitate much expense and trouble, but believe it to be a practicable undertaking.

The Advocate will contain a conference and church directory, full reports of proceedings, condensed reports of discussions and sermons, editorial reviews and suggestions, church news, a brief synopsis of the proceedings of the General Assembly and Grand Lodge of Masonry which will be in session at the same time, together with other matters of general interest

In order to meet the expense of publication, the paper will be furnished daily during the session, postage paid, 30 cents per copy. We earnestly solicit our preachers and others to receive subscriptions and forward the names and funds at once so that our books can be arranged before the meeting of Conference. Let the preachers make the announcement at their appointments, and when they cannot give the matter their personal attention let them designate a person or persons to canvass for the paper. Any person sending us ten subscribers with the cash, will receive the Daily Advocate, free of charge.

Religious Hysteria.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage is responsible for the following, which we commend to those who would lightly speak of religious zeal and excitement of the penitent under conviction for sin:

One of the most able secular papers that comes to our table applies the above title to revivals of religion. We do not wonder that those who have never experienced religion in their own souls should mistake the extraordinary influences of spiritual awakening for a nervous fit. It must seem strange to such, beyond all explanation, and worthy only of Dover's powers and valerian. The religion of Christ is supernatural and not to be judged of by ordinary rules. One might as well deny the fact of a chemical experiment never having seen either the Professor or his laboratory, as that a man not having known Christ, should deny the power of a religion with which he is not acquainted. The only way for a man to find out whether there is anything in religion is to try it himself. We wonder not, when for the first time the truths of God roll in upon a soul, there is some excitement, but we never thought of calling it religious hysteria, any more than when a sailor claps his hands at the sight of shore, we pronounce it navigating hysteria; or when there are excitements on Wall Street we call it commercial hysteria. If this be the proper term to describe the renovation of whole communities by the Gospel, then we wish that the whole world might immediately be seized with such a paroxysm.

A letter from Shelby.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Our District has been greatly blessed this year with good revivals. Reports of many of these gracious seasons have already been given. We are having a good work just at this time in Shelby Station. Some eight or nine have made a profession of faith in Christ. The membership has been much revived. The meeting is still going on. I have received valuable assistance from Brothers North, Sharpe and Trawick.

Union Camp-meeting on Double Shoals circuit in charge of Bro. Webb, located in a beautiful grove about 8 miles North West of Shelby, was quite a success. The weather was fine, the attendance large. The P. E. was present supervising the work, though too much indisposed to preach. Bro. J. W. North, by request, preached a powerful sermon on Baptism, at 11 o'clock, Sunday. Brothers Lee, J. C. Smith, D. P. Goode, White, Trawick, May Bibb, labored efficiently in the meeting. Number of converts not known—22 joined the church.

Rock Spring camp meeting, on Cherry Mountain circuit in charge of Bro. J. C. Smith, was attended with fine results. The P. E. preached an unanswerable sermon on the mode of Baptism—13 joined the church.

Sharon camp-meeting, in a few miles of Shelby, in the bounds of Bro. North's work, closed but a few weeks ago, was a glorious meeting,—17 accessions.

Our School—the Shelby Seminary—in charge of the Rev. R. S. Trawick, is steadily growing in interest. It affords such educational facilities as should attract the attention of the surrounding country. The Principal has much experience, is apt in the art of instruction, pains taking and thorough in his method. Board is cheap, the climate remarkably healthy, and the community intelligent and moral. There is still room in the institution for several more boarders.

Shelby is growing. New houses going up. In addition to ten or more flourishing mercantile houses, Bynum of Chatham and Wm. Miller of this place, have just opened a new store. Their stock of goods is large and fine. Cotton is daily coming in and trade is lively. The Railroad will soon be finished, to this point. Town lots and farming land are rising in value. Several families have recently moved in, and more expected. We commend Shelby to all who are looking out for a new home. Here you will find churches, schools, an intelligent, enterprising, moral population—Mineral Springs sparkling with medicinal virtues, pure water and balmy, salubrious atmosphere. Here you can raise a great variety of fruits, vegetables, the cereals, cotton almost as well as in any other part of the State, and enjoy mountain health and vivacity while you are doing it

A Tribute

MESSRS EDITORS: I have just received your excellent paper, under the new regime. Bro. Gray, I see, is again Associate Editor, for which I am glad. Not because I think the Senior Editor did not do his duty, but because I know how burdensome the duties of an Editor are. One man to write, clip, read proof, keep books, pay out money, (taking it in is no trouble,) walk around, superintend, smile and frown as circumstances may demand, pray and be good, with Shylocks crying all around: "Give me my pound of beef"—who is sufficient for all this? A form sometimes turns to bitter pie, the types stand on their heads and play strange music with their feet while the tired man-of-all-work sits, with the headache, in his chair and fails to sleep over a left-handed benediction pronounced by a correspondent who is "swearing terribly in Flanders."

The first time I saw Bro. Gray was under circumstances to try one's soul, and I liked him. May the shadow of his granite column never grow less!

What a thing a newspaper is? An Arithmetic, Geography, Speller; a book on Elocution; an Instructor in science, art, morals, and often in religion. When the writer of this was a little boy his father made him sit by his side and read the newspaper aloud: and whatever of ability as a reader he may possess is largely attributable to that fact.

I said good morals and religion. I repeat it, and it is a remarkable truth. Look over the immense number of newspapers in the United States, and how few of their Editors are infidels! Such is the power, even of the reflected light of the gospel, that whatever act is committed, in high places or low, striking at virtue and religion, receives at once the concentrated fire of these batteries from the ramparts of good morals. Take the newspaper from this land, and what would be government, society, manly integrity, female virtue, and life itself? What a warning it sounds to the reckless and wicked; what encouragement to the erring and penitent; what an instructor and guide to the ignorant; and what a lash it holds over the rake and villain! Who, with a heart, would be without it for the paltry sum charged for it? And a religious newspaper—one's own church paper—in the family, around the fireside, is absolutely indispensable. In this age of revolution, science, art, literature, investigation, and infidelity, it is almost next to bread.

Yours truly,

E. A. YATES.

Lexington, N C.

MESSRS EDITORS: I am home again after an absence from my family of about five weeks—a long time for me! yea, for any man who loves home and family as I do; but such unpleasant evils must be endured, or the interest of the church be neglected, on those circuits which have no parsonages. Every pastoral charge ought to have a preacher's home on it. Are preachers and people both to blame in this matter? Perhaps so. Let all reform.

I have labored pretty much day and night since the first of last August. The result has been, a general revival over the circuit, with over one hundred conversions: consequently the spiritual state of the charge is very fine. Generally in such cases the finances come up all right; there are exceptions however to all general rules, so I can't tell yet how it will turn out with us in this respect.

ON THE NEW RULE,

I've not had time to write; my time has been taken up in pulpit and dollar—scarcely had leisure to read Bro. Haddon's long numerous articles. Don't he pitch in generally and scatter broadcast! Wish I could return the compliment and truthfully say of his reasoning what he says of my praying, that it was well done. Will the brother hazard his reputation for accuracy by denying that every word of the old Rule is Mr. Wesley's own words? Who said it was all Mr. Wesley ever said on that subject? I didn't. He assumes that I did, and then imagine me upon the platform of his own making and mounts it himself and pitches in to measuring lances. I'll measure with you when the final vote is counted. If yours then be the longest I'll yield gracefully. No, Bro, you try to place Mr. Wesley where he never placed himself. He never prescribed the Rule you contend for; he had too much "wisdom and piety" for that. There's no need for the change, better let "well enough alone." I shall say so very emphatically by my vote, if I live to get to Raleigh.

R. G. BARRETT.

Historical Society N. C. Conference, M. E. Church South.

TO THE FRIENDS OF N. C. METHODISM, EVERYWHERE:—Dear Brethren: At the last session of the N. C. Conference, in 1873, the above society was organized, for the purpose of collecting material for "The History of Methodism in N. C." which it designs publishing as soon as the necessary data can be obtained.

The friends of N. C. Methodism everywhere, are now earnestly invited to assist the society in collecting such materials as will enable it to place N. C. in her true position in Methodist history; which I believe they will be proud and happy to do.

As Corresponding Secretary, I have been as actively engaged, since our last session, in efforts to promote the success of this noble enterprise, as my limited time and facilities would admit. I have corresponded extensively with ministers and laymen, in our own and several other States. I have communicated with every minister, now living, who belonged to the N. C. Conference at its organization. From several parties I have received prompt and encouraging responses, in the way of valuable facts, promised assistance, and references to important sources of information. But from many others I have heard nothing yet. I sincerely hope, however, to receive cheering responses from them all before the annual meeting of the Society in Raleigh, Dec. next.

It is very desirable that all our friends who have promised us MSS. or books (and all others who can thus assist us,) should carry or send them by the preachers or delegates to Conference, if possible.

To the friends of N. C Methodism, everywhere, (with whom I have not yet been able to correspond,) I now earnestly appeal for any information bearing upon its history which may be in their possession: both in the way of their own personal recollections, and of others, to which they may have access; accounts of the introduction of Methodism into their own or other communities; sketches of persons and incidents of interest, and of great revivals, on the various charges where they have lived or labored; and any MSS. or books which may be of assistence in the enterprise.

Friends, one and all, please respond promptly, and greatly oblige the Society, and

Yours very truly,

A. R. RAVEN, Cor. Sec'y.

Revival Intelligence

Rev. J. A. Cunninggim writes from Greensboro' under date of Nov. 2nd, as follows: "I closed a series of meetings last night, which have been very profitable to our congregation. About twenty conversions and thirteen accessions to the church."

Rev. I. W. Avent, sending us a cheering list of subscribers, writes as follows: "Our Quarterly Meeting was a success. Bro. Black, our P. E., was with us and preached with his usual acceptability. Thirteen were added to the church and the membership was greatly blessed. All glory to God!"

Rev. R. A. Willis writes: We have been enjoying times of refreshing on the Wayne circuit. Every church has been visited with a gracious revival of religion and about 120 have been added to the church. We are indebted to Rev. J. N. Andrews, Rev. A. J. Finlayson and Rev J. E. Mann for valuable assistance. Bro. Mann was with us nearly three weeks and preached with great power and success.

Bro. W. R. Webb writes from Roxboro', N. C., under date of Oct. 30th, as follows:

We have had a good revival at all our appointments on the Flat River circuit this year. One hundred and twenty have professed religion and 65 have joined our church, and others will join soon. The church has been greatly blessed at their revivals, and I think the spiritual condition of the church in this circuit is good. We were greatly assisted at some of our meetings by brother Henry Gray.—This is my first year as a circuit preacher, and I thank God for the success that I have had. We have had a pleasant year with the dear people of this charge.

Rev. N. G. Whittington writes under date of Oct. 23rd:

Please say through the Advocate that the Lord is still blessing the people of Alexander circuit with his cheering presence. I held a meeting at Mt. Pisgah which protracted itself. We had services on Saturday night and Sunday, and such was the interest, the meeting was continued until Wednesday night, resulting in eleven conversions and five accessions to the church, with a glorious revival in the membership. We closed our fourth quarterly camp meeting for the circuit at Liberty the 21st, which resulted in nine conversions and five accessions to the church. Our P. E., M. L. Wood, was with us all the time, preached with his usual zeal and energy. He is enjoying fine health. Bro. Wood has endeared himself to the people of Alexander circuit—Yea, has written his name indelibly in the hearts of this people. They are sorry that this is his last year on the Salisbury District, for the present, as P. E. We feel confident our camp meeting was a good one. The Liberty people are an open hearted, generous and kind community.

Rev. C. M. Anderson writes: A few days before the week of prayer I commenced a meeting at this place. Bro. W. S. Black preached for us a few days with his usual zeal and power. Then brother Yates came, who is known and much beloved in this community. We regretted very much when he was compelled to leave us.—Brother J. N. Andrews spent several days with us and preached some of his best sermons. If he can do any better it would be good sure. All together we held on for about three weeks, and a very fine impression was made. Five were added to the church. A short time after this, I protracted a meeting at Center, S. H., which resulted in the accession of two members.

A few weeks ago I protracted at Charity Chapel and received six members, and the church was very much revived.

Yesterday evening I returned home from Wesley Chapel, where we have been holding on for a week. There was a very deep interest manifested by the whole community, and the Lord was with us graciously. We had a love feast yesterday morning. It was a good time. In the afternoon I baptized, at the altar, nine young men and ladies, who took upon themselves the vows of the church. It was a lovely scene. May the Lord keep them "by the power of God" through faith unto the day of their final redemption. There are several older persons whom we expect to join before long.

I have been in quite feeble health for three months, but am now considerably improved.

Rev. J. Sandford writes concerning Lilesville circuit:

This work was organized last year, and embraces that portion of the old Wadesboro circuit lying along the Pee Dee. Cut off from some of the strongest men, financially, of the original charge, the membership, a little over 200, composed largely of females, proposed to constitute a ct., and support a preacher. This division left them poor in church property, and without a local preacher or exhorter. My P. E. having been providentially hindered from being with me, once excepted, I have been almost "Monarch of all I survey." This isolated supremacy, however, is not desirable under favorable circumstances, and with a newly organized kingdom on my hands, and depressed under the heaviest family affliction of my life, I would with pleasure, have abdicated my throne, for a time at least, in favor either of superiors or subordinates.

At a few of my appointments, brothers Guinn, of Wadesboro ct., and Brent, of Wadesboro st., kindly assisted me by their efficient labors.—Both good men and true, who preached like men who have not mistaken their calling. We had a good time at all points, and the church is generally revived. At Shiloh and Shady Grove, especially, the scenes were gloriously "old-fashioned" for this fastidious age. These two churches have received about 60 accessions; the larger portion hopefully converted. An intelligent man said of those who have joined the church at these points: "They are the 'flowers' of Anson, and I humbly hope they may be consistent, and by a beautifully religious life adorn the church of God, and the community in which they live."

In all, about 80 have joined the church.

The Laws of Moses.

MRS H. B. STOWE, in the Christian Union writes thus concerning the laws of Moses:

The strongest impulse in the character of Moses appears to have been that of protective justice, more particularly with regard to the helpless and down trodden classes. The laws of Moses, if carefully examined, are a perfect phenomenon; an exception to the laws of either ancient or modern nations in the care they exercised over women, widows, orphans, paupers, foreigners, servants and dumb animals. No so-called Christian nation but could advantageously take a lesson in legislation from the laws of Moses. There is a plaintive, pathetic spirit of compassion in the very language in which the laws in favor of the helpless and suffering are expressed, that it seems must have been learned only of superhuman tenderness. Not the gentlest words of Jesus are more compassionate in their spirit than many of these laws of Moses. Delivered in the name of Jehovah, they certainly are so unlike the wisdom of that barbarous age as to justify the ascription of them to him who is Love

DR. CHALMERS.—Rev. Newman Hall tells in the Independent a good anecdote of some Edinburgh preacher who, knowing that Dr. Chalmers was to be one of his hearers on the next Sabbath, took special pains in composing his discourse and committing it to memory. Alas! owing to the excitement produced by the presence of the great man, the preacher stopped short in the middle of his discourse, and was some little time before he could pick up the lost thread. Dr. Chalmers came into the vestry to thank him for his sermon, adding: "Cultivate the pause, sir! Cultivate the pause!" The preacher felt additional chagrin at what he thought irony. Some time after, he met the Doctor in the street, who said: "Sir, I have been thinking very much of the great effect produced by your pause, the other day. Cultivate the pause, sir! Cultivate the pause!" Dr. Chalmers had supposed it to have been premeditated.

CAMP MEETING AT MOUNT PLEASANT, BURKE CO.—The camp meeting at the above place commenced on the 23rd inst., and continued till Tuesday the 27th. A large number of persons were converted and added to the church. A great interest was manifested and much and lasting good was done in the advancement of the cause of religion. Bishop Doggett was in attendance on Sunday and Monday of the meeting preached on both days. His sermons were very eloquent.—Peicdmont Press

Died in this city on Sunday, the 8th inst. Mrs. Maria Mason Harper, an aged and excellent member of our church.

The Recent Elections

On Tuesday, 3rd inst., the elections were held in twenty-three States, resulting in a sweeping victory for the Democrats. Massachusetts, even, the birth place and stronghold of the Republican party, elected a Democratic Governor by a majority of seven thousand and sends three Democrats and one independent to Congress. The following are some of the dispatches of last Thursday, bearing upon the election:

Alabama—Six to ten thousand majority for the Democratic State ticket; certainly five, possibly seven Democratic Congressmen and a Democratic Legislature.

Arkansas—Clean Democratic delegation to Congress

Florida—Full Republican Congressional delegation.

Georgia—Clean Democratic Congressional delegation.

Illinois—Indications of the election of the Republican ticket by a decreased majority. Previous dispatches regarding the Congressional delegation are confirmed. Doubtful districts still doubtful. The count by Congressional districts give the Democrats from twelve to fifteen majority on the popular vote.

Kansas—The Republican State ticket has five thousand majority against thirty-two thousand two years ago.

Kentucky—A clean Congressional Democratic delegation.

Maryland—A clean Congressional Democratic delegation.

Massachusetts Democrats carry the Governor by seven thousand majority. The Republicans elect the balance of the State ticket. She sends three Democrats and one Independent to Congress. The Legislature is strongly anti-prohibition.

Michigan—The Democrats have a large representation, possibly a majority on joint ballot. The Congressional delegation will probably stand five Republicans and four Democrats. Both parties claim the Governor.

Minnesota—The returns from remote parts is more favorable to the Republicans.

Missouri—The ticket is very long.

Nevada—Bradley, Democrat, has been re-elected Governor. Sharan, Republican, will probably come to the Senate on account of State Senators holding over.

New Jersey—The Democrats have 11 majority on joint ballot, securing a Senator. Congressional delegation, five Democrats, two Republicans.

Pennsylvania—The Democrats have a majority of one on joint ballot, securing a Senator. Congressional delegation, Democrats 16, Republicans 11.

South Carolina.—The Governorship is doubtful. The Mackey fusion and Smalls, colored, are elected to Congress.

Virginia—There is a full Conservative and Democratic delegation, except Stowell in the fourth district.

Wisconsin—The Republicans have a joint ballot, which may give us Carpenter again. The Democrats have two and claim another Congressman. Republican majority in the State 6,000.

Delaware—The Republicans have only one State Senator who holds over.

WASHINGTON, November 5th.—The Democratic majority in the House will be fifty-four.

NEW YORK, November 5.—A special to the TRIBUNE, from New Orleans, says that the evidence accumulates of the deliberate purpose of the Kellogg party to count in their candidates by means of the returning Board. This discovery has created great excitement, and if the plan is carried out, disturbances are feared.

Mr. Wm. Sprague, of Caldwell county, has discovered on his farm what is thought to be a Meerschaum mine, and has sent a specimen of it to Baltimore for examination. It is generally thought that Meerschaum is formed from a deposit of sea foam, but it is said by Prof. Ives and others (says the PIEDMONT PRESS) it may be simply the earthy carbonate of Magnesia.

Protection by Prayer.

A little girl, about five years old, lived with her parents, who were very poor, in a small cottage in a village of Prussia. One day, when her father was out, little Rosa was sitting by her mother, who was just recovering from an attack of fever, which had weakened her very much. She was singing a little hymn, when the door opened suddenly, and six soldiers walked into the room. The poor child was so terrified at first that she fell from the bench on which she had been sitting. A few moments afterward, however, she rose to her knees, and in her own simple, childlike words, while the big tears trembled in her eyes, she prayed that God would pity them and help them; that she would make the soldiers kind to her mother, and tell them to go away to some other house where they might get something to eat and drink, and ending with these words, "For thou knowest, Lord, that we are very poor."

One of the soldiers patted the child's head kindly, and said, "Who taught you to pray so nicely, little one?"

"Jesus and mother," was her simple reply.

The soldier, a tall, strong, rough-looking man, turned aside his head, and brushed a tear from his cheek, then, putting a piece of money in her lap, he kissed the little girl, and said to her kindly, "There is something for your mother, my child. Pray for us soldiers also sometimes, like a good little girl, for we need prayer very much."

A few moments later Rosa, who had rushed to close the door after the soldiers, was clasped in her mother's arms. And how gladly that mother thanked the Lord, who had so kindly protected them from harm and danger, in answer to the prayer of her dear child.

Silent Prayer.

MRS. M. E. KINSLEY.

Luther says, "When thou prayest, let thy words be few and thy thoughts many." God hears the voice of the heart, and not the voice of the lips. The voice of the lips wanders aimlessly through space, and brings no answer. The voice of the heart echoes through the corridors of heaven, and reaches the delighted ear of the Father, bringing swift response. Do you know by experience, dear reader, what it is to spend an hour of exquisite pleasure in the attitude of prayer—speechless? If not, try it. Let your thoughts roam over the whole extent of your life, as a bee wanders over a garden of fragrant flowers. Alight here and there upon some special joy which threw beams of radiant sunshine on your days: some providential interpositon which has saved you years, perhaps, of untold misery: some marvellous conjunction of events, resulting in benefits temporal or spiritual. Surely your soul will arise on wings of gratitude, as the bee from the flower, laden with an unutterable sense of omnipotent tenderness and mercy, and ere the lips can frame a sound, the voice of the heart, with its burden of praise, will be far on its way to the celestial city. Try it, if the chastening hand of the Father is upon you. Do not seek for words. Prostrate yourself, soul and body, speechless. Breathe one sigh of helplessness and resignation to God's will. At once your risen Lord feels that you have touched the hem of His garment, Sweet peace, perfect rest, falls upon your soul like Hermon's dew. The great Reformer adds, "Above all, let your thoughts be profound." Dive deep into the hidden recesses of your heart. Search out its secret and most cherished sins. Throw it open wide, wide. No matter how it mortifies your pride. Throw it open wide to the eye of God: then, speechless as to the lips, let the voice of the heart go up, "Lord, be merciful to me a sinner." The sense of pardon will be the speedy answer. One sweet experience of the efficacy of fervent, searching, speechless prayer will show that Luther spoke from the depths of his own spiritual knowledge when he said, "The less thou speakest, the better thou prayest."

SPECIAL NOTICES.

INDISPUTABLE EVIDENCE.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:—I wish to add my testimony to the Wonderful curative properties of your Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery I have taken great interest in this medicine since I first used it. I was badly afflicted with dyspepsia, liver deranged and an almost perfect prostration of the nervous system. So rapid and complete did the Discovery effect a perfect cure that it seemed more like magic and a perfect wonder to myself, and since that time we have never been without a bottle of the Discovery and Purgative Pellets in the house. They are a solid, sound family physician in the house and ready at all times to fly to the relief of sickness—without charge. We have never had a doctor in the house since we first began the use of your Pellets and Discovery I have recommended the use of these medicines in several severe and complicated cases arising from, as I thought, an impure state of the blood, and in no one case have they failed to more than accomplish all they are claimed to do. I will only mention one as remarkable, (though I could give you dozens). Henry Koster, furniture dealer, of this place, who was one of the most pitiful objects ever seen, his face swollen out of shape, scales and eruptions without end extending to his body, which was completely covered with blotches and scales. Nothing that he took seemed to effect it a particle. I finally induced him to try a few bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery, with daily use of the Pellets, assuring him it would surely cure him. He commenced its use some six weeks since, taking two Pellets each night for a week, then one each night, and the Discovery as directed. The result is, to-day his skin is perfectly smooth, and the scaly eruptions are gone He has taken some seven or eight bottles in all, and considers himself cured. This case had baffled the skill of our best physicians. Messrs. Dunsford & Co., druggists, of the place, are selling largely of your medicines and the demand steadily increases, and they give perfect satisfaction in every case.

Respectfully, W. H. CHAMPLIN, Agt. Am. Exp. Co.

The Season of Intermittents.

All miasmatic complaints, in other words, all disorders occasioned by unwholesome exhalations from the earth or water, are prevalent at this season. In every section subject to the visitation of fever and ague or other forms of intermittent disease, the cause which produces these maladies are now actively at work. Therefore, is a period of the year when the inhabitants of such districts should prepare their systems to meet them with sufficient condition of the atmosphere, by a course of tonic and alterative treatment. Foremost among the invigorants, recommended by time and experience, as a means of fortifying the system against all endemic and epidemic maladies, stands Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Whoever has traveled in the West or South knows full well the extent to which this incomparable preventive and restorative is held throughout those regions. Its literally acknowledged staple in the swampy and malarious localities which lie on the borders of many of our large rivers and in the neighborhood of our southern bayous and lagoons. Now is the time when the inhabitants of malarious districts should put their system and constitutions in good defensive trim by a course of this powerful vegetable antidote. By this means the dreaded residue of an unhealthy autumnal atmosphere is rendered powerless, which without the aid of this potent invigorant, will be apt to overwhelm the strongest. Chills and fever, bilious remittents, constipations, rheumatism, dyspepsia and many other complaints are frequently brought on by the caprices of temperature and conditions of dry cold and excessive moisture common in our climate at the commencement of spring. Let all who desire to avoid these distressing ailments take the Bitters as a safeguard.

Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint.

It is but little more than a quarter of a century since the art of mixing paint was confined almost exclusively to a few comparatively speaking. Now, however, through the ingenuity of Bradley, we are not only enabled to apply the paint if we desire, but can see the shades in advance, sample cards being furnished gratis, with the different shades or tints, painted. Those who have used the "Enamel Paint," speak from experience, that it is all that is claimed for it, and also fully supercede the "old style paint." As an evidence of the great worth of the Enamel Paint, we must respectfully request all our readers to carefully read the excellent testimonials of Mr. C. P. Knight, in this paper.

DR. C. M'LANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS,

Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

Address all orders to

FLEMING BROS., PITTSBURGH, PA.

P. S. Dealers and Physicians ordering from others than Fleming Bros., will do well to write their orders distinctly, and take none but Dr. C. M'Lane's, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. To those wishing to give them a trial, we will forward per mail, post-paid, to any part of the United States, one box of Pills for twelve three-cent postage stamps, or one vial of Vermifuge for fourteen three-cent stamps. All orders from Canada must be accompanied by twenty cents extra.

Sold by all respectable Druggists and Country Storekeepers generally.

Dr. C. M'Lane's Vermifuge

Should be kept in every nursery. If you would have your children grow up to be HEALTHY, STRONG, and VIGOROUS MEN and WOMEN, give them a few doses of

M'LANE'S VERMIFUGE,

TO EXPEL THE WORMS.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

CARRAN'S SELTZER APERIENT

Reject All Violent Purgatives. They ruin the tone of the bowels, and weaken the digestion.

Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient is used by rational people as a means of relieving all derangements of the stomach, liver and intestines, because it removes obstructions without pain, and imparts vigor to the organs which it purifies and regulates. Sold by all druggists.

H. T Hudson L.

Rev. L. Lorenzo: My good Bro. H. seems the very thing I requested me not to do, and left me the opposing I begged him to do. He has given us a good article on the evil of intemperance resulting from the abundant supply of alcohol furnished by the art of distilling, but has not touched but one of my own Articles. There are but six lines in the whole piece which would in any one to suspect that he intended it as a reply to what I had Does "L" suppose that our Heavenly Father smiles upon a system of colossal iniquity —distillation. Ans. When the making of alcoholic liquors is carried on in such a way as to become a commonly known in this country, as it is now, a thousand times—and I think it strange that my brother should ask me such a question. He and others seem to be unable to distinguish between making alcoholic liquors for legitimate purposes, and the temperate use of wine as a beverage is legitimate, practised by Mr. Wesley and Jesus of Nazareth) and the making of it for illegitimate purposes, for general traffic.

There is a vast difference between running a distillery as it is almost always done in this country, and making wine for scriptural uses. But to the new rule, with the interpretation which its advocates put on it, bears upon both with equal stringency. The Bible, by fair, logical inference, condemns the one, allows, approves the other. No man who engages in the one can be a christian, for he not only does not 'do good unto all men' as opportunity offers, first 'to their bodies,' secondly 'to their souls;' but for the sake of filthy lucre he is the willful promoter of untold evils—the 'occasion of offence' to thousands.—But thousands of the best men the world ever saw have made and used alcoholic liquors as a beverage, but they have done it lawfully. The thing which I oppose is not the spirit of reformation—but the spirit of fanaticism, 'higher law,' a rule which will not help, but hinder, the holy cause which it aims to promote. Let no man accuse me. 'Are they temperate? I know—then some of them. We never make, buy nor sell alcoholic liquors as a beverage in our family. We use no tobacco, no opium, as a beverage.—Don't laugh! for if drinking whiskey 'for the love of it' means using it as a beverage, as per Dr. Wilson, then chewing tobacco 'for the love of it' means using it as a beverage!

I say, then, I oppose the new rule, not because I wish to indulge my fleshly appetite, but because it is a higher law—the child of Fanaticism. It is a new and false plank which an intemperate zeal is attempting to stick into the platform of church membership. It contradicts our Article of Religion, in that it requires us to believe something (total abstinence) to be 'requisite or necessary to salvation,' which something 'is not read' in the 'Holy Scriptures' nor may be 'proved thereby.'

I oppose it because it is a 'new departure' from Wesleyan Methodism, Bro. H. and others to the contrary notwithstanding. Bro. H. claims Mr. Wesley for his side of this question.—And so does Dr. Burkhead. The Dr. says: 'Mr. Wesley's head was level on this question.' We say so too. If the heads of the supporters of the new rule were only as level as Mr. Wesley's, they would not be compassing land and sea to proselyte a general rule from its place in the constitution of a 'Band Society,' and give it all the authority and majesty of church law. This was the mistake our fathers made in 1784. Mr. Wesley never included wine or beer in the phrase 'spirituous liquors' as has been shown. He knew he had no authority to promulgate such a rule as a law of the church. When our fathers severed their connection with the church of England and organized their Societies into the M. E. Church, they adopted the rule as a church law, their heads were not 'level.' In five years they saw they had erred in adopting a rule which was legitimate in the government of 'Band Societies,' but without authority as a law of the church.—Hence in 1789 they changed the rule. In twelve months they concluded that their heads had not been 'level,' and so they changed it again into what it now is. Eighty four years after, one hundred and thirty five members of the General Conference said by their vote that the heads of our fathers were a little too low.

Now, Mr. Editor, I am going to say what many have thought, but so far as I know, no one has dared to say. It was a mistake and a misfortune that the church ever adopted the General Rules, especially the one now in question!!! Read it? Do you keep them? Speak out. Do you try to keep them? Do you know anybody that does keep them?

Spurgeon says he smokes to the glory of God. Maybe the preacher who chews, and before the pulpit from the book-board down to the floor, thinks he chews to the glory of God. The head of the church will never be level until it does one of three things. It must enforce its rules—this it never has done in our day, and never will, —or strike out those which nobody tries to keep; or remove the obligation which binds the preacher to endure the shame of reading these rules in every congregation. I protest that the reading of these rules in our congregations is a solemn farce. Picture to yourself a minister standing up in the pulpit clothed from head to foot in as fine material as the markets afford, gold studs and shirt buttons, a heavy gold watch and chain, fine cigar in his mouth, a plug of the best tobacco in his pocket, a gold-headed cane in one hand and the Book of Discipline in the other, reading the General Rules to a city congregation weighed down with furs and feathers, frills and furbelows, finger rings and ear-tags, &c., &c.! Could anything be more ridiculous? Now it is hoped there is no one preacher in whom all these circumstances meet. But who is so blind as not to see that the M. E. Church in its aggregate presents such a scene as this in every particular? I oppose the new rule because it can never do any more good than the old one has done, and the old one never was worth its room in the Book. I oppose the new rule because if it be adopted, it will be done upon the false ground that there is no authority outside of this rule by which a member can be expelled for dealing in intoxicating liquors. A will make any amount of whiskey and sell it to his neighbors to make bitters, camphor, vinegar, pickle, to rub his ankle for rheumatism, to put on old Charlie's sore back, and for forty other innocent purposes. Under the new rule you must prove that he sells it as a beverage. But he can prove by forty witnesses that he sells it for other purposes. Everybody knows he is engaged in an unlawful traffic—that he is 'doing harm.' You may wish to change your base, and try him for doing harm. But your 'shrewd lawyer' will hold you to the rule. He will remind you of your arguments to show that there was nothing in your law to reach liquor dealers, and that you insisted upon the adoption of the new rule for that very reason. I oppose the new rule because we do not need it—can do better without it. We do not rely upon the general rule for our authority to deal with church members. The Bible is our authority.

When a member is indicted we inquire first, Is the crime with which he is charged 'expressly forbidden in the word of God.' If it is, our course is plain. If it is not, our next inquiry is, Is the conduct of the accused sinful—can it be proved to be sinful by a fair interpretation of the Scriptures? If it can, our course is prescribed. See Book of Discipline page 142. Now it is certain that making, buying, selling and using intoxicating liquor (wine) is not only not 'expressly forbidden in the word of God,' but approved, provided it be done in a lawful way—so as to do no harm. It is also certain that the making and dealing in ardent spirits, as it is commonly done among us, is 'doing harm'—is sinful—and comes properly under the head of Improprieties and Imprudences, of which, if a member is not 'cured' by the prescribed treatment, he should be 'cut off.' See Manual, page 88.—And what is strange to me is, that men of brains cannot see, or wilfully refuse to recognize, the distinction between doing a thing lawfully and doing it unlawfully—between using intoxicating liquor as it was used by Christ and his servants, Wesley and Fletcher, and as it was used by the devotees of Bacchus. The objection to the new rule is, that it bears as hard upon him who uses wine lawfully as upon him who uses it unlawfully.

This is what many seem unable to see. Bro. H. seems to be unable to understand me as saying anything else than that making intoxicating liquor is never sinful—never done in a harmful way - when in fact I am thoroughly satisfied that every business which in its legitimate tendency promotes crime is sinful and ought to be prohibited not only by church law, but also by the civil law. What I hold is, that there is a way to make and use intoxicating liquor lawfully, innocently, profitably. The law of God does not forbid making or using it in this way, but the new rule does. It is therefore a 'higher law.' If making and using intoxicating liquor is always sinful, then our Lord was guilty of sinful conduct. This fact bears so hard against the advocates of the new rule that some have attempted to show that the good wine of the Bible was not an intoxicating liquor. To do this, some have wrested the Scriptures, and ignorantly or otherwise, have made an unfair use of great names to support their false theory.—So much so that my good friend, Miles O. Sherrill, has been carried away with this dissimulation.

J. W. Harmon, the wildest of all, says that the Tah zin was 'the poison of asps.' This is what Noah drank. Gesenius who has been quoted to prove that the good wine was unfermented, says this noun, Tah-zin, is from a root signifying to boil up—ferment.

The Jews were required by law to give tithes of the best of the wine (Tirosh.) This of course was what the priest used in the daily sacrifice. But the wine used in the sacrifice was 'strong wine' - shechar. This is a word used to 'signify any kind of fermented liquor' see Clarke on Lev. 10: 9., also Num. 28:7. Thus we see the best wine (Ti rosh) was (shechar) an intoxicating liquor. The Nazarite was prohibited the use of wine (Tah-zin) and strong drink (shechar) John the Baptist was a Nazarite. It was said of him, 'wine (oinos) and strong drink (sikera) he shall not drink.' The Greek, oinos corresponds to the Hebrew, Tah-zin; and the Greek, sikera, to the Hebrew, shechar. Luke 1:15. Some have tried to clear our Lord o' the dreadful crime of using wine as a beverage by saying that the Jews persecuted him with false charges! So far as being a 'wine-bibber' goes, the charge was false. But the fact that he was not a drunkard does not prove that he did not drink wine. He said: 'John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine.' The son of man is come eating and drinking.' Eating what? Locusts? No, but bread, like other men. Drinking what? Coffee? No, but wine and strong drink, like other men They are horrified at the idea that our Lord made intoxicating liquor at Cana. But it is certain our fathers of the early church, and the ables divines and profoundest scholars of modern times, teach that the good wine in common use in his day was alcoholic. We have already seen that the best wine (Ti-rosh) was an intoxicating drink. The Governor of the feast declared that made by our Lord to be 'good.' That the wine which the Governor judged to be good, would make men drunk, is certain from the fact that the common custom was to drink the good until the guests got enough (methusthosi have become intoxicated. The vulgate reads inebriati fuerint,) then the 'small wine,' or that which was worse. The reason for this course seems plain. As soon as the ruler of the feast saw that the guests had as much as they could well bear, he ordered the good wine to be withheld, and the 'small wine' to be brought out. Few would care to drink this after drinking the good, and if any should, the amount of alcohol in this was so small it would do but little damage. But on this occasion, there was nobody drunk, nor likely to be.—First, because the party giving the feast was probably poor and not able to furnish a large quantity. Secondly, the small supply was of an inferior quality and not very apt to be used largely. Thirdly, it was already exhausted. Fourthly, our Lord knew just how much was needed. Fifthly, that was probably a select, pious, sober party, none of whom would have drunk to excess no matter what quantity might have been furnished.

All that has been said about boiling grape juice down to a syrup thick enough to be scraped out of vessels with a long-handled scoop, is simply ridiculous. I had always supposed that wine was something to drink. We eat honey. Does anybody suppose that this grape syrup was what our Lord used in the last supper? If he does, he is welcome to his opinion. See Summers on the Ritual, page 25, 111. Would anybody think of prescribing a little sorghum for one's oft infirmities? that a bishop should not be given to molasses? or a deacon to much grape juice boiled down to the consistency of honey? If so, then I suppose he thinks that the best wine means the thickest syrup; and that the danger to the deacon was, not that he might get drunk, but that he might get sick from eating 'much wine!'

See Smith's Bible Dictionary, Brown's Bible Dictionary, Watson's Theological Dictionary, New American Cyclopedia, on the article wine. And if you can find any Dictionary, Dispensatory or Word-definer in any living language that defines wine to be 'the unfermented juice of the grape,' let us hear from you. P. S. The sin of wasting time, labor and money in the production of spirits for general use, is equal to the sin of producing tobacco and opium for general use. L.

The History and Mystery of Distilling Whiskey.

On no subject, except that of "slavery," has the voice of Methodism been more frequently and profoundly uttered, than it has been against drunkenness and drinking spirituous liquors. "Mr. Wesley was considered the father of the societies both in Europe and America." His minutes, containing the General Rules, were adopted by the first societies in America. In these minutes there is not a word said of slavery or distillation of spirituous liquors. Distilling is first mentioned at the Conference held in Baltimore in 1780. It was then resolved "to disown our friends who will not renounce the practice" of distilling grain into liquor. At the same time the question of slavery is disposed of. Traveling preachers were required to liberate their slaves; and holding of slaves by our friends disapproved. From these facts it is clearly inferred that, up to 1780 "the rules" did not forbid holding slaves by our members; or distilling grain into liquor. After that time it was no offence to distill into liquor any thing else but grain.

Prior to 1784, Methodism in America was not organized. There were several distinct annual conferences, meeting at different places and at different times; each making rules and regulations in subordination to Mr. Wesley's minutes.

Necessarily there was conflicting legislation. What was forbidden in one conference had been and still was allowed in another. Methodists held slaves and distilled spirituous liquors, in the bounds of each annual conference, without offence; except distilling out of grain in the Baltimore Conference. This state of the "Temperance Question," if it may be called so, continued during the war which separated the American Society from the direction of Mr. Wesley, and placed them under the immediate superintendence of Mr. Asbury. In 1784 the M. E. Church was organized. Buying or selling bodies and souls &c. was expressly forbidden; "Drunkenness, buying or selling spirituous liquors or drinking them" was also specified under the first General Rule as doing evil. The rules on slavery were short-lived, ending only in a declared abhorrence of it. The temperance rule was almost totally inoperative as to making, buying or selling spirituous liquors, which had been so long allowed. But such was the opposition of the spirit of Methodism to drunkenness, and drinking spirituous liquors, that many who made them, or bought and sold them, never drank a dram. They were found in the "Classes" and in the Band meetings as well as in their stores; no one could persuade them that it was harmful to make them; while it was sinful to get drunk, or to drink spirituous liquors. This condition of things remained unchanged until 1789 or 1790. By what authority the rule was changed is a mystery. Clouds and darkness still rest upon it. It is still a matter of conjecture. Any one who has properly studied the subject, in connection with the condition of things then existing, may form a very satisfactory answer to the question. "Why was the rule changed?" For the same causes that legislation on the sin of slavery proved abortive.

In 1812 the first delegated General Conference met under the constitution, with its limitations. Our present rule on "Temperance" was, like all the general rules, placed under restrictions, and could not be altered or changed without the unanimous vote of the annual conferences. It so remained until 1832, when by consent, the bonds were loosened as they are now found to be in the Church North and the Church South.

In 1845, at Louisville Kentucky, the Methodist Episcopal Church "South" was organized to suit the altered condition of things, under the plan of separation mutually, peaceably, honestly, and in good faith adopted by the M. E. Church representing the two integrant parts. Our little book called Discipline clearly defines the boundaries under the name and title of the M. E. Church, South, to limit its jurisdiction, and distinguish it from the M. E. Church (North.) Whoever wishes information on any point connected with its constitution and laws;—its rules and regulations need go no further. Every member of the church from the highest officer to the lowest member may there learn what it is expected he shall avoid, and what he is required to do. Outside of that book nothing is obligatory on him; every thing relating to him in the book is imperative. He can not be too deeply concerned to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" its wise and salutary provisions. Passing by every thing else at present let him carefully read the fourth section, immediately after the Articles of Religion. He will therein learn having on one only condition acquired rights, what is expected of him to maintain these rights. It is expected of him to continue to evidence his desire of salvation, which he had expressed when first admitted,—namely "By doing no harm"—by avoiding evil of every kind; especially such as is most generally practiced; such as drunkenness; or drinking spirituous liquors. This specification so far from taking these two modes from under the General Rules, stamps them, marks and labels them as evil, and all such as they are, which are most generally practiced, such as buying and selling spirituous liquors, unless in cases of necessity. The case of necessity being expressed as inoffensive, leaves all other evils expressed or implied still under the rule as evil. The specification takes away the judgment of the administration as to the quality of the three cases, Drunkenness, Drinking spirituous liquors, and Drinking them in cases of necessity. The rule makes the first and second evil, the third harmless. A novice can read the label, but neither judge nor jury can alter their character. They ascertain the facts in the cases, and deal with them as the law directs; having no discretion but to estimate the degree of guilt and the measure of punishment. If you add to the "specification" "making," the case is at once complicated. The M. E. Church, South, then, decides emphatically that the maker of any article which may be harmless in itself, and in its use valuable and necessary in a variety of ways, and yet is liable to be abused in but one conceivable way, is as guilty as he who abuses it, because the maker knows it is liable to that abuse. If the church so judges other "specifications" might with propriety be added to our rules with those that already exist; but following the judgment and wisdom of Mr. Wesley they who organized the M. E. Church, South, avoided such complications with the general rules and wisely left the maker of things harmless in themselves, useful and necessary, yet liable to be abused, to the discretion of those who were to administer the law The rules now forbid putting on of gold and costly apparel; why not forbid making such things to be worn? making such songs and books as do not tend to the knowledge and love of God? Does not every one see the complication in which it would involve the administration of discipline?

Taking all the parts of our General Rules, they can be brought into unity and consistency. They are simple, pure perfect; like three Doric Columns, supporting the spire pointing to heaven over the vestibule that leans into a magnificent temple. We gaze with admiration at their beauty, and turn away only to indulge the emotions of wonder at the genius that conceived and the skill that reared an ecclesiastical structure, so simple, so pure and comprehensive, suitable to all times to all places, to men of all nations and conditions; so permanently settled on scriptural foundations as to defy all change; so accessible by its easy gradation that the wretched drunkard and he who made him such need not stumble and fall while fleeing from the wrath to come, desiring to be saved from their sins.

The mere agitation of the question of change, has so excited the imagination of some of its scandalizing enemies, that to their minds its walls have been shaken, and its glittering spire made to tremble, under the shock. But there is no cause of excitement or alarm. Soule, Andrews, Capers, Paine, and Bascom are not all dead. Lovick Pearce is not dead but can speak out from the confines of the grave. The consummate wisdom of Wesley still lives and the hand that is stretched out to change is restricted. No harm will come from the agitation in the minds of beloved brethren, whose vision is not altogether in direct and parallel lines. The foundations are firm, and the superstructure will stand in its simple grandeur, while scriptural holiness is valued more than meretricious ornament.

To all the dear brethren who have taken part in the discussion of the question of change, whatever their convictions may be, whether they have argued the question logically or sentimentally, let me say, I respect your united efforts to make the M. E. Church, South "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people" to offer up spiritual sacrifices of praise and perpetual prayer; and so fill the temple of God that the profane, the Sabbath breaker, the voluptuous, the licentious, the covetous and injurious can never make it a den of thieves to be scourged out with a whip of small cords. If any one has been already admitted under false pretenses, "let it be known to them who watch over that soul as they who must give account. Admonish him of the error of his ways. Bear with him for a season. But if then he repent not he hath no more a place" in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Search the Scriptures.

We have a painful conviction that there is far too little daily and earnest Bible reading, even among professing Christians. We once heard a pastor say to another, "How many of your Church-members, do you suppose read their Bibles deliberately and thoughtfully every day?" After due consideration the answer came, to which both assented, "Not one quarter." We would fain believe their judgment over estimated the deplorable fact to which we have adverted, but of its approximate correctness there can be no reasonable doubt. The Scripture-reading of very many Church members is brief, hasty, irregular, and well-nigh fruitless; and many others have no daily habit of reading the Bible at all. In many Christian (?) homes the daily paper crowds God's precious word entirely out of the morning hour; and in some—"Tell it not in Gath"—out of the Sabbath afternoon.

It is not the neglect of the divine word by such as profess no love for its Author that we now speak. But how can any who have vowed perpetual allegiance to God so dishonor his message of love? The cause of this lamentable dereliction of duty and neglect of privilege are to be sought in the fast living of our time, which crowds the days and hours so full of occupations, social engagements, and diversions; in the immense multiplication of literature of every kind; and perhaps, most, of all, in the natural reluctance of the heart to the more serious occupations of religion. Whatever its causes, we earnestly desire to impress upon the mind of every reader at whose door this indictment lies, an effective sense of the greatness of the evil.

The general effect of the Bible in the world may well challenge for it the reverent study of all men. On a map of the world draw lines around the most enlightened, powerful and moral of the nations. Which are they? Those in which the Bible is freest and most read. Then draw lines round those which stand next in intelligence, and purity, and power. Which are these? Those that have the Bible, but have it shackled or withheld from the common people. Entirely apart from its spirituality, and from its transforming power upon the heart, the Bible has incalculably greater claims than all other books put together on the attention and admiration of men. It is the repository of the choicest literature, the fountain of the purest principles of morality, and the inspiration of the loftiest sentiments of justice and liberty that have ever existed in the world.

The Bible is not duly appreciated in its lowest aspect, as a mere literary production Addison compares it with Horace and Pindar, and declares "the vast superiority of Scripture style." Pope assures us that "the book of Job exceeds beyond all comparison the most noble parts of Homer." Rousseau, (surely no partial witness,) says: "The majesty of the Scripture strikes me with admiration. Peruse the works of our philosophers, with all their pomp of diction; how mean, how contemptible, are they when compared with Scripture? Is it possible that a book at once so simple and sublime should be merely the work of man?"

For these reasons, as well as for the higher ones we shall presently state, "search the Scripture," and also "teach them diligently to thy children." However any man may wrong himself, let no man defraud his child by omitting from that child's education these incomparable specimens of literature, these faultless principles of morality, these mightiest aspirations to liberty, and justice and goodness. We say "defraud," for we deliberately hold it to be a fraud on any child not to familiarize him with the Decalogue, with many of the Psalms and Proverbs, with the Sermon on the Mount, the history of Joseph, the parable of the Prodigal Son, and—where shall we pause in this inventory of jewels?

A yet more powerful argument for the constant study of the word of God may be drawn from its effect on individual character. The Bible is the one great means of salvation. It underlies all other means of grace. Is faith essential? "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God?" Is prayer almost omnipotent? Prayer can scale the heavens only on the ladder of the promises. It is only when Christ's "words abide" in us that we can ask what we will, and have it done. Is it "by patient continuance in well-doing" that we are to seek for glory and honor and immortality?" That "well-doing" must consist of the "good works which God hath ordained" and which the Bible enjoins. Must we "grow in grace?" The most effective means to this is daily increase in the knowledge of that divine man of whom the New Testament gives the portraiture.

The several stages in the salvation of the soul are always reached by the general influence of the word of God, and very often by means of particular passages strongly impressed upon the mind. Conviction of sin is usually wrought in this way. God's own word is the "hammer" that breaks, the "fire" that melts, the stony heart. Conversion follows the same analogy. Let Augustine's stand as a type. In the full maturity of the rarest natural powers, and the richest culture, he attempted the study of Christianity. After years of the profoundest philosophizing about it, and nearest search for the salvation it offers, he was one day conversing with his friend and fellow seeker, Alypius, when his feelings so overcame him that he rushed out the room into the garden, and, falling prostrate under a fig tree, cried mightily to God. From some neighboring house there came to his ear a child's voice chanting over and over again, "Tolle lege," (Take up and read.) Interpreting it as God's command to him to read the first passage of the Bible he should find, he hastened back into the house, opened the divine oracles, and beheld these words, which instantly filled his soul with the light of soul: "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof."

God honors his word no less in the several stages, and in the completion of the work, of sanctification. Every time the soul gets a better comprehension of God's demands and accepts them, every time it achieves a new victory over any class of temptation, every time it tramples down an easily besetting sin, it is realizing the progressing fulfillment of the Saviour's prayer, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth," and if it attains to the assurance of abiding victory over sin, that assurance reposes in the "exceeding great and precious promises."

From the duel between Jesus and Satan in the wilderness we may learn what is our resource in all temptation. In all that dreadful conflict "the Captain of our salvation" used but one weapon, a weapon which fits our hands as well as his, "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." Happy is the man who in the hour of battle has the sword at his side, and knows how to wield it. Woe to him who finds his weapon rusted fast in the scabbard by disuse.—N. Y. Advocate.

Making Home Happy.

The subject of making home attractive and providing innocent amusement for the young, caused a lively discussion at a meeting of Moravian congregations recently held at Gnadenhutten, Ohio. The attention of parents was called to it by resolution as one of necessity, and as pointing out the means whereby children may be preserved from following the sinful pleasure of the world. It is an important subject, but one that is too little attended, to and is too little understood by those who are disposed to give it consideration. Children crave variety in amusement and associations as well as in occupation. Old things tire, new ones delight. The infant breaks his Christmas toys before New Year's day, and asks for some of a different kind or contrives them. The mysterious regularity with which outdoor sports succeed each other through the different seasons is governed by a law of the childish nature and mind which it is well to regard in the provision of in-door entertainment. The desire for variety may be restrained within proper limits, but it can be disregarded entirely only at the risk of ruining the disposition of the child and of impairing his capacity for future activity.

If entertainment adapted to the childish wants is not provided at home, it will be sought abroad The child at home is under proper control and good influences, and is safe. The child abroad is—where? under what influences? in what peril? No one knows, but he is certainly in danger. He meets abroad not those who have pleasant homes and are well trained, for they are at home, but those whose homes are forbidding, whose training has been imperfect, or who are unruly. Such associates cannot improve him; they are certain to taint his morals; they may ruin him. He may, to be sure, be forced to stay at home by a painful and cruel restraint, but under such treatment he will grow morose, mopish, and weak in morals. To fail to surround home with attractions which will make it lovable, more pleasant than any other place, is a sure way to prevent the proper development of children, even when it does not result in committing them to vice.

The means of accomplishing this object are as numerous and various as the dispositions and circumstances of families. A fundamental condition is the prevalence of regularity and system in the performance of home duties. These duties should be well defined, and the faithful discharge of them rigorously exacted. The best ordered households are, as a rule, the most pleasant; the children who are under the most constant, even discipline are the happiest. Not all parents need make special devices for the entertainment of their children; only those who have failed or neglected to grow up in sympathy with youthful hearts. Such devices will often bear upon themselves the mark of artificialness; the use of them will look like a new task, and the charm which is essential to their proper effect will be lost. The faculty of promoting enjoyment should be as spontaneous and essential a feature of family life as any of its more practical functions. There are families in which the whole atmosphere is one of enjoyableness. We sometimes read of them in biographies, we make acquaintance with them rarely; they always present pictures which we would like to see more frequently. The parents were fitted by their early training to bring up such families; the children almost always grow up to be noble and useful men and women, of whom the world that knows them is proud. If a parent would make his home happy, then his own heart must be in the work.

The dispositions and tastes of the children must be consulted. When this is well done they may be made to find in occupation nearly all the amusement they need. Every child has some craft or art to which he is especially inclined. It may be drawing, or music, some little mechanical art, or natural history, or something active. Whatever it is, he has shown the way in which he will be most successfully dealt with. His taste should be cultivated; he should be given the means of enjoying it as fully as circumstances will permit. It is in the practice of particularly liked arts—the pursuit of hobbies, they are called in older life—that our much worked business men, divines, lawyers and doctors find their most wholesome relaxation. Where there are several children, each allowed to indulge his special taste, a goodly variety of resources for diversion grows up of itself, and within the family no little of the variety of society which the children will need, for they will find no end of entertainment in consulting and advising each other about their special pursuits. If the parent has a hobby, he could introduce and contribute another element to the general stock.

We come now to the provision of special amusements. Where the home has been built up on the principles we have sketched, very little care need be taken of them; they will have provided themselves. Still they are an element that should not be overlooked, and in some unfortunate families they may form the only resort. People of means may buy expensive gifts and toys and games; other will have to depend upon their resources for contrivance. After all, the simplest games are the best. The infant throws away his painted horse's head and wheels, and bestrides in preference a plain stick, ont of which he has to imagine a horse; the boy tires of his gaudy magic top, but clings to his dingy wooden peg as long as tops are "in;" the girl admires her gay doll of china or wax, but fixes her affection on that of rags; and the youth keeps his handsome prize bat for show, and plays ball with his old one. The games provided should be such as all can join in, old as well as young, if they wish, and the fear of noise should not prevent those which require some activity being preferred. Some very stupid, tiresome contrivances are offered to the public under the name of games. They are not adopted to the object sought, and should be put away. Likewise all games should be avoided which are like, or which will remind one of, those sports of the world whereby the unwary are led to wickedness and ruin. —N. Y. Methodist.

The Cross (X) Mark is to remind you that your subscription has expired. Let all renew promptly.

A Liberal Offer.

New subscribers who will forward their names at once, shall have the Advocate free the balance of the year, and on the payment of their subscription, it will be dated Jan. 1st 1875. This is a good and liberal proposition, made with the expectation of greatly enlarging our list of subscribers. We appeal to our ministers to make this offer known to their people at once. Do not delay the matter, but make one special effort to obtain a list of subscribers for the church paper. If our preachers in charge of stations and circuits would each devote a day, or an hour even, to the special work of placing their church paper in every church member's house, and in the hands of those outside of the church, what an immense amount of good might be accomplished! Try it, brethren, and the interests of yourselves, your congregations and of the church, will be greatly furthered. Other papers of our church have increased their price of subscription. Though ours is very cheap, we have not deemed it advisable to increase the price; but will continue to send forth the Advocate (despite the "panic" which presses upon us as upon every body else,) on the same terms as heretofore, with the exception of the item of postage, (20 cents) which, by the new law, must be paid by the publishers, and not at the office of delivery, as heretofore.

To show what can be accomplished by one determined effort, we copy the following from the letter of a friend who sends us a good list of subscribers, with the cash. He says:

"I concluded this morning that I would see what I could do for you in the way of subscriptions and as a result of to day's work, I send you the following names for yearly subscription, and postage with the cash. * * * I think I shall be able to send you more shortly. If you can conveniently do so, send me a list of your subscribers in this county, so I can know who are and who are not taking the Advocate, as I frequently see our Methodist friends from the country. It is no trouble to get a man who is a Methodist of the true grit and who has religion with it, to take the paper. Some of these whose names I send, I talked to for their "wives' and little ones' sake." One man remarked to me to day that it took "a heap of paying these days, to get to Heaven." I think I will get his name and money yet. I am anxious to get our church paper circulated extensively in our community; the people then would support the institutions of the church more liberally; and our people know so little of what Methodism is that I think they would have more church pride, if they would inform themselves, which they can do by reading your paper."

God's Sympathy with Man.

There is not a feeling, a throb of happy life in any of God's creatures, but that his heart throbs in answering happiness. The joy of the Father is in our joy. His watchful care is ever over and around us. There is not a bright autumn leaf that is not an out-shining of the Divine presence. Not a moment's pleasure or a ruffle of an annoyance comes to us that is not felt in God's consciousness. There is not the slightest yielding on our part to evil, but casts a shadow on him: no moment's conquest of wrong, but he rejoices in it. As God is with us in sympathy in all these things, so in them all he seeks our confidence and service. He would have us look up to him more freely and familiarly than the child seeks its father's face. For our hours of great necessity, for times of sore trial and conflict, he has infinite resources of help and deliverance. But more than this, he would have us take him into our daily companionship. He would have us bring to him our joy and happiness as well as our pain and sorrow. He would walk with us as one most familiar friend, terrible only when he stands across the path of our evil desires; yet giving us the sweetest and the freest companionship. He won't ever give us his Divine help and guide us in the way to heaven.

With this issue we close the discussion on the "new rule." The cry comes from every quarter—"we are tired of it." We think enough has been said on the subject, pro and con. We have on hand a large number of well-written articles, from both ministers and laymen. To publish them all would occupy our entire space for weeks to come. We think it best to let the matter rest until Conference.

Hurtful Literature.

The devil allows no opportunity or device to escape him whereby he may ensnare and corrupt the souls of men. One of his favorite and surest methods is the dissemination of improper, unclean and obscene literature. He directs the thought and pen of the sensualist and libertine to the writing of manuscripts, stands beside the case of the compositor, works the lever and turns the wheel of the press, selects gilt and gold and morocco for his binding and sends forth books attractive in appearance, amusing, entertaining and exciting in matter, but corrupting as his foul touch can make them, to be handled and read by the young and impressible,—to be passed from one to another until the widening and concentric circles of their baneful influence embrace a whole school, college and community. One particle of musk will pervade and perfume the air of a spacious hall—one breath of the wind sweeping over a miasmatic swamp will carry disease and death to the otherwise pure and salubrious hill-country—one drop of foul will pollute a whole cup of fair water: but this is no more surely true than that one obscene picture or story, one evil thought expressed never so delicately, or one sentence glorifying the adventure and career of a criminal and investing him with the mien of a hero, will infect and endanger, if not destroy, the purity and peace of those who look upon or read it. Ainsworth's "Dick Turpin" and "Jack Sheppard," dealing with the wild career and bold adventures of assassins, thieves and foot-pads, and throwing about them a mantle of heroism, did more to fill Ludgate jail with criminals and swing them from Tyburn Tree, than long years of poverty and misery could have accomplished.

The police courts of our large cities get their business from the cheap dime-novel, that circulates among the sporting of the street, or even among the higher ranks, captivates them by its stories of hair-breadth escapes and successful villainy, and leads them by its fascination, to a similar life.—The haunts of vice have their regularly employed and paid agents whose business it is to publish and place within the reach of the young and pure, their insinuating, sednctive, exciting and obscene books and pamphlets. They know well how that the taste once being vitiated, the pure thoughts once turned into the channel of impurity, and allowed to listen to the suggestions of vice, the work of corruption will gradually, at first, then rapidly and almost irresistably progress, until a willing farewell is given to the life of innocence and virtue, the career of shame embraced and the life of the bad pursued.

It is but recently that the Christian public has been shocked by the disclosures, made of the extent to which this stealthy work of circulating corrupting literature among the young has been carried. Mr. Comstock, of Brooklyn, a member of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, and a special agent of the United States Post Office Department, has faithfully and energetically pursued and ferretted out the depraved villians who are engaged in the publication of this poisonous literature. So vigorously did he pursue them with the law, that one of the agents whom he had arrested, stabbed him dangerously as he was being carried to jail.—Since January last Mr. Comstock has caused to be seized nineteen tons of the vile and corrupting matter, four tons being taken from one single store. One dealer, as his books showed, had sold $25,000 worth of obscene books within four years. One hundred and forty-eight persons were arrested and one hundred convicted of the nefarious work, through the determined efforts of Mr. Comstock.

It makes one shudder to think how long this devil's work has been carried on undetected, at least, unstopped—how many thousands and hundreds of thousands of these pamphlets and books have been put into pure hands and dwelt upon by souls that erst were as innocent and chaste as the mountain snow-flake—how many lives have received the impulse to dishonesty, shame and degradation, and how many feet have been turned from pursuing the path of virtue into the road at whose end yawns the black and terrible abyss from which there is no arising.

Parents and guardians and teachers have a fearful responsibility resting upon them, to guard their charges against the opportunity of coming into contact with such contaminating influences as proceed from vicious publications. It will not do to keep a careless guard; for the enemy is shrewd and used to being watched, and knows how to evade even a vigilant sentry. Still less will it do to let in the enemy in the vain hope that the youthful charge, full of virtue and rectitude, will turn in disgust from the approaches of the fiend, or else face and fight him with the weapons which virtue gives; for the enemy has many pleasing faces that he can assume to invite, interest and decoy, and if it comes to a contest between the two for the mastery, the struggle is unequal and will be short, and the young and innocent one will either make a willing surrender or fall into a certain and degrading captivity, for,

> Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
> As to be hated needs but to be seen:
> Yet seen too oft, familiar with his face
> We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

The Hoiston Conference adopted the new temperance rule by a vote of 85 ayes, 18 nays.

The Conference Collection.

This is one of the most important and sacred collections in our church. A late number of the Southern Advocate has the following earnest pointed appeal which we commend to our preachers and people:

The preachers go before their congregations with no more sacred demand upon their Christian liberality; nor do we believe that the justice and force of any claim is more fully recognized, or more cheerfully responded to. We beg the brethren to press this collection. Be not satisfied with a reluctant statement from the pulpit that it is made your duty to take up such collection, and then furnish your hearers facilities for the evasion of their solemn duty, by sending round a hat for such ragged change-bills as they may be really relieved by dropping in. State fully the nature of the demand upon them, and the necessities of those for whom their liberality is invoked; and then, after this public appeal, approach the members and friends of the Church privately, and prevail upon them, if possible, to make a contribution worthy of the cause, and commensurate with their ability. The trustees of this annuity fund are steadily advancing to the position of beneficiaries upon it, and self-interest, if no higher consideration, should prompt them to do all they can toward training the church up to the full discharge of its duty in caring for those who have worn themselves out in its service, and in saving from want, the surviving families of such as have fallen in its work. The times are hard, but none feel the pressure more sorely than those who are to be relieved by this collection. Let us make the utmost effort to redeem, if we cannot wholly banish, the reproach which we have so long borne in this matter.

DAILY CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE
For Conference Week.

We propose to issue during the session of Conference to be held in this city, commencing Dec. 2nd, a Daily Christian Advocate.

The Conference will be of great interest, many matters of importance affecting the good of the church will be discussed and passed upon, and it is desirable that our people should be informed fully of its proceedings as they occur. We are aware that it will necessitate much expense and trouble, but believe it to be a practicable undertaking.

The Advocate will contain a conference and church directory, full reports of proceedings, condensed reports of discussions and sermons, editorial reviews and suggestions, church news, a brief synopsis of the proceedings of the General Assembly and Grand Lodge of Masonry which will be in session at the same time, together with other matters of general interest.

In order to meet the expense of publication, the paper will be furnished daily during the session, postage paid, 30 cents per copy. We earnestly solicit our preachers and others to receive subscriptions and forward the names and funds at once so that our books can be arranged before the meeting of Conference. Let the preachers make the announcement at their appointments, and when they cannot give the matter their personal attention let them designate a person or persons to canvass for the paper. Any person sending us ten subscribers with the cash, will receive the Daily Advocate, free of charge.

The New York Christian Advocate has received, during the past three weeks, over twenty-five hundred new subscribers. We rejoice to hear of the success of any good religious paper, but wonder why our Southern journals should not be as well patronized as those of the North. Can it be that our Southern people have less appreciation of religious literature than our Northern brethren? We are unwilling to admit that this is so. It would be a reflection upon their intelligence and piety. The reason, we think, is found in the fact that our people have not been educated to subscribe for and read our church papers. When a person is received into our church, there are three things which he should do if he would become an intelligent christian.—Supply himself with a discipline, a hymn book, and his church paper. Yet we would not be surprised if less than one fourth of the entire membership of our church have never supplied themselves with either.

"Yesterday was 'a feast of fat things' for us. The Rev. I. T. Wyche delivered an eloquent leture to an attentive audience at the church at 2 o'clock, P. M. on the subject of Temperance. Bro. Wyche's address was just such as we should expect from a man of his culture. He painted the evils of Intemperance in glowing colors, and left the drunkard and moderate dram drinker without any ground on which to stand. For me to go into a detailed report of the address would be simply superfluous as we are entirely unable to do justice to the subject. Suffice it to say that those who failed to be present missed a rich treat. Mr. Wyche will long be remembered by the Mt. Moriah Council, as an orator of the first order, and we hope we may ere long have the pleasure of listening to him again on the same subject."

Revival Intelligence

Rev. M. C. Thomas writes: You may say through the Advocate that we have had a pleasant year on Snow Hill circuit, and some profitable protracted meetings. Nineteen have professed faith in Christ and united themselves with the M. E. Church, South, and the church has been considerably revived.

Rev. W. D. Lee writes: Our last Quarterly Meeting was continued from Saturday to the following Thursday. Eight persons joined.

We have but two churches on the Pineville ct. I found 189 names on the church record. About 50 have been added this year. We bless God for peace and prosperity.

Rev. W. C. Norman writes: We have reason to thank God and take courage for the prosperity attending the labors of this year on the Wentworth circuit. There have been about 82 conversions and 85 accessions to the church. The prospect for the future strength and prosperity of the circuit is bright and hopeful.

Rev. F. L. Reid, of Louisburg Station, is in the midst of a gracious revival of religion. The Presiding Elder, Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, who has been assisting in the meeting, informs us that up to Wednesday night, there had been 19 conversions and a goodly number of penitents at the altar. It is a work of great promise.

Rev. S. H. Helsabeck writes:

While writing you on business, I would say that I am closing my work on the North Guilford circuit. We have had a number of good meetings. At Friendship we had twenty conversions, at Gethsemane twelve, at Lee's Chapel the same number, at Pisgah some ten, and smaller numbers at other places and old members revived. To the Lord be all the glory!

Rev. J. C. Hartsell writes: We are in the midst of a gracious revival—Many precious souls are being converted, and the church powerfully revived. Nearly all the people, young and old, in a greater or less degree, are under divine influence. Dr. Burkhead, our excellent P. E., is still with us laboring with great acceptability and power. The glorious work still goes on. Will give a full report next week. Pray for us!

Rev. Jos. Wheeler writes: A meeting of much interest has just closed at Rockingham—a deep religious impression has been made upon the entire community. Forty-five persons were converted—35 added to the church, and the membership generally quickened.

These results are largely due the earnest pulpit efforts of Rev. Thomas W. Guthrie, who has proved himself an active co-laborer, and "true yoke-fellow" in the gospel. A meeting at a country church resulted in the conversion of 14 persons and 10 accessions.

Rev. L. E. Stacey writes: Eden is the name of a new church, just erected, 6 or 7 miles south of Madison.—At that place, Bro. E. J. Eudaily has been preaching once every four weeks for a few months past, and having protracted from one of his regular appointments, we went to his assistance, and great was the result;—about 32 conversions and 19 accessions to the church. The meeting continued nearly two weeks, and when it was closed, there were 12 or 15 anxious seekers in the congregation.

The place and occasion was indeed an "Eden," not only to those 32 converts, but to many of God's people.—We formed a new society and appointed Bro. Colley as class-leader; hence Madison circuit has one other appointment.

For the entire result, let it be said the Lord is our righteousness.

Rev. Jas. Mahoney writes: The good Lord is still reviving his work on the Cokesbury circuit. The Chief Shepherd still sustains his servants, enabling them to look after, feed and gather into the fold the flock. The meeting at Salem continued till Thursday morning, 8 days in all.—Sixteen adults were converted and joined the church, 6 of whom were baptized, and 4 children. The next Sunday, 1st inst., I commenced a meeting at "Hall's," closed Thursday; 5 adults converted and joined the church; 3 baptized and one infant.

The membership at both churches greatly refreshed and strengthened; took up a handsome Conference and Missionary collection at Salem, for all of which we praise the Lord. Rev. Owen Spell rendered very efficient aid at Hall's.

Rev J. P. Simpson writes under date of Nov. 4th: I am glad to announce a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon our church in Mount Pleasant. There were 42 conversions and 32 accessions. During the 15 days of the meeting we were favored with 3 good sermons from Rev. P. A. Strobel, and one from Rev. Dr. L. A. Bikle, Pres. of N. C. College, of the Lutheran Church; and two from Rev. Bro. Bruton, and one from Rev. M. V. Sherrill. Our P. E. Rev. Jessie S. Nelson, also, was with us and gave us good help. My honored predecessors in this work will be glad to hear of this revival, as it has been so many years since such an occurrence in this place. Our lay brethren from St. Pauls, Cold Spring, and Gold Hill, helped us nobly. Up to date, there have been 238 converts in this circuit, the present year. Thank God!

Rev. T. L. Triplett writes: The Lord has done great things for us, on the Salisbury circuit, "whereof we are glad."

There have been 200 conversions on this circuit, 227 accessions. This is only the beginning of still greater and more glorious displays of God's power in the salvation of the people of Salisbury circuit. The young, the middled aged, the old, the learned and the unlearned, have all been moved by the spirit of God to the beloved Zion. I might say much for Salisbury circuit, but deem it unnecessary.

Conference.

As far as heard from, the railroads extend the usual courtesy of half fare to the ministers and delegates attending the Conference.

As the several roads vary in their regulations, brethren are advised to buy their tickets understandingly.

Those who are not met by the Committee of Reception, or other friends, at the depot, will report at Branson's Bookstore, on Fayetteville street.

The classes for examination will meet at 10 o'clock, on Tuesday, the 1st of Dec.—The respective places of meeting will be duly stated in the Conference Directory.

A. W. MANGUM.

Religious Brevities

Dr. Duncan, President of R. M. College, who has for some time been in feeble health, has returned to his post, somewhat improved though not able to resume the duties of his chair.

Bishop Merrill declined to entertain the recommendation of Mrs. Van Cott presented to California Conference, for orders. The Bishop decided that according to Discipline, no quarterly or district Conference had authority to license a woman to preach, nor had any annual conference a right to elect a woman to orders.

Rev. Joseph Holdich, D. D., the well known senior Secretary of the American Bible Society, was granted last week, by the unanimous vote of the Board of Managers, a respite of six months rest from official labor.

The committee appointed by the Presbyterian Churches, North and South, to consult concerning the establishment of fraternal relations, will meet for this purpose in Baltimore, January 7th.

The American Missionary Association, at their session in Iowa, voted to base their plans on an income of $500,000 for the ensuing year, which is considerably in excess of last year's receipts.

President Grant has issued his proclamation, designating Thursday, Nov. 26, as a day of thanksgiving.

The Bishops of the M. E. Church held their annual meeting in Baltimore week before last. A grand reception was held at the New Book Rooms, and a banquet served for the Bishops and Methodist clergy at the Carrolton House, on Friday evening.

On October 18th, Rev. J. Dixon, D. D., an eminent minister of the Baptist Church, united with the Methodist Church at Indianapolis, and being invited to fill the pulpit in the evening, preached a sermon of great power and beauty.

The editor of the Congregational Methodist recently held an interview with the venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce, and in the course of their conversation, the Doctor said that among other labors, he was engaged in writing a series of articles on the "Fraternal Hug."

Agassiz and Children.

"He was a great lover of children. He was constantly speaking to them in the street and caressing them not from affectation or a desire to be popular, but because he could not help it. A friend tells me of an instance which well illustrates his tenderness for children. Once, while conducting some scientific experiments, it became necessary to have some water immediately. Agassiz seized a pitcher, and ran out to a pump near by. He went out quickly, but was slow in coming back. They waited twice as long for the water as would have sufficed to bring it, and then went out to see what was the matter. There sat Agassiz, down by the pump, his legs crossed, and a little child, which he was fondly soothing and caressing, nestled in between them. In his haste at the pump, he had accidentally struck the child, standing near by. Though the blow was of little account, the exigencies of science seemed to him the less important, and he had to put down his pitcher and open his heart. When deeply engaged in scientific investigation, he would leave his work to seize and fondle a child that had strayed into his room, and the interrupted mental process seemed to be resumed without difficulty."

The tender father values his child's kiss, because it is a gush of love from the child's heart.—Thus God approves even of the simple wish when nothing is done, because he sees the heart that desires to do it.—Norman Macleod.

To the heart that lays hold upon the promises, the darkest cloud has a "silver lining."

"Remarkable Premonition"

Another very remarkable incident is added to the many startling things which have occurred in these "latter days." Our readers will remember that we gave an account of the sad death of our venerable fellow citizen Rev. Tho. [illegible]ney, which occurred on the 1st of October, 1874. Mr. Asbury had retired to his room and bathed his chest with kerosene oil, to relieve a pain with which he was afflicted and which had been relieved by the same application previously. After bathing with the oil (by some accident of which he could give no account) he came in contact with the blaze of fire, and the oil igniting he was soon enveloped in flames. He ran into the yard, but before assistance could be rendered his clothes were burned to ashes and his body almost to a crisp. From this painful and distressing accident he died the same evening at 6:20 o'clock.

When his wife came to his relief in the yard he remarked, "I am gone, I have to die." He then walked into the house, and when he laid down he related the following wonderful incident of his life. He said that "about fourteen years ago an angel appeared to him, he felt the breeze of its wings and the angel told him that his end would be a terrible one." He continued: "I see it all plainly just as the angel told me; this is no fiction; you will find it written down in a memorandum among my papers. I kept my mouth closed to exclude the flames so I could be able to tell you all about it." After his death the following written memorandum was found carefully preserved among his papers:

"AN EXTRAORDINARY EVENT OF MY LIFE."

SEPTEMBER 10th, 1859.—As I was coming from Tate's Factory, up the river at night to where my son John and my wagons were camped, on the old plank road, an angel passed by me. I felt the breeze of its wings, and it spoke to me and told me what would be my end in this life. I believe every word of God, whether spoken by angels or men inspired; and my whole hope of happiness here and hereafter is in God through Jesus Christ, His Son, and my Savior. Amen.

H. ASBURY.

Mr. Asbury was an "old soldier of the cross," who had served his God faithfully and well, having been a local minister of the Methodist Church for about forty-two years, we believe. His death was as peaceful and triumphant as his life had been devoted and consistent. His anticipations of heavenly rest were sweet and joyful and his soul grew rapturous as he spoke of the "depths of the wisdom and knowledge of God."

A short time before he expired he had himself raised in the bed and bid a most tender and affectionate farewell to his family; when he was laid down again he locked his hands together across his breast, closed his eyes and died without a shudder. So this good man passed into the "eternal rest," prepared for God's people. We are forcible reminded of the foreshadowing of Peter's death as related by the Apostle John in his epistle, chapter 21, verse 18.—Lincoln Progress.

Scientific and Useful.

A REMARKABLE paper has recently been contributed to a German magazine by Professor Mohr, showing not only that the sap does not freeze in trees and plants which live through hard winters, but also the reason why it does not freeze. He says that though water, as we generally see and understand it, freezes at thirty two degrees, it does not do so when its particles are finely divided. Tropical plants have large cells, and these are the ones in which the sap freezes; but in plants with very small cells, in which the liquid particles are finely divided, there is no freezing of the liquids until after the structure has received injury of some sort. This is true, he says, of insects and insect pupæ. They never freeze; but cut one apart, soon after the humors solidify, and, on thawing, life dies.

LIGHT AS A CURATIVE AGENT.—The statement has been made that Sir James Wylie, late physician to the emperor of Russia, having attentively studied the effect of light as a curative agent, in the hospital of St. Petersburg, discovered that the number of patients who were cured in rooms properly lighted was four times those confined in dark rooms. This led to a complete reform in lighting the hospitals in Russia, and with the most beneficial results. In all the cities visited by the cholera, it is found that the greatest number of deaths took place in narrow streets, and on the sides of those having a northern exposure, where the salutary beams of the sun are excluded. It is also said inhabitants of southern slopes of mountains are better developed, and more healthy than those who live on the northern sides, while those who dwell in secluded villages are generally subject to peculiar diseases and deformities of person, these different results being attributed to the agency of light.

The Moravian Church claims the oldest missionary society in this country, which was established in 1776 called "The Society for Propagating the Gospel Among the Heathen," and has just celebrated its eighty-eighth anniversary at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. The society, though financially strong, is at present doing little to accomplish its original object. The Moravian, the spirited organ of the Moravian Church, calls upon the society to increased efforts in reaching and saving those destitute of the gospel.

Notes.

The Sheriffs of several counties have failed to make returns of the votes cast at the elections in August for Superintendent of Public Instruction. It is important that they should make immediate returns to the Secretary of State.——Gov. Vance delivered an impromptu address on Agriculture, &c., at the late Fair of the Carolinas. The speech was a characteristic one and contained some hard hits on racing, gambling, &c., at Fairs. He said that he was a Democrat in politics, a lawyer by profession, and he supposed a pharisee in religion, for said he, "when the FAIR-I-SEE, I cannot lie SAD-YOU-SEE." The close of his address was as instructive as the commencement was amusing, says the Piedmont Press.—The two absorbing and vital questions of the day are, first, "Shall a convention be called?" and second, "Which is entitled to the Base Ball championship of the state, the Athletic club of Raleigh, or the Elm City of Newberne?"——The world would be much better off if it had a great many men like Mr. Yates of the Charlotte DEMOCRAT. The Charlotte Observer says: "We are requested by Mr. W. J. Yates, to say that the poor of this city, needing fire wood, may have the timbers, boards and rubbish on his burnt lots, next to Stenhouse & Macanlay's building. Needy persons may take it away whenever they please.

This is like our brother of the DEMOCRAT, who is one of the most humane of men, and whose ear is always open to the cry of the poor and needy.

——The Carolina Central Railroad has been completed to Monroe, and on the occasion of the first appearance of the "Iron Horse," a banquet was given to the workmen, and many pleasant things said by the Mayor of that place and the representatives of Col. Wallace Ames.——A good paper, and newsy, is the Oxford LEADER, recently started and edited by Blow and Britt.——It is said that Gov. Brogden will certainly remove J. C. L. Harris, Esq. from the office of Solicitor, for suppressing indictments against his brother-in-law, T. F. Lee, Esq.——Now that the opinions of the most prominent lawyers have been requested and given in letter form, on the subject of a State convention, those 'thinkers' who have been waiting to be asked (but were not) are coming forward with their "deliberate conclusions."——The Durham TOBACCO PLANT was in mourning last week on account of the death of W. J. Green, brother of the editor, and himself editorially connected with the PLANT. Mr. Green was a young man of talent and worth, and his death has caused much sadness in Durham.——At the recent marriage of Mr. Plunket and Miss Coppedge in Wadesboro, the wedding party were poisoned by arsenic or corrosive sublimate in the coffee or food. Ten persons were seriously affected, among them Rev. O. J. Brent, the officiating clergyman, who at last accounts, was dangerously ill.—The Legislature of N. C. met last Monday. In the House there are 62 Democrats, 4 independents, and 34 Republicans, The Senate is composed of 38 Democrats and 12 Republicans. The most important questions which will engage the attention of the Assembly are those of the State Debt and the calling of a convention to alter the State constitution. The PERSONELLE of the Assembly is good; many of the members are young men, talented and rising, unprejudiced and unbound by "entangling alliances," and capable of doing the State good service. The people, generally entertain a good opinion of the Assembly elect, except perhaps, the disappointed aspirants for clerkships, who are doubtless returning their homes with the impression that party service and individual merit do not pass for as much with Legislatures, as they did with Solomon and Napoleon——The New York Herald of the 9th inst., contained a large hoax, well-written and graphically describing the breaking loose and escape of the wild beasts confined in Central Park, New York City. The details were carefully given and the scenes of contests between the beasts, their attacks upon people in houses and in the streets, the mangled bodies of the slain, and the consternation of the citizens were so fully and earnestly depicted, that the reader's interest enforced credulity; and it was not until the last paragraph was reached that it was found to be a pure fabrication—the result of what the writer imagined might happen at any time, and intended to teach the authorities of the city the necessity of great care and caution in the management of the menagerie.

Memories.

Weirdly, sadly, the bear winds sigh.
The wintry blast and quivering pines,
And moaning in the rain drops fall
On the leaves of the drooping vines.
While a lad and in the firelight glow,
Sit thoughts drift back to the long ago.

There are memories dear of a quiet home,
Sweet as beneath o'er hanging trees,
A fragrance of moss and mignionette,
Caught up by the evening breeze,
There are snatches of song and voice of prayer
Borne upward on the perfumed air.

There's a note of joy in the song of praise
Trilled forth by the forest bird
And a measure of music in forest leaves
By soft winged zephyrs stirred.
And I list a while for voices low
I loved so well in the long ago.

There ear wet is of affection, tender and true,
There are friendships pure and strong;
There are sad regrets and sighs of pain,
Sighing out in a sad, sad song.
There are joys and sorrows, smiles and tears,
I see as I look through the mist of years.

There are trembling pulses in pleasant groves,
And soft as sea music are vesper tones,
There are notes and lyrics so fondly loved.
That are to memory's dreams,
And I catch in the evening's musical chime,
A sad, sweet song of "auld lang time."

AZALEA.

Rolesville N. C. Oct. 1874

A Syrian Toilet.

We called yesterday on the daughter of a Mohammedan living in this city (Tripoli.) Though the girl had been married several days, she had never been seen by her husband. He only had gone to the mosque when the ceremony was performed, she taking no part in it. After the ceremony the bride usually stays at her father's house nine days, during which time she sits in state, decked in her finest dress and jewels, receiving calls from her friends. Then her joy is at an end. She must go to her husband, take off her fine clothes, and become a perfect slave, subject to the will of her cruel master. The parents of this bride were very poor. Her mother was dressed in a little better than rags, and was at the tapus washing clothes. All the women of the bride's company had their hair plaited full of gold coins. These were heirlooms, and so greatly treasured that a woman would almost starve sooner than part with one. The present given by the family to the bride was an elegant pale blue brocade silk dress and a black silk, embroidered with gold. The former cost $150. The bridegroom's presents were a sumptuous lilac silk, heavily embroidered with gold; ear-rings of pearl and gold; bracelets as wide as a finger. During the call she wore the bridegroom's presents. The other presents were hung spread out on the wall.

We stopped at a house below, according to custom and sent word that we were coming. The bride returned an answer that she would be most happy to salute us. After waiting about twenty minutes we went up stairs, for she lived on the second floor. She had not quite finished her toilet, and she sat on the floor before a large mirror, surrounded by her finery. As we entered she arose and saluted us, and then returned composedly to her dressing. Of all the strange and ghastly sights her face was the most wonderful, as may well be imagined from the way in which it was prepared.

First, hot wax was spread over the whole face, which, when cool, was peeled off. This was done to remove all the hair from the face. The whiting was rubbed on till the skin looked like marble. Her eyebrows were painted jet black, her lips and a large spot on each cheek painted a brilliant red. On these red spots on her forehead and at the corners of her mouth gilt flowers were pasted. Then over the whole powdered sugar had been snapped, which made it sparkle as with "diamond dust." She wore pearl earrings, and around her neck was a string of large amber beads, three strings of roped pearls and a curious necklace, which we were privately told was borrowed for the occasion. It was made of gold twenty-five-dollar pieces, over lapping each other like scales. The usual head-dress was covered with real and artificial flowers. The finishing touch was put on in the shape of a piece of black wax, heated over the censor till very hot, made round and flat, and then stuck between the eyes.—Jessup's Syrian Home Life.

CHRISTIAN ZOOPHYTES.—In his stirring little work on Life in Earnest, James Hamilton compares a certain class of people to the sea anemone, whose monotonous life consists largely in twirling its feelers, floating in the tide, or folding itself on its foot-stalk, when the tide recedes, awaiting that tide's return. This author sees a striking resemblance between this zoophyte and the man whose days float over one another, leaving him to vegetate on the same spot, with no high aims, no attempts at a forward movement. Unhappily the comparison is happy. Men, contented to fasten themselves to the rock of inactivity, simply diving, now and then, for periwinkles, are found in almost every Christian church. Too sluggish to move themselves, when the tide of religious excitement goes down they sink too, fold their arms, double themselves up, and become spiritually as numb as a mud turtle struck in the tenderest part by a gymnotus. It matters not how high the tide is, or how near the feelers of the Christian zoophyte are to the altar, he gathers no inspiration. He floats in silence. Without inward emotion, he is moved only as the waves of salvation beat against him—against, and not through him. He is like an engine-boiler full of cold water—he may freeze, but he cannot explode.

A WALKING ADVERTISEMENT.

LIMESTONE SPRINGS, S. C.

Dr R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I am a walking advertisement for your Golden Medical Discovery, Pursative Pellets and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, they having cured me of Catarrh of nine years' standing, which was so bad that it disfigured my nose, and, while curing it, your medicines also cured me of Asthma in its worst and most aggravated form. Before using your medicines I had become reduced in flesh from one hundred and fifty-five to one hundred and fifteen pounds, and I now weigh one hundred and sixty-two pounds, and am in better health than I have enjoyed for twenty years.

Yours truly, J. L. LUMSDEN.

The above is but a fair sample of hundreds of letters which are received by Dr. Pierce, and in the face of such evidence she can longer doubt that the Doctor's medicines are the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh

The Great Favorite with the Ladies.

Wm. Forsyth Bynum & Son, druggists, of Live Oak, Fla., write, Sept. 18th, 1874, as follows: "Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.—Your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets sell very largely and give complete satisfaction, as numbers of our customers will vouch testify, with pleasure. Your Favorite Prescription is indeed the great Favorite with the ladies and numbers can say with joy that it has saved them from sinking into a miserable life or meeting with premature death, and restored them to health and happiness."

Two pounds of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was first made known to them. A single bottle often gives delicate and suffering women more relief than months of treatment from their family physician. In all those derangements causing back-ache, dragging down sensations, nervous and general debility, it is a wonderful remedy. Its soothing and healthy properties render it of the utmost value to ladies suffering from internal fever, congestion, inflammation or ulceration, and in the various forms of weakness or displacements of the womb. Sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee.

The Season of Intermittents.

All seasons in the compilation, in other words, all disorders occasioned by unwholesome exhalations from the earth or water, are prevalent at this season. In every locality subject to the visitation of fever and ague or other forms of intermittent disease, the causes which produce those maladies are now actively at work. This, therefore, is a period of the year when the inhabitants of such districts should prepare their systems to meet the unwholesome condition of the atmosphere, by a resort to tonic and alterative treatment. Among the invigorants, recommended by the test of experience, as a means of fortifying the system against the influence and epidemic maladies, stands those of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Whether in this or other countries where it is used as a specific, it has been held in the highest appreciable preventive and remedy throughout those regions. Intermittents abound in the swampy and marshy districts which line the borders of many of our rivers, and in the neighborhood of our seaboard. Now is the time when the inhabitants of such unhealthy districts should put their systems in good defensive trim by a course of the only known vegetable antidote. By the best resident of an unhealthy locality, which, without the aid of this preventive, will be apt to overwhelm the strong as well as the feeble, the resolute, constitutional, the crippled and man other comfort and happiness destroyers. Dyspepsia, biliousness, irregularities of the digestive and excretive functions of our climate at the commencement of the season, should be corrected by the use of the Bitters as a safeguard.

Bailly's Patent Enamel Paint.

It is now more than a quarter of a century since the art of mixing paint was confined almost exclusively to a few comparatively speaking. Now, however, through the ingenuity of BAILEY, we are enabled to apply the paint it used are, but can be mixed to suit ourselves, with pleasure. Your Favorite Prescription is indeed the great Favorite with the ladies and numbers can say with joy that it has saved them from sinking into a miserable life or meeting with premature death, and restored them to health and happiness."

We have with the different shades of tints now before us, who have used the "Enamel Paint," speak from experience, that it is all that is claimed for it, and will very cheerfully supercede the "old style paint." As the originator of the great worth of the Enamel Paint, we most respectfully request all our readers to carefully read the excellent testimonials of Mr. C. P. Knight, in this paper.

Communicated.

For the Advocate.

"The Curse of Blood."

Messrs. Editors: Two numbers of recent paper, with the above heading, from the pen of my friend and brother, Rev. W. M. Robey, have recently appeared in the Advocate. I heartily sympathize with Bro. Robey in his earnest effort to arouse the Church from her indifference to the claims of the heathen. Nor does he more than myself deprecate "the curse of blood" which her neglect of duty to them is bringing upon her. Would to God that she could be moved to do an hundred fold more than she is doing to avert that curse and to benefit the benighted of our race!

But, Mr. Editor, I do most emphatically dissent from some of the views contained in, and utterly reject some of the conclusions reached by Bro. Robey in his zeal to accomplish that object. A cursory reading of his first number is sufficient to satisfy us that the conclusion to which he would carry us is, that all rational adult heathens are lost. Hear him state the conclusion to which he has come: "If then the salvation of the adult heathen is conditioned upon his personal compliance with the terms of the gospel, and he cannot comply for want of knowledge, it follows inevitably that he cannot be saved conditionally; and since, as we have already shown, he cannot be saved unconditionally, we cannot avoid the conclusion that he cannot be saved at all without a knowledge of the gospel. Having established this conclusion upon general principles, we propose now to inquire whether it is sanctioned by the Scriptures." Having adduced what he regards as Scripture proof of his theory, he closes the first number of his article in the following words: "But if he—God—has no other way,"—that is to save the heathen than by gospel repentance and faith—"then how can the heathens be saved who have never heard of repentance toward God, and know nothing of the Lord Jesus?"

It is clear from these extracts that Bro. Robey has reached the conclusion that all rational adult heathens are damned because they have not the gospel. And he holds, of course, that they are not at all personally responsible for their ignorance of the gospel; that the church alone is to blame for that ignorance. Now, Mr. Editor, as a Christian, zealous for the honor of my Master, I solemnly protest against such a reflection upon the glory of His character and the righteousness of His government. As an American and Methodist, I utterly repudiate such downright Calvinism. As a lover of truth, I decidedly object to Bro. Robey's unearthing gross religious error, that was so long ago buried beneath the ruins of "the doctrine of the Decrees." As his humble fellow champion of the cause of the heathen, I beg that he will not use a weapon that is adapted to do more injury to the cause of truth, it can do good to the cause which he advocates.

Let us examine his reasoning a little. His argument, thrown into a syllogistic form, is about as follows: No man can be saved except on condition of gospel repentance and faith: The heathen, for want of light, cannot repent and believe in a gospel sense; Therefore the heathen cannot be saved. The fallacy in this reasoning consists, I submit, in the assumption that God requires the same condition of salvation from the heathen that He does from those who have the gospel.—That He requires gospel repentance and faith from those who have no gospel to develop these graces. I say "assumption," for Bro. Robey will excuse me for saying that I do not think he has proved his first proposition. And I am sure that it is not self-evident. Evidently, this assumption is the pivot on which his whole argument turns: the keystone that holds his logical arch together: the foundation on which the whole fabric of his theory of heathen damnation, for lack of the gospel, is built. And if it can be shown that the position he has assumed is untenable, then I submit that the fabric, so skillfully built thereon, will tumble into ruins. That his position is untenable, I shall now endeavor to show.

The most serious objection to this theory is that such a requirement of the heathen, on the part of the Almighty, would be manifestly hard and unjust. It would be reaping where He has not sown and gathering where He has not strewed. It would be requiring the improvement of a talent that had never been imparted to the heathen.—At least, the improvement of two or five talents, where only one had been given. It would be requiring the plant of gospel faith and the fruit of gospel holiness, where no gospel seed had been sown or gospel sun had shone. In a word, it would be requiring an impossibility of the heathen and damning them for not performing it. This point is so plain to my mind that it would seem to need no further illustration or elaboration. But as it is very important, let us look at it a little further Does not Jesus, in the parable of the talents, emphatically, if not indignantly, deny that God, is "a hard man, reaping where he has not sown?" Does he not show plainly enough that He had placed one talent in the hand of the unprofitable servant, and that He only proposed to reap a reasonable increase from that talent? And is it not perfectly clear that He did not punish that servant for a failure to improve two or five talents? Is it not true also that He rewarded the servant that improved the two talents as richly as He did the one that improved the five?—That He rewarded him not for improving five, but only two talents? The application of the teaching of the parable to the case of the heathen is very easy.—And it seems to me that the case of the heathen and that of the unprofitable servant are strictly analogous. The heathen has received only one talent of light, while a man with the gospel has received five. The latter is required to improve the five, while the former is only required to improve one. If he fails to improve the one talent, he is punished for that, and not for failing to improve five talents or gospel light.

But again, Bro. Robey admits that infants and idiots are saved, through the atonement, without faith in Christ. He is careful to make the distinction between them and rational adult heathens. But, I ask, why should he make this distinction? In what consists the difference in their responsibility for a failure to believe in Christ that should constitute a reason for a difference in God's dealings with them? Is there really any difference between the blameworthiness of a heathen and an idiot in this matter? I can certainly see none. Is not unavoidable ignorance of the gospel, in the heathen, just as excusable as invincible ignorance of the same, in the idiot? Is not the ignorance of the heathen just as involuntary (on his part) as is that of the idiot? If the ignorance of both is involuntary—the will of neither being involved in, or connected with it—is one of them more to blame for that ignorance than is the other? The idiot is in darkness because he lacks receptivity to light; the heathen, not for lack of receptivity, it is true, but for the lack of light itself. (I mean of course the light of the gospel, for he doubtless has some light.) In other words, the idiot does not see for want of mental eyes, the heathen for want of mental light. The idiot is blind, in the midst of light, the heathen has eyes but is in midnight darkness. The idiot, as a blind man, stands with the gospel guide Book in his hand: the heathen with undimmed vision, stands, eagerly gazing into blank darkness or through the dim star-light of tradition, but he can find no gospel guide Book to direct him to Christ. Can one of these unfortunate men be more deserving of punishment for not seeing and believing on Jesus than the other? Does not the heathen, because he feels his privation, appeal more strongly to our sympathy—to the sympathy of the Almighty—than the idiot? Can God save the idiot and at the same time damn the heathen for lack of faith in Christ?—for not performing (to him) an impossibility? I hear "a voice from the excellent glory," where "Justice and Judgment" sit enthroned, in thunder tones, answering, no!—It declares emphatically: "Thy ways are EQUAL." And angels and men, with confidence respond, "Shall not the Judge of the whole earth do right?"

Once more The great objection to Calvin's doctrine of the decrees is that it represents God as damning the reprobate for failing to repent and believe on Christ while He, without any personal fault of theirs, withholds from them the power to repent and believe—That He damns the reprobate for not doing what His decree puts beyond their ability to do. Now, in all candor and kindness, I ask is Calvin's doctrine any worse than Bro. Robey's? On Calvin's theory, God damns the reprobate for not doing what He has made impossible to them. On Bro. Robey's theory, He damns the heathen for not doing what the Church or God's providence has made impossible for them to do. Is it any worse to damn the reprobate for lack of strength, than the heathen for lack of light, when the latter is no more blamable for his lack than the former? And would not damning either, for the reason given, be as grossly unjust and cruel as damning the idiot or infant for not having mental eyes or mental development?

Now, Messrs. Editors, we cannot, in this case, fall back under cover of the legal maxim, which obtains among men, that "Ignorance of the law, which every one is bound to know, excuseth no one." The analogy between human and Divine government is by no means perfect For obvious reasons, adherence to this general rule is a necessity in human governments. But it is not so in that of the Almighty. Because of the imperfection of human knowledge, criminals would escape punishment in the absence of some such general rule of action. It would be difficult to prove that every criminal knew the law. But, as God's knowledge is perfect, His government is more flexible, and bends to each individual case, administering punishment in exact proportion to the culpability of each guilty party. In human governments, idiots are not punished because men know they do not understand the law. But God knows every case—that of the heathen man included—as perfectly as men know that of idiots. Besides, human legislators have their laws distributed, so that all men may know them. But neither God nor his church has distributed his law of gospel faith, and hence the heathen cannot possibly know its requirements.

In entire harmony with this view, is the teaching of Scripture on the subject. Paul says, "Where no law is, there is no transgression"—No transgression that is punishable by that law. Again, "Sin is not imputed where there is no law"—not imputed, so as to bring punishment on the one who does not possess or know the law. Now, while Paul does not make these statements with direct reference to the case of modern heathen, he evidently lays down a general principle of justice, that is as applicable to them as it was to those who lived between the ages of Adam and Moses.—The same just principle underlies the prohibition in human governments of all ex post facto laws.

After having endeavored to establish his theory on "general principles," Bro. Robey appeals to the Scriptures for proof. I have time and space to notice particularly only one passage that he adduces. He evidently relies mainly upon "the great commission" given to the apostles by the Saviour. He calls it "the Christian's Magna Charta." Let us examine that commission. It reads thus: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned." Now, it is conceded on all hands that this demand of faith embraces the heathen in its scope. It is admitted that it accompanies the gospel to the heathen—travels, pari passu, with the light of the gospel; but it is strenuously maintained that it never precedes the gospel—never goes in advance of its light. Indeed, Bro. Robey, in spite of his theory, does, in word, virtually admit as much. When the goodness of his heart and his sense of justice probably predominated, he said: "But according to the commission, when they—"the heathen"—hear the gospel, they are to believe it or be damned." Aye, when they hear the gospel, they are to believe it or be damned," and not before!

Now, Mr. Editor, let us see what the apostles said to the heathen when preaching to them under this commission. Probably the most important and conspicuous preaching, on record, is that of Paul, the great apostle of the Gentiles or heathen, at Athens. When he, for the first time, opened his commission to those heathen, what did he say? After calling attention to their idolatry, he said, "The times of this IGNORANCE God WINKED AT, but NOW commandeth all men everywhere to REPENT." Paul's meaning is so apparent that comment is hardly necessary. Does he not say, substantially, that because, before his coming to them, as a missionary, they were IGNORANT of God's character and requirements, as set forth in the gospel, He OVERLOOKED their idolatry? Does he not teach them plainly that then—his NOW—was the FIRST time that God ever required them to "repent"—turn from their idols to Him—in a GOSPEL sense?—That He had PREVIOUSLY "winked at" their failure to do so, because they were "ignorant" of the gospel demand? Remember, too, that this requirement of the commission had been in force, at Jerusalem, for about twenty years—That Paul's "NOW" could not refer to the time at which Jesus gave the commission, but to the time of the apostle's preaching under it. And if it was not in favor with the heathen for twenty years, why not for the same reason, be suspended in their case, for 1800 years?

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, and with due respect for Bro. Robey's ability, I must say that in his interpretation of this and other passages of scripture, he seems entirely to have ignored the analogy of faith; in the light of which we are to ascertain the meaning of particular and doubtful passages of God's word.

When construing "the great commission," why does he not say that infants and idiots, as well as the heathen, are damned because they do not believe the gospel? They are certainly not, by word, excepted from the requirement made therein, any more than the heathen. There is not, so far as I remember, a single passage of scripture, in which we are directly taught that idiots are saved—certainly not that they are saved unconditionally. Why then, I ask again, does not Bro. Robey say that they are lost if they do not believe in Christ? Simply because the analogy of faith positively forbids such an interpretation. The general and fundamental teaching of the Bible concerning the righteousness of God's character and His dealings with man, taken in connection with man's sense of justice and his knowledge of the mental imbecility of idiots, absolutely demands a different construction. Why not, then, apply this general and fundamental teaching of the Bible to the case of the heathen? Why not, in our charity, give them the benefit of this manifestly just principle of interpretation? For I think we have certainly seen that it would be just as inconsistent with both the direct and general teaching of the Bible concerning God's justice; and just as repugnant to man's own sense of right, to damn the heathen for not believing the gospel, as it would to damn infants and idiots for the same reason.

With your permission Messrs. Editors, I propose next week to notice the teaching of scripture touching the required condition of heathen salvation.

Notes From the Field.

NEEDS AND OPENINGS IN CHINA.

From time to time our two missionaries in China, Brothers Lambuth and Allen, have pressed upon the attention of the Board and the Church the fact that "great and effectual" doors are open to us. It seems too plain for debate or doubt that we are called as a Church to strengthen our forces in Shanghai, and to establish new stations at other centers of population and influence. In nearly all the foreign missionary journals we have convincing evidence of the great need and great opportunity in China.—Whole provinces are without the gospel, and yet nothing hinders their occupation but the want of means to send the missionaries, who wait to go. In a late number of the Chinese Recorder and Missionary Journal we find an instructive address by the Rev. George Piercy, well known as "the father of the Wesleyan Missions in China," upon the "Extension of Missionary Effort in the Canton Province." In this province the operations of the missionaries have been confined chiefly to the cities of Swatow and Canton. "In the city of Canton," says Mr. Piercy, "there are the representatives of six missionary societies, and one independent laborer; altogether fifteen men and four lady teachers. In each Mission here there are some tried and trustworthy native agents, and others are under training. . . Bearing in mind our own strength, and the number of our assistants, the time has come when we ought to make some aggression upon the heathenism beyond, some strenuous attempts to carry the gospel farther into the province."

In reading Mr. Piercy's statement of the need of the extension of missionary effort in the province of Canton, let us remember that the provinces accessible to our missionaries in Shanghai are as populous and needy.

Mr. Piercy says, in describing the field which he longs to occupy:

"The field is the province, except the north-east department of Chui-Chou-fu, which may properly be left to the care of our brethren located at Swatow. Inclusive of this, the area of the whole province is nearly equal to the area of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. Excluding Chui-Chou-fu, there are nine departments, containing seventy-one districts, each of which has a walled city; but the population varies greatly, from twenty thousand in many, up to a hundred and fifty thousand in two or three of the most densely inhabited. Great mercantile centers exist, such as Fat-shan, Kong-mun, Tai-nam, Ch'aut-sun, with vast numbers of people dwelling in them. Some towns in the silk districts contain from ten thousand to at least sixty thousand inhabitants. The villages are innumerable, yet we can roughly estimate them.—The topography of the Nam-hol district gives the names of 787 villages. Taking the average number of villages in each district at 400, we have a total of 28,400 villages in these nine departments. As a round number we may safely say the province contains from twenty to twenty-four millions of inhabitants. In the whole province there is not one of the district cities, or its suburbs, occupied by a resident Protestant missionary. In three or four of these cities there are a few Christians under the care of a native assistant, who is occasionally visited by a foreign missionary."

That is to say leaving out the cities of Canton and Swatow, and counting in them and their suburbs two millions of people—here is a province as large as Great Britain and Ireland, and nearly as populous, where there is not a single "resident Protestant missionary." If these millions lived in the moon it would not be our duty to send them the gospel—unless we could get there. But we can get to China in twenty days by steamer from San Francisco! Do these benighted millions need the gospel of Jesus Christ? Ask if they need the light of the sun. What would we be without the gospel? What has it done for us? It can do as much for the millions who "sit in darkness and in the shadow of death."

THE OSAKA ARSENAL.

The heathen nations see the superiority of our civilization. Alas! that they do not first seek that which alone makes us superior to them, and that we are not more zealous to give it to them—our Christianity.

Take the following from the Church Missionary Intelligencer, for October. It is a paragraph from a letter by the Rev. C. F. Warren, a Church of England missionary at Osaka, one of the Treaty ports in Japan. Mr. Warren says:

"Not far from the mint, and close by the castle, is the Osaka Arsenal.—There were two gentlemen to whom we were introduced on handing our letter from the Foreign Office. They received us very cordially, and gave us every facility we could wish for viewing every part of the establishment. We saw two bronze field-pieces cast, and others in various stages of progress toward the final polish. . . . I thoroughly enjoyed the visit, and was only saddened by the thought that engines of war and destruction, and not of peace and preservation, were here in process of manufacture."

A good man must sympathize with Mr. Warren in the sad reflections suggested by his visit to the Osaka Arsenal: "Whilst we may view such an establishment as exhibiting one feature of Japanese progress, surely it should stir up every Christian heart to pray for the spread of the gospel of peace, and for the hastening of that glorious day when the nations shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks, and they shall learn war no more."—After giving us an interesting account of the railway between Kole and Osaka, which was opened May 11, of this year, and which was built "under foreign supervision, the rails, iron-work for bridges, etc., being imported from the West," Mr. Warren concludes his letter with a sad account of the vices and idolatries of these quick-witted and enterprising people, who are as yet "without God, without Christ, and without hope."

An arsenal in Osaka, but no Christian Church! It is a commentary and a prophecy. Have Christian nations nothing but arsenals and railroads for Japan? Have we nothing for them but engines of war, or what, at least, can only increase their material power? Railroads and telegraphs in Japan will carry blessings—if only the Church will keep up with them.

SOWING TARES.

One thing is quite plain to all who use their eyes—the devil is busy.—"While men sleep he sows tares."—There is no end to his activity, as there is no measure to his hatred of Christ and his cause. How the devil does hate missionaries! During eighteen centuries he has followed in their track, "sowing tares" as thick as they could lie on the ground. Witness the missionary history recorded in The Acts of the Apostles. How often Satan "hindered" Paul! And he is the same accuser, slanderer, enemy, destroyer, to-day as he was in Iconium, in Lystra, in Corinth, in Athens, in Ephesus, in Rome. Well is he named—Devil, Satan, Apollyon! And he has had many helpers. Great kings, victorious generals, and rich merchants, have been in league with him. Witness the struggles of the East India Company to keep Christ out of Hindostan. But "He that sitteth in the heavens" had them in derision; the East India Company is dead and gone, and revival power is poured out on Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras. Some weeks ago I mentioned the fact that hundreds of educated young Hindoos are now learning infidelity in the pages of Huxley, Spencer, Colenso, and Bradlaugh. But a few days since we read a missionary's complaint that the United States was "sending more rum than gospel" to Turkey and Syria.

Now read the following from the Missionary Record, for October, organ of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland. The paragraph occurs in a letter written by the Rev. Dr. Faulds, a missionary in Japan. He writes from Yeddo, May 10, 1874. He had been looking through a Japanese book store. Dr. Faulds says:

"Here is a curious Japanese two-volumed book. A peculiar grin seems to overspread the bronzed and wrinkled face of the book-seller as the missionary looks into it. Ah! what are those curious, half-ludicrous figures, with something which recalls sacred memories to us? This is the beginning of the infidel literature of modern Japan, and is said to owe much to the influence of one of our countrymen. I cannot speak from intimate knowledge of its contents as yet, but there can be no doubt as to its general tendency, and that it is an intensely coarse and scurrilous attack on Christ. Fortunately, as a Japanese Christian remarked to me, it is accompanied with a good map of Bible-lands, and contains many passages of Scripture, and, as he thought, may end many of his countrymen to read and think about this life which excited no interest before. Still, it is sad to think that in a crisis like this, when the nation is about to crystalize into some permanent form—a good one, let us hope—there should be those among our countrymen eager to prevent the Japanese from receiving the gospel of Christ."

There is no greater question for Christian nations to consider than this: Will we give to the great heathen nations now in the throes of a new birth—that must be into life or into a deeper death—the gospel of the Son of God?

PRAYER FOR MISSIONS.

I am deeply impressed with the repeated requests of foreign missionaries for the prayers of the Church at home. A missionary in Japan closes a letter in these words: "Let me beg our friends and supporters at home to pray very earnestly that Japan may be fully opened, and that God's word may have free course, and be glorified throughout this land. Surely the cry cannot go up in vain, and the blessing cannot long be withheld."

A missionary in India closes his letter thus: "As our prayers have been frequent and fervent in behalf of the Church at home, that the good work may more and more spread and prosper among you, I trust that we will not be forgotten in your prayers, that the same precious blessings may be abundantly poured out on us, and that the Churches of India may experience such a revival as has never yet been seen."

How the Church of Antioch prayed for her missionaries—Paul and Barnabas—and how abundantly their labors were blessed! I grieve to write the words—but, as it seems to me, prayer for our missionaries, for Mission work, for the salvation of the heathen, is sadly and ominously lacking in the worship of our congregations. How seldom does the preacher, when he leads the prayers of the congregation, pray for our missionaries, or for the conversion of the heathen! And we do not hear it in our prayer-meetings. What of the prayers that are offered about our family altars and in our closets? May He who loved and died for all men save us from selfishness and narrowness in our prayers! No wonder so many in the Church have leanness of soul. No wonder we lack money. No wonder we are so far behind many weaker Churches in missionary enterprise.

We must pray if we would prosper. No plans, devices, Boards of Managers, Secretaries, Anniversaries, not all the machinery in the world can substitute prayer. We want faith, power, life. It is no great thing for a chemist to make a dead man's arm jerk under the influence of galvanic currents, but he cannot give it the motion and power of life. Let us all pray—for pardon that we have done so little—for divine awakening that we may do more—for God's blessing on the labors of our missionaries—and for the outpouring of his Spirit upon the heathen world.

And let our chief clergy, our Bishops, and Elders, and Doctors, before the congregation, set the example.

The Bible and the Republic.

The Protestant apologists, after all, could advise nothing more than the reading of the Bible. I can not comprehend how the Protestant peoples of Europe delay so in embracing the republic. Often in my reflections upon history I have maturely considered that vivacity with which the Latin peoples comprehend and the rapidity with which they realize the most advanced ideas, especially in the sphere of politics. Here all the elements are employed to keep the people in complete ignorance. In my travels through Switzerland what most astonished me was the quantity of liberal ideas which there descend from the pulpits, mingled with the aroma of religious ideas and eternal hopes. When I heard in the Church of St. Peter, at Geneva, a sermon full of allusions to the spirit of the age, the genius of liberty, to the God of the Gospel, the Book and Code of democracies, involuntarily there passed through my memory the sermons I had listened to in my parish church, filled with threatenings, with terror, with pictures of hell, with all the rhetoric calculated to belittle the mind and cast it into dejection and despair, which can only end in the slavery of the conscience and the soul. If the Latin peoples could read, if they were obliged, at least every Sunday to turn the page of their Bibles instead of hearing the chants of their priests, in a strange and unintelligible language, would they not have been two centuries ago republicans?—because the Bible is a book full, from the first page to the last, I will not say of republican ideas, but certainly of republican sentiments, and sentiments, with their poetry, have greater influence than ideas among the people.

The Nile, the river of mysteries caressing the stones of sepulchres, bears on its warm waters, which wind through the desert, like the Milk Way through the sky, the osier cradle of the enemy of kings, the savior of peoples. One of the first and most beautiful songs of the Bible is devoted to celebrating that rout of Pharaoh and his horsemen; drowned in the waters of the Red Sea. As soon as the tribes established themselves in the promised land they founded a republic, ruled by magistrates called Judges, and whenever any tyrant arose the sentiments of liberty and the eloquent speech of tribunes were heard even in the hearts and on the lips of their women. Jael with her hammer drove the nail into the temple of the tyrant Sisera. Deborah sings beneath the palm-tree the victory of the humble over nine hundred war chariots mailed with iron, and all whelmed in the wave of the rushing Kishon. At the feet of Gideon fell the golden diadems and the purple mantles from the temples and the shoulders of the princes of Midia, and their soldiers fell in the field like the grain before the sickle of the reaper. Jephthah avenged himself upon his people, who had forsaken him for the son of the harlot, by saving them from conquerors and tyrants.

Demosthenes never spoke against the kings of Macedon as the last of the Judges speaks against the kings whom his misguided tribes demanded. Even yet when we wish to condemn the servile tendencies of the masses we must repeat that sublime language and announce the same punishment. The discourse of Samuel is reiterated from age to age as well in the imprecations of Danton against the kings of France as in the songs of Schiller which paint the birth of the republic of Switzerland.—EMILIO CASTELAR, in Harper's Magazine for December.

What a Merchant Should be,

A merchant should be an honorable man. Although a man cannot be an honorable man without being an honest man, yet a man may be strictly honest without being honorable.

Honesty refers to the principles and feelings. You may pay your debts punctually, you may not defraud any man, and yet you may act dishonorably. You act dishonorably when you give your correspondents a worse opinion of your rivals in trade than you know they deserve. You act dishonorably when you sell your commodities at less than their real value in order to get away your neighbor's customers. You act dishonorably when you purchase at higher than the market price in order that you may raise the market upon another buyer. You act dishonorably when you draw accommodation bills, and pass them to your banker for discount as if they arose out of real transactions. You act dishonorably in any case where your external conduct is at variance with your real opinions. You act dishonorably if, when carrying on a prosperous trade, you do not allow your servants and assistants, through whose exertions you obtain your success, to participate in your prosperity. You act dishonorably if, when you become rich, you are unmindful of the favors you received when poor. — Hebrew Leader.

A Word, Mothers.

Each mother is a historian. She writes not the history of empires or nations on paper, but she writes her own history on the imperishable mind of her child. That tablet and that history will remain indellible when time shall be no more. That history each mother will meet again and read with eternal joy or unutterable woe in the far ages of eternity. This thought should weigh on the mind of every mother, and render her deeply circumspect and prayerful, and faithful in her solemn work of training up her children for heaven and immortality. The minds of children are very susceptible and easily impressed. A word, a look, a frown, may engrave an impression on the mind of a child which no lapse of time can efface or wash out. You walk along the seashore when the tide is out, and you form characters or write words or names in the smooth, white sand which lies spread out so clear and beautiful at your feet, according as your fancy may dictate, but the running tide shall in a few hours wash out and efface forever all that you have written. Not so the lines of truth or error, which your conduct imprints on the mind of your child. There you write impressions for the eternal good or ill of your child, which neither the flood of storms of earth can wash out, nor death's cold finger can erase nor the slow-moving ages of eternity obliterate. How careful, then, should each mother be of herself in the treatment of her child—How prayerful, how serious, and how earnest to write the truths of God on his mind—those truths which shall be his guide and teacher when her voice shall be silent in death, and her lips no longer move in prayer in his behalf, in commending her dear child to her covenant God.

Wrinkle Rubbers.

"Arose" by any other name would be "got up."

The best way to rise in a lady's estimation is not by stares.

What is better than a promising young man? A paying one.

A splendid ear but a very poor voice, as the organ-grinder said to the donkey.

It is said that no man ever worshiped a brazen image who had once tusseled with a life-insurance agent.

Short dresses are coming into fashion again, and young ladies are experiencing the old, old difficulty of getting a No. 4 foot into a No. 2 shoe.

A man drank a bottle of mucilage thinking it was some medicine that his doctor had prescribed. He says that he has felt considerably "stuck-up" ever since.

A Jersey City lawyer was making a high-flown speech the other day, telling about angels' tears, weeping willows and tomb-stones, when his Honor said: "Confine your remarks to the dog-fight."

"Oh, George, your sister is a nice girl; but she does dress her head up so." "Yes," said George; "but it is the fashion; there's nothing in it, you know."

"Sir," said an astonished landlady to a traveler who had sent his cup forward for the seventh time, "you must be very fond of coffee!" "Yes, madam, I am," he replied, "or I should never have drank so much water to get a little."

Chin-music: A retreating chin denotes weakness; a projecting one harsh strength; a pointed chin means acuteness; a soft, fat double chin, a love of good things; and an angular chin judgment and firmness. A flat chin denotes coldness; a round, dimpled one, goodness; a small chin, fear, and an ur-chin, mischief.

Josh Billings was asked, "How fast does sound travel?" His idea is that it depends a good deal on the noise you are talking about. "The sound of a dinner horn, for instance, travels half a mile in a second, while an invitasbum tew get up in the morning I have known to be 3 quarters uv an hour going up 2 pair uv stairs, and then not have strength enuff left to be heard."

ONE OF PARSON BROWNLOW'S—Parson Brownlow tells a good story of an old Presbyterian bachelor preacher, known almost as a woman-hater until he was nearly fifty years old, when he married and settled somewhere among the mountains of North Carolina. The parson says: Our bachelor friend was preaching on the sinner's excuses. "I have bought a piece of ground, and wish to go and see it," said one. [illegible] of inclination to attend to divine things," said the preacher. "Another said, 'I have bought five yoke of oxen, and must needs go and prove them.' This seems a case of necessity. A third said, 'I have married a wife, and therefore I can not come.' Here is a case of natural impossibility, from which we may infer," continued our bachelor preacher, "that one woman will pull a man further from the Lord than ten steers."

The Cross (X) Mark is to remind you that your subscription has expired. Let all renew promptly.

We beg leave to call the attention of many of our subscribers to the cross-marks which appear on their papers. The mark explains itself. There are many whose subscriptions have expired within the past one, two and three months, but thinking that they are only waiting to forward their orders for renewals, with the cash, by their pastors, to Conference, we have cheerfully borne with them. After Conference we shall be compelled to erase from our books the names of all who shall have failed to renew at its close.

The thirty-eighth session of the North Carolina Conference of the M. E. Church, South, will convene in this city on Wednesday, the second of December, just one week from the date of this issue. Our people are preparing to give the Conference a handsome entertainment, and to make the visit of this body to the City of Oaks a pleasant one. A full attendance of the brethren is expected, and there will be present a large number of visitors from every portion of the Conference.

Subscriptions to the Daily ADVOCATE are coming in and we are pleased to know that the enterprise is meeting with favor. We shall endeavor to make it an interesting and complete journal of Conference week, and invoke the aid and support of all our preachers and friends. Send in your names before Conference convenes and help us to make it a success.

We are pleased to learn that Rev. O. J. Brent, who was for some days seriously ill from the effects of poison, placed by some miscreant in the food at a wedding-feast, has recovered and will be at our Conference.

Our Wants.

We want ten thousand subscribers to the Christian Advocate That is the big want—the prime desideratum,—and if that is satisfied our other wants can be supplied. We want to enlarge the Advocate and make the quantity of reading matter second to none in the family of Advocates and other religious papers. We want to furnish the office with new, clear-faced type of every quality and size, though that we have on hand, fully meets the demands of the present size and style of the paper. We want to increase the interest in every department of the paper and to subsidize every means of accomplishing this, let the cost be what it may. We want to increase still more the popularity which we are proud to say the Advocate possesses, and make it a power in the land "whose suggestions and words of warning and rebuke shall be heard in Church and State." We want to further the cause of religion and morality, disseminate true doctrine, and advance Methodism to that place in the esteem and reverence of the people of this State and country to which it is entitled by reason of its illustrious and venerated ancestry, its triumphs and progress and the good it has done and is doing for the elevation of men, individually and as members of society. We want to drive out ignorance from our homes and light them with the intelligent appreciation of what Methodism has been, is now, and can and will be. We want to beat down and destroy the ignorant prejudices which some people, who pretend to extra rank and special prominence in society, entertain against the Methodist Church. We want to put a quietus to their supercilious sneers and make them feel and acknowledge that the most untiring, faithful, earnest and powerful worker at the gospel lever to overturn infidelity, irreligion, immorality and social abuses, has been the Methodist Church.

All this we want to do, and much more. Men can propose to themselves no higher end than to do good and to assist others in accomplishing it. With the aid of our friends, the Advocate can reach a vantage ground where its power to do good will be greatly increased and irresistable.—Let us have that aid: we want it.

Our Two Churches

The closing of the Conference year finds the pastors of our two churches, in Raleigh, in high favor with their people as well as with our citizens generally. They have each done good and faithful work on their charges, have toiled in and out of season, have had obstacles to face but have bravely met and successfully overcome them. Their return to their respective charges would give very great satisfaction.

Christian Manhood.

The Apostle Paul declares that when he became a man he "put away childish things." Not the innocence of childhood—not its grace—not its mirth—not its trustful heart and meek docility; but its infirmities—the infirmities which distinguish it from manhood. Among the things which the great apostle to the Gentiles "put away" was the predominance of the body over the mind, or of the animal over the spiritual nature. When a child enters the world it has for a time only one principal function to fulfill—to eat that it may live and grow. At first it has no apparent power of thought; and months pass away before the dawn of the intellect is perceptible only to the close observer. During the early years of life the physical sensations are exceedingly intense. Nothing tastes to us in later years as it did when we were children. No new landscape impresses the eye as new scenes used to impress it. Our ears catch faint sounds less quickly—all our senses are comparatively dull. The reason is that in childhood the mind is as yet undeveloped. The body is the main thing. Afterward the mind is occupied with thought and the body and its sensations are not so keenly noticed.

The inference from this fact is that the degree of one's manhood is indicated by the degree of mastery of the mind over the body. Paul's appreciation of the truth of this great principle is manifest in the frequent recurrence, in his epistles, of his favorite figure for the unregenerated and the regenerate heart—the "flesh" and the "spirit." "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh. If ye live after the flesh ye shall die. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. Ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh." Of himself he writes, "I keep under my body and bring it into subjection." Whoever, on the other hand, allows his body to usurp the position of master, and dictate to the mind, is unlike Paul, still a child. There is also the infirmity of the will peculiar to youth. It shows itself by many symptoms—namely—irresolution, instability, feeble power of resistance, impulsiveness. If a man's temperament is such that his body is disposed to claim supremacy over his mind and conscience, he must summon the will to his aid, and if he is not able to resolve, with sufficient firmness to keep his resolution, that the body shall not govern, he is deficient in christian manhood. A large proportion of the sins which men commit are sins of the body. There are mental sins—such as pride, ambition, hatred, unbelief. But whoever masters his body has taken a decided step toward the subjugation of these perpetual enemies of our peace.

Intemperance in drinking or in eating is a sin of the body. It is mental inability to restrain the appetite for food or drink. He who is a slave to any bodily appetite is a degraded man, in his own esteem and in that of others. Such slavery is inconsistent with purity. That the mind can control the body is evident. Men have been able, under the influence of strong mental emotion, such as excessive grief, to deny even this, the strongest of all appetites, and starve themselves to death. Sloth is a sin of the body. It is mental inability to restrain the appetite for sleep and for physical ease. Indolence is as truly a sin, and as really degrading, in its way, as intemperance. For a man to fall short of duty through laziness, is simply debasing bondage to the body, and is justly classed with the things which ought to be "put away."

Lust is a sin of the body. The man who is unable to govern his passions, to preserve his personal purity, however imperious the appetite which would lead him to sacrifice it, and who cannot, under all circumstances restrain that appetite, when his judgment and conscience forbid its gratification, is a weak man and worthy of contempt. But self-conquest involves more than the subjugation of the body. The mind itself must be under control. True christian manhood includes the power to govern the temper, the imagination, the memory, the taste, the affections. It includes the power of application—the power to direct the course of one's thoughts and to resist evil impulses, such as the impulse to skepticism or impurity. Every christian may say with Paul, not only "I keep under my body and bring it into subjection," but more than this, "Though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh, (for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds), casting down imagination, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." Self conquest is a grand achievement. It is a sublime sight to see a man who is able day by day to say to himself, not my will but the will of the Father be done.

The true, the successful man is he who finds out the work which God has assigned him in life, and who steadily pursues and accomplishes his appointed task, regardless of all solicitations to turn aside from it to the right hand or to the left. No great work can be accomplished without self sacrifice. Our returns will be in proportion to our expenditure. We are like candles, which give no light except by the consumption of their substance. Such self-sacrifice is impossible except as we keep the eye on the Lord Jesus, the great example of self-sacrifice, who said of himself—"The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up." It is impossible unless the spirit of Christ dwells within us. With Paul we should ever inquire, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?"

It is manly—it is noble—it is Christian—it is Godlike to live not for time, but for eternity. To resist the materialistic tendencies of the age—to breathe a higher, purer atmosphere of spirituality, and to look not at the things which are seen, which are temporal, but at the things which are not seen, which are eternal. Greater is he that ruleth his own spirit than he that taketh a city. God sets a high and noble aim before us in life. Let us strive to obtain it, if we would be developed into true Christian manhood.

Thanksgiving Day.

To-morrow (Thursday) is the day set apart by the President of the United States, and the Governor of this State, for thanksgiving to God for the blessings bestowed upon the country during the past year. While our hearts should always be filled with a continued sense of gratitude to Heaven for the life, protection, mental and physical health, national prosperity and peace that we enjoy, yet it is eminently fit that a day certain—a national holiday—should be set apart on which the nation with one voice, may acknowledge the goodness and kindness of Providence. Other nations have grand fete days on which they celebrate memorable epochs in their history, or extol the virtues of their kings or power of noble families. The ancients observed days set apart for the worship of the gods which in their systems of mythology, were supposed to direct and over-rule certain departments of human life and destiny; but their worship was the worship of flattery intended to propitiate the gods whom they basely feared, and not the religious worship of grateful hearts. In other christian countries the Church, of course, has its days of fasting, prayer and thanksgiving, but in no other than ours does the government, as such and outside of any connection with the church, prescribe and recommend the observance of a day for the acknowledgment of Heaven's gracious benefits.

It is said that during some dark days of despondency in the early history of New England, it was proposed, at a public assembly, that a day of fasting and prayer should be appointed on which the people should humiliate themselves before the Almighty and regain the favor which they had seemingly lost. An old farmer arose and rebuking them for their blindness and ingratitude, showed them the blessings and mercies which they were enjoying but disregarding, and proposed that instead of a day of fasting and humiliation, one of thanksgiving and joy should be appointed. It was done and ever since that time the custom has been growing in favor. In the New England States it is observed universally and is the season for the reunion of the scattered members of families, for feasting, joy and merriment, after the religious exercises of the day have been performed.

It is meet that a christian people should be cheerful and full of joy and gratitude. It is the purpose of christianity to make men happy and joyful, by making them better. God loves a bright and cheery face and happy spirit far more than he does a long gloomy countenance and despondent heart.

We have much to thank Heaven for. General prosperity abounds—no fearful epidemic has prevailed, and the bonds of peace unite us with the nations of the world. Our country, by the continual development of its wonderful and exhaustless resources, its strides in material prosperity, the improvement in all branches of industry, the progress of learning and civilization, commands the admiration and esteem of all peoples on the globe. Our people have rebuked dishonesty and corruption in government and our political sky grows brighter. We have health and plenty, freedom in every thing wherein we ought to be free, and the great and priceless blessings which the Christian religion bestows. Let us thank God for every thing!

TYPOGRAPHICAL BLUNDERS.—Rev Dr. Talmage is lenient to reporters and printers. He says:

"Faults are often charged on reporters and printers which belong really to the speaker or writer. If people realized how many inarticulate utterances come from pulpit, platform and forum, the reporter would be excused for occasional mistakes. If people know how much infamous chirography comes to a newspaper office there would be more leniency for the printer."

The preachers are earnestly requested to collect all monies due on subscriptions for the Advocate and be prepared for a full settlement at Conference.

Fragments.

There are in the United States, of the Methodist family, 43,658 preachers, and 3,031,988 lay members. In the world there are, of the same family, 87,997 preachers and 3,923,512 lay members.

The Northern cities are crowded with men and women out of employment, who are willing to work for any wages that will afford a bare subsistence. The Bowery Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association in New York has a registered list of decent men who are willing to work through the winter for very small wages, and also a large number who will work for the winter for their living only.

The M. E. Church has 12 bishops, 80 Annual Conferences, 23,551 members, 18,958 Sunday-schools and 1,586,636 Sunday-school teachers and scholars. For Conference claimants there has been raised in 1874 the sum of $159,876.85; for missions $367,960.62 (this does not include the amounts raised by local missionary societies). There are 14,983 church edifices and 4982 parsonages, the combined value of which is $78,516,693.

Forty years ago, the inhabitants of the Fiji Islands were the most horrible cannibals in the world. Every fond passion ran riot and the most debasing practices were engaged in. One chief who put down a stone for every man he had killed and eaten, boasted of 900. Now there are 110,000 converts to christianity on these islands. The Wesleyan Methodists have 25,000 members meeting in class, 2,000 day schools, 900 catechumens, 2,000 Sunday schools with 53,000 scholars, sixty three native assistant missionaries, 1,000 local preachers, while upwards of 100,000 persons sit under their ministry.

DAILY CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE For Conference Week.

We propose to issue during the session of Conference to be held in this city, commencing Dec. 2nd, a Daily Christian Advocate.

The Conference will be of great interest, many matters of importance affecting the good of the church will be discussed and passed upon, and it is desirable that our people should be informed fully of its proceedings as they occur. We are aware that it will necessitate much expense and trouble, but believe it to be a practicable undertaking.

The Advocate will contain a conference and church directory, full reports of proceedings, condensed reports of discussions and sermons, editorial reviews and suggestions, church news, a brief synopsis of the proceedings of the General Assembly and Grand Lodge of Masonry which will be in session at the same time, together with other matters of general interest

In order to meet the expense of publication, the paper will be furnished daily during the session, postage paid, 30 cents per copy. We earnestly solicit our preachers and others to receive subscriptions and forward the names and funds at once so that our books can be arranged before the meeting of Conference. Let the preachers make the announcement at their appointments, and when they cannot give the matter their personal attention let them designate a person or persons to canvass for the paper. Any person sending us ten subscribers with the cash, will receive the Daily Advocate, free of charge.

PROF. TYNDALL appends the following paragraph to the authorized edition of his Belfast address:

"In connection with the charge of atheism I would make one remark.—Christian men are proved by their writing to have their hours of weakness and doubt as well as their hours of strength and conviction, and men like myself share in their own way these variations of mood and tense. Were the religious views of many assailants the only alternative ones, I do not know how strong the claims of the doctrine of 'Material Atheism' upon my allegiance might be. Probably they would be very strong; but, as it is, I have noticed, during years of self-observation, that it is not in hours of clearness and vigor that this doctrine commends itself to my mind; that in the presence of stronger and healthier thoughts it ever dissolves and disappears, as offering no solution to the mystery in which we dwell and of which we form a part."

In his old age Garibaldi is falling into poverty and the island home on Caprera is becoming desolate.—The proud and venerable patriot is finding friends in his necessities, and might never have come to such straits if his troubles had been previously known. Money has been sent to him by some of his admirers in America, and his wants are now attracting attention in his native land. A meeting of the editors of Italian newspapers was held at Rome on the 28th of October in his behalf, and the result will doubtless be to gather a fund for his support during the few remaining years that in the course of nature are allotted to him.

It seems to be definitely settled that Dr Tiffany, of Washington city, will fill the pulpit of the Trinity M. E. Church in Chicago, commencing some time next winter. Dr. Newman, who has been round the world with Bishop Harris, will take Dr. Tiffany's place at the noted Metropolitan church in Washington

Rev. L. Shell writes us that he has had gracious seasons on Mocksville circuit. One hundred and ninety conversions and about 100 accessions.

Rev. Jas. Mahoney writes: We have had gracious revival seasons on the Cokesbury circuit this year. I closed a meeting last Thursday at "Bethel" of only 5 days continuance assisted by Rev. Owen Spell, which result in 20 conversions; all joined the church. I also baptized 17 children; the church very greatly revived. That meeting closed my protracted meetings on the circuit; have had a good revival at every appointment; over 80 added to the church this year. The finances will be brought up well, I think. I hope to compare notes, in regard to reports of circuit and work generally, favorably with any of my brethren.

Rev. C. C. Dodson writes: I have been having some prosperity on the Tarboro circuit this year, more than 40 persons converted; 32 have joined the church, others are seeking the Pearl of Great Price. This is a powerful move for this rock ribbed and iron bound region. Pray for us that the good work may go on. You know something of this country. The Senior Editor has been here and knows of the bitter predjudices existing against our church and its peculiar tenets, but thank God they are giving away, slowly it may be, yet very surely. Dr. Closs has done a faithful work for us; he is abundant in labors—preaches with great power and acceptability. Your paper is popular and is taken in all of the Methodist families on my charge.

Rev. J. W. Wheeler writes: You may state for the benefit of your readers that we have recently enjoyed a gracious revival of God's work in our church in Statesville. The membership were greatly quickened, and about 30 souls professed to find Christ precious. We have had 15 accessions, one profession, and 5 by letter during the year; others will join. We were greatly assisted by the faithful labors of Bro. Daniel May of the Conference who was with us 3 days of the meeting, and "proved himself to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of God." The praise be unto God!

Rev. L. J. Holden writes: It is with gratitude to Almighty God that I can inform you of another glorious revival at Rocky Mount, which commenced the 3rd Sunday in Oct. lasting two weeks, resulting in the conversion of 32 souls and the addition of about 25 to the church. Truly has God been with me during this year. In the name of God have we raised our banner and many have joined the ranks.

We have had two hundred and nineteen (219) converts on this circuit and about one hundred and seventy added to the church; all the churches revived and are laboring for the cause of our master."

Rev. J. C. Hartsell writes: Our fourth Quarterly meeting was held at Rutherford College, commencing 30th Oct. and continuing more than a week. The meeting was one of extraordinary interest and profit, 49 souls converted to God, and over 30 accessions to the church. The church was graciously revived, many were made happy in a Saviour's love. Many of the students were among the converts, some of whom will doubtless be called to the work of the ministry. There is quite a number of excellent young men in this institution. Dr. Burkhead, our much loved, able and very efficient P. E., was with us nearly all the time, laboring in the pulpit and altar with great power and acceptability. His sermons and exhortations were all full of point and power. Bro. Abernethey (President of the college,) Dr. York, Stimpson and other local preachers were with us, and did valuable service in the pulpit and out of it, and are in full accord with us in the doctrine and discipline of the church.

Bro. Abernethey is a genial good man, and loved by his students, is an excellent teacher, and we believe, is doing much good.

We are glad, also, to say, that our good friend and Bro. Wetmore of the Episcopal church was with us a part of the time, laboring earnestly in the altar for the salvation of souls, and his heart was made glad at the conversion of his two sons, who are young men of much promise.

This circuit is improving spiritually and financially; and will we trust ere long compare favorably with others of the same size. My general health is much improved since I came here, and I thank God, and take courage. To God be all the praise.

Permit me also to state that the Advocate is well received and read by us with great pleasure: and now Messrs. Editors, as you like brevity, I will close by saying pray for us that the word of Lord may have free course and be glorified.

In speaking of an accession of twenty persons to the Methodist Church in Calcutta, the Foreign Missionary says: "A noteworthy feature of this work is the fact that the meetings are frequently attended by Roman Catholics, Hindoos, Brahmas, and even Mohammedans. One Mohammedan has been converted and baptized, and several Hindoos have been awakened, but not as yet brought to a decision. A considerable number of Roman Catholics have been converted.

We have received the report of the Board of Directors of the Asylum for the Insane, together with the elaborate, learned and well written report of Dr. E. Grissom, Superintendent. The latter is a valuable document and its reviews, suggestions and sentiments do credit to the head and heart of Dr. Grissom, who is emphatically the right man in the right place. We will notice his report at length next week, and will draw upon it for interesting reading matter for our columns.

The accomplished editor of the PIEDMONT PRESS was in Raleigh last week whither bound or on what purpose bent was not made manifest to his anxious friends. He wrote the following for the PRESS and then hurried to Raleigh: "The word love in the "Mellow Indian tongue" is SCHEMLENDAMOURTCHWAGER. Only think of it, girls, through your myriad fascinations, causing respectable young men to fall head over heels in schemlendamourtchwager with you."

THE UNCIVILIZED RACES OF MEN IN ALL COUNTRIES OF THE WORLD. By Rev. J. G. Wood, M. A. F. L. S., author of "Illustrated Natural History of Animals," etc, etc. Published by J. Brainard & Co. New York.

This is an invaluable compendium of the manners and customs of the various uncivilized races of the world, and of their physical, social, mental moral and religious characteristics. It is the result of many years travel and close observation and study of the peoples whom it describes. The author seems to have visited every section and to have become acquainted with every division and subdivision of the human family that comes within the class of which he writes, to wit, the uncivilized. There are few men, even among the most cultivated and best informed readers, who have an intimate knowledge of the variety and character of the different people, who inhabit our earth. This book presents, to all, in an interesting and attractive style nearly all that needs be (if indeed not all that can be) known of the uncivilized races.

The author failed to give a full account of the American tribes of Indians which was discovered to be such an important part of such a treatise that an addition has been made by American writers, containing a minute description of the various tribes of the "red men of the forest."

The book contains over 1500 pages, is well bound, neatly printed and handsomely illustrated.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, SCRIBNER & CO., NEW YORK. $4 PER ANNUM. This magazine for December, conducted by J. G. Holland, one of the first writers of the day has been received. It ranks high in the family of periodicals and is conducted with rare ability, The present number contains the last of Edward King's series of "Great South" papers, which, by the way, are to be published in book form and will be valuable as an index to the mineral, agricultural, manufacturing and social interests of the South.

ST NICHOLAS, AN ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS., Scribner &Co., New York, conducted by Mary Mapes Dodge. $3 a year. A gem for children.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE, Harper and Bro. New York, $4 a year. The December number of this old established magazine is on our table. It is in its 50th volume and is as fresh in its old age, as (we suppose) it was in its youth. It is one of the American literary institutions and we can unqualifiedly recommend it to our people—a thing we would not willingly do, however, for the WEEKLY.

OLD AND NEW, Roberts Bros, Boston, conducted by Edward E. Hale. $4 per annum. Mr. Hale is one of the soundest American writers, and the OLD AND NEW derives interest and value from his oversight.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.—This body organised on the 16th inst., a quorum of both houses being present. Col. R. F. Armfield was elected President of the Senate, and will in the event of a vacancy in the office of Governor within the next two years, succeed to that distinguished position. Messrs. Morehead, Waring, and Standford were prominently mentioned in connection with the Presidency of the Senate, but the choice fell upon Col. Armfield who will wear his honors well and worthily.

Mr. Robinson, of Macon, was reelected to the Speakership of the House of Representatives. He was the Speaker of the last House, is a young man of integrity, talent and zeal and presides with dignity and impartiality. Johnstone Jones, Esq., late of the Charlotte OBSERVER, was elected Principal Clerk of the Senate; Col. Cameron, of the Hillsboro RECORDER, Principal clerk of the House. Mr. Winston, of Bertie, received the position of Reading Clerk of the Senate, Mr. Wash Hardy, a like position in the House. Capt. D. P. Mast, of Winston, one of the worthiest men who offered for positions, was elected in the face of strong opponents, to the position of Enrolling Clerk of the Assembly.

The two Houses have got into working order, but as yet not many bills of general importance have been introduced. A committee was appointed to consider and report upon the wisdom and policy of calling a convention to amend the constitution. In the House, Mr. Staples, of Guilford, introduced a bill granting amnesty for offences and crimes, of whatever nature, perpetrated by persons connected with the ku klux, Union Leagues or other political organizations. Mr. Dortch, of Wayne, introduced a bill to prevent usury, fixing the legal rate of interest at 6 PER CENT, allowing 8 PER CENT, for the loan of money, but making it indictable to take a greater rate, directly or indirectly.

The number of young men in the Assembly is one of its charactristic features. We trust the session will be short and full of wise and profitable legislation.

Newbern Times: During last week a tract of woods ten miles in extent, between Goose and Beard's Creeks, was burning, and the greater portion destroyed, the loss being great. While Mr. J. A. Perry and wife, of Burke county, were out in the field, their little child about 18 months old, by some means fell into a large pot of boiling water and was scalded to death. When the child was taken out, the flesh as well as skin came off at the touch.

Two negroes went to the house of Mr. Setzer (an old gentleman living near Salisbury, who was supposed to have accumulated a large amount of money,) and asked for some fire, saying they were encamped near the house. Mrs. Setzer arose and granted their request. In a short while they returned, saying their fire had gone out and asked for more.—Mrs. S. suspecting something was wrong, admitted only one, locking the door behind him. Going into the room, and while Mrs. S. was getting the fire, the negro asked old Mr. S., who was in bed, for the loan of $50. Being told that he had no money to loan, the negro drew a pistol and said he would have it any way, at the same time firing his pistol and shooting Mr. S. in the mouth. He drew his knife to finish his work, when Mrs. S., with a presence of mind and heroism which deserve commendation, rushed upon the negro, and with one blow of a shovel upon his head, felled him to the floor. The negro died in a few minutes. Mr. Setzer has since died from the pistol wound.

Willie's Little Brown Sister

One bright, sunny morning, Mrs. Howe was cleaning away the breakfast things in the kitchen of her pretty home in Colorado, and her three little boys were prospecting for silver mines in the yard, when an old squaw came in and stood bolt upright, looking at her, and seeming quite as much at home as if she were a part of the furniture and had been there ever since the house was built. She was wrapped around her just as the warriors wear their blankets, and Mrs. Howe would not have known, at first that she was a squaw and not a warrior, if it had not been for the bundle on her back.

This bundle was nothing more than a papoose—that is, an Indian baby—tied down upon a piece of board. Its arms laid along its sides, and from head to foot, it was bandaged fast against the board, so that it could not move any part of its poor little body; and then it was hung on the squaw's back by a broad band of buffalo skin. It had no clothing but a few rags, and seemed very hungry and miserable. When Mrs. Howe took notice of it, the old squaw unfastened the band and stood it up in a corner, as one would put away a cane.

Three boys came running in to see it, and gathered around while mother warmed some milk and gave it a drink. It was so curious to see it drink without putting both hands into the cup, as babies usually do; but it seemed to enjoy its milk almost as much as other babies. It could not look glad, for it was too wretched; but it did look grateful, and Mrs. Howe felt like crying as she looked at the poor, patient little creature, standing like a broom-handle, so stiff that one could not caress without hurting it.

The old squaw sat on the floor and took some food that Mrs. Howe gave her, and made the oldest boy understand that the papoose was not hers, but her daughter's; that its mother was dead, and that she would like to give it away. He told his mother, and begged her to take it. It was a little girl, and Willie, the youngest, said it would be their little sister—a little brown sister.

They all laughed and danced and shouted with delight at the thought of having a little brown sister, and begged their mother to take it immediately and unfasten it, so that they could hold it on their knees.

Willie ran and got his little rocking chair, and insisted on having the baby to rock, right away; but Mrs. Howe knew that her husband would not like to have her take an Indian baby to raise. Indeed, he quite hated Indians and did not allow one to come near the house when he was at home. So she told the boys it would not do—their father would be very angry; but all three cried and begged. They had no little sister, and this one had such bright black eyes!

The old squaw lifted it and stood it up against Mrs Howe's knee, so that it would fall if she moved without holding it. Then, without saying a word, the old squaw went away.

Mrs Howe gave it a warm bath, made it sweet and clean, and dressed it in some of the clothes Willie had worn when he was a baby. They had a nice time all day, and at night she put the boys to bed, and the little brown sister, after being tenderly rocked to sleep, was laid in Willie's baby-crib. It was the first time it had ever been in a crib, and its little brown face looked so pretty on the white pillow, that she thought her husband could not find it in his heart to send it away.

When he came home, she took him to see it, when he stood straight up and whistled, thrust his hands down into his pockets, and said:

"Whew! What next? Going to raising Indians, are you? That's a tall contract; but you can't fill it on this ranch. Keep that thing here, and you'll have the whole tribe to support. They'd hang round like a pack of wolves. Oh no, Lizzie! You've been a good wife, and I like to please you; but I can't stand this!"

She pleaded that it was so wretched; but he told her that it took something more than food and clothes to make people happy; that children were happiest with their own folks; that God knew what he was about when he sent a baby into this world, and always put it just where it belonged; that an Indian was happier hungry and cold among Indians, than well-fed and warm among white people; and that the boys only wanted it for a plaything, and had better have a young grizzly. So the little brown sister must go home in the morning.

Bright and early next morning they all had breakfast, and the boys cried for their pet; but their father rolled her up in a nice warm shawl, with all her pretty clothes on; took some more in a bundle; took the board and straps with which her old grandmother had made her so straight and stiff—for, he said, she would want them again—walked off two miles, and gave the little papoose back to the old squaw, where she was encamped with her tribe. When he started Mrs. Howe noticed that there were tears in his eyes, and that he held the baby as tenderly as if it had been a white child, and concluded that, after all, he did not hate Indians as he thought he did.

The boys fretted after their little brown sister a good while and did not like the young bear their father got for them half so well. But they never saw her again, and I think she was happier with her own people than she would have been with them.—JANE GREY SWISSHELM, in St. Nicholas.

Farm, Garden & Household.

LABOR-SAVING MACHINERY.—The saving operations of husbandry by the use of modern implements and methods is equal to one-half the former cost of working. By the improved plow, labor equivalent to that of one horse in three is saved. By means of drills two bushels of seed will go as far as three bushels scattered broadcast. The plants come up in rows, and may be tended by horse-hoes; being in the bottoms of little furrows, the ground crumbles down against the plant which is not so readily heaved out by the winter's frost. The reaping machine of more than one third of the labor when it cuts and rakes, and will eventually save fully three-fourths when it is made to bind automatically, as it shortly will be. The threshing machine is a saving of two-thirds on the old hand-flail mode. The root-cutters for stock in England, and in some places in the Northern States and Canada, much reduce the labor of winter feeding. The saving in the labor of handling hay in the field and barn by means of horse rakes and horse hay forks is equal to one half. With the exception of the grain drill, which had a precarious existence previous to 1776, all these improvements have been commenced and brought to the present relative perfection within the century now closing. —E. H. KNIGHT, in Harper's Magazine for December.

The Effect of Fodder Corn Upon Land.

(The Cultivator and Country Gentleman.)

It was held in the discussion, at the recent State Fair at Rochester, N. Y., that corn in orchards was an advantage, owing to the cultivation which the land received; and it was further mentioned in the remarks elicited, that the corn sown for fodder, in which case there were no ears to draw substance from the soil, improved rather than depleted the land, by vegetable matter which the roots furnished the soil. This is on the principle that land improves by grazing. The grass is fed off without going to seed. The cases are parallel, as corn is a grass. It is encouraging to those who grow corn for fodder that this is so.—Good crops can thus be realized for feeding green during the summer; or, if not all needed, saved for winter feed, the land remaining the same, or better fitted for other equally good or super-for crops. Clover is still more beneficial to land.—The two should be more grown, especially for the purpose of feeding in a drouth, or when the grass becomes rank and hard, also as a food during the hot days, particularly the hot noons, when cows should be put up or have access to shade, and then fed. Cows giving milk should be thus treated, as exposure to the hot sun begets fever, and the effect is communicated to the milk.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

To cause drastic, griping, sickening pills, constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated Root and Herb Liver, Blood and Stomach Regulators—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or Multum in Parvo Physic. Modern Chemical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principles, which when worked into little Pellets or Granules, scarcely larger than mustard seed, renders each little Pellet as active and powerful as a large pill, while they are unchanged palatable and perfect as ever. Sold by druggists.

Dr. Ira A. Bayer of Bloomsburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy I've ever prescribed. In which you prescribe three or more I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to come the nearest to the place of all other cathartic pills and medicines."

Lyon & Mayo, druggists, Versailles, O. T., says: "Pellets they are going to sell like hot cakes soon as people get acquainted with them and will push the pellets, as those that have used them like them much better than large pills."

The Season of Intermittents.

All seasons are complained of, in other words, all diseases account for by such an one exhalations from the earth or water, are prevalent at this season. In very few cases only do the visitations of fever and ague or other forms of intermittent disease, the causes of such pestilence these maladies are now actively at work. This, therefore, is the time of year when the inhabitants of such districts should prepare their systems to meet the unwholesome condition of the atmosphere, by a correct use and alterative treatment. For most among the hydrocrats, recommended by time and experience, as a means of fortifying the system against all endemic and epidemic maladies, stands Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Whoever has traveled in the West or South knows full well the esteem in which this incomparable preventive and restorative is held throughout those regions. It is literally a domestic staple in the swampy and malarious localities which lie on the borders of many of our large rivers and in the neighborhood of our southern bayous and lagoons. Now is the time when the inhabitants of such districts should put their system and constitutions in good defensive trim by a course of this genial vegetable antidote. By this means the feeblest resident of an unhealthy soil may escape the sickness, which without the aid of this potent tonic of nature, will be apt to overtake the strong. Chills and fever, bilious remittents, constipation, dyspepsia and many other complaints are frequently brought on by the caprices of temperature and alternations of dry cold and excessive moisture season in our climate at the commencement of spring and autumn. Who desire to avoid these distressing ailments take the Bitters as a safeguard.

DR. C. M'LANE'S
CELEBRATED
FOR THE CURE OF
Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,
DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weakness and debility; he is easily startled, feels a cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he dislikes every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the liver to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint.

It is but little more than a quarter of a century since the art of mixing paint was confined almost exclusively to a few cooperatively speaking. Now, however, through the ingenuity of BRADLEY, we are not only enabled to apply the paint if we desire, but can see the shades in advance, as pole cards being fur, tinted gratis, with the different shades of tints mentioned. Those who have used the "Enamel Paint," speak from experience, that it is all that is claimed for it, and evidently supercede the "old style paint." As an evidence of the great worth of the Enamel Paint, we most respectfully request all our readers to carefully read the excellent testimonials of Mr. C. P. Knight in this paper.

"The Curse of Blood."

Messrs. Editors: Last week, in reviewing Bro. Robey's article, with the above title, I tried to show that God does not require of the heathen faith in Christ, as a condition of their salvation. I wish to show in the present number what He does require of them as that condition. I do this calmly, notwithstanding Bro. Robey's warning again so saying "other condition," preaching "any other gospel," etc.

It is clear that if the heathen are saved at all, they must be saved, either, first, unconditionally; or secondly, by faith in Christ; or thirdly, on some other condition. Bro. Robey and myself agree that those of them who have any light on the way of duty are not saved either unconditionally or by faith in Christ. It follows then, it seems to me, that if they are saved at all, it must be on some other condition than this faith.

But suppose they are all damned, as Bro. Robey insists. Then, they must be damned either, first, unconditionally; or secondly, because they do not believe on Christ; or thirdly, because they fail to perform some other condition of salvation. Bro. Robey and myself agree that they are not damned unconditionally. At least, we are agreed that if the heathen is damned, it is for not performing some condition. The difference between us being that he insists that the heathen is damned for not performing an unknown and, to him, impracticable condition; while I maintain that it is for not complying with a known and practicable one. For Bro. Robey admits, of course, that the heathen is ignorant of God's requirement of faith in Christ, and that, of consequence, the exercise of such faith is, to him, impossible. And I think it was shown last week that the theory of God's damning the heathen on such condition is utterly inconsistent with the teaching of the Bible concerning the holiness of His character and the righteousness of His government. It would be virtually damning him unconditionally; for an impracticable condition is, to all intents and purposes, no condition. If the heathen are damned at all, then it must be on another condition than that of faith in Christ.

From this reasoning, we conclude that God has given the heathen another, and in some respects, a different condition of salvation from the one He has given us. Also that those who comply with this condition are saved, while those who do not are damned. And I submit that Bro. Robey, in maintaining the contrary, not only puts himself in opposition to the teaching of the Bible, but also to that of our standard authors. Wesley, Clarke and Watson, in their interpretation of Scripture, distinctly teach that the heathen are not all necessarily lost; that they are not required to perform the same condition of salvation that we are, and that they have another and practicable condition of salvation. See Watson's Institutes and Clarke's Commentary, passim, but particularly Institutes pages 608 and 609 and Commentary on Romans 1st and 2nd chapters. Also Wesley's note on Acts 10:34 and 35. Of course, I do not hold that Bro. Robey or any one else should merge his individuality of thought into that of any author, no matter how learned or profound. But I do insist that before publishing in an organ of our Church, views that are directly contrary to our standards, we should be very certain that they are Scriptural.

But to return. When I say the heathen have a practicable condition of salvation. I mean a condition of pardon for past sins, in the same sense in which we have such a condition. If this is not so, I would ask Bro. Robey why God has given them any light on the way of duty? Why has God revealed His "law" to them, in any way and to any extent? He must have had a design in doing so, and that design must have been in harmony with His revealed character of benevolence. The "light" or "law" did not "slip" out from God, without His knowledge or without design. Paul says "God showed it unto them," —the heathen—that He "wrote it in their hearts" and revealed it in "creation," generally, as well as in their "nature," particularly. He must of course, then, have had some design in doing this—giving this light or law to the heathen. What was that design? It seems to me that God must have designed one or another of the three following things: First. To enable the heathen to keep the moral law perfectly, and thus be saved by its "deeds." Or, secondly, in giving the law as a rule of life or morals, He must have intended to involve them in guilt, so that He would have some pretext for damning them. Or, thirdly: In giving them "light," He must have designed that, with the law of morality, they should also have the law of the gospel—With the condition of guilt, they should have that of pardon, the latter as plainly revealed as the former. Now, it seems to me that one of these three theories must be true. What one will we accept? Bro. Robey agrees with me in saying that the first is not true. For he says, "neither can it be maintained that some adult heathens live up to the light they have and are therefore saved." By this he means, of course, that they cannot be saved by their morality, or the "deeds of the law" they live under. Indeed, Paul teaches plainly enough that no one, be he heathen or Christian, can be saved on that ground. But what shall we say of the second theory? Bro. Robey admits that God has given the heathen some light on the matter of duty—that He has "written" his moral "law in their hearts." He must admit, too, that the possession of this light or law constitutes the basis or condition of their guilt—That without this light or law, the heathen could not commit punishable sin. He does virtually admit as much. For he says that an "accidental," ignorant or unintentional "compliance" with law or "anything" is no compliance at all—That "there is no such thing as accidental compliance, which implies no knowledge." He means, of course, no such thing as virtuous or rewardable "compliance." He says that such "compliance implies purpose, aim or intention with reference to a known thing." He teaches that an intelligent "purpose" to obey the law is essential to virtue or rewardableness. And he is certainly correct in all this. The wonder is that he did not see that the reverse of this is also true. Why could he not see that there is no such thing as "accidental," ignorant or unintentional noncompliance with any law or "anything?" That is, that without some knowledge of law, whether it be written or unwritten, there cannot be, in the heathen, any vicious or punishable noncompliance with or violation of law. Certainly "knowledge," "purpose" or "intention" is just as necessary to guilt, in the one case, as of innocence in the other.

Without this light or knowledge then, the heathen would not have become personally guilty. Now, I ask again, why did God give them this light, if they cannot "live up to" it and thus be saved by their morality?—Surely Bro. Robey will not insist that God has given the heathen His law, in any degree of clearness, for the purpose of involving them in inextricable guilt? Surely God would not thus needlessly ensnare his blind and helpless creatures? Surely He would not give them just light enough to guide them into the wilderness of sin, without giving enough to guide them through!—Enough for them to find the way to and fall into the pit of guilt, but not enough to get them out again! Surely, surely not! If Bro. Robey entertains such thoughts of God, he must excuse me for decidedly differing from him.

If, then, we cannot accept either of these two theories, it seems to me that we must take the third—That with the law of morality, which God has given the heathen, He gave also the gospel law of pardon—That with the condition of damnation, He revealed also the condition of salvation. And, arguing from analogy, we conclude that the condition of pardon is revealed to them as clearly as the condition of guilt—That the gospel is as plain to them as is the law. For this is certainly true in the New Testament revelation. Now, what is that condition of pardon and salvation given the heathen? With diffidence and yet with some degree of confidence, I submit that the heathen are saved on the condition of faith—Faith in God—The same kind of faith by which we are saved. In support of this theory, I offer the following argument and Scripture exposition:

So far as I remember, there are only two general conditions of pardon or salvation referred to in the Bible: Faith and Works. By "works," the sacred writers seem usually to mean obedience to the moral law, whether it be written or unwritten. Now, in order that a man be saved on that condition, his obedience must be perfect and uninterrupted. Anything short of this would be sin, and the moral law makes no provision for pardoning or overlooking the slightest failure to comply with its requirements. So that by one such slight failure the salvation for which the man was living and working, becomes forever and absolutely beyond his reach on that condition. Now, as no man ever has or ever can render, from infancy, such perfect obedience to either written or unwritten law, Paul tells us that God has "concluded" all the world "guilty" of its violation.—And that "therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight." He teaches also just as plainly that, because of man's weakness, God has in mercy prescribed an easier and a practicable condition of salvation for all men. Now, what Paul says of the impossibility of man's being saved "by the deeds of the law" or his morality, is certainly as applicable to the heathen as it is to the Christian. If, indeed, there is any difference, his language would seem to apply with more force to their case than it does to ours. For it would seem more difficult to obey the unwritten law perfectly than the written one. And let us remember that the one makes no more provision for pardon than the other. In exact accordance with this view, is Paul's declaration in Heb. 11:6. "But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Now, let us remember that this is a general statement, made of man universally. In its broadest sense, it may embrace infants and idiots in its scope. They, being incapable of exercising faith in God, cannot "please" Him in Paul's sense of doing so. There must be an intelligent and voluntary exercise of the will, in the right direction, in order to "please" God in the sense of exciting His disposition and action in the direction of "reward." He loves infants and idiots with the love of benevolence, but not the love that expresses itself in "reward." He gives them Heaven, not as a "reward," but as a free gift. But to the man who intelligently, 'diligently,' and by 'faith' 'seeks' and serves Him on earth, and thus becomes positively virtuous, He not only grants Heaven as a free gift, but He adds a special 'reward' with it. "Great is your reward in Heaven."—But let us notice Paul's statement in its application to all rational adults, whether they be Christian or heathen. He certainly means to teach that 'it is impossible' for any of them 'to please' God 'without faith' in Him. For he makes his statement embrace all who were ever saved from the time of Abel, the first man that went to Heaven, down to the time when Paul wrote this epistle. Mark you! he does not refer to or speak of faith in Christ, (See Wesley's notes) but faith in God: "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." If his faith embrace and have reference to God's existence and character, especially His merciful disposition toward him, and it move him to confide in and seek God, He will reward him with the blessing of pardon and salvation.

But suppose we say that Paul's declaration has no reference to, and does not embrace the heathen. Suppose we say that 'it is' not 'impossible' for them 'to please' God 'without faith' in His existence and character. Then, how can he 'please' God? Certainly not by 'works'. For, 'by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast.'—Not of works, lest any man should boast.' If the heathen could be saved by 'works,' would he not likely 'boast' as loudly as his Christian brother? But we have seen that, boasting or no boasting, he could not be saved by works if he would. But is he saved 'by grace' 'without faith?' Then he is saved unconditionally.—But this is out of the question, if he has light. And, as he has some light, touching God's existence and character, 'it is impossible for him 'to please' God and be saved 'without faith' proportioned to his degree of light.

November, 1874.

Reader, I believe there are many persons who are weary and tired of everything in this life, and yet have nothing to cheer them in looking forward to the life to come. Are you one?

The Refuge.

There is a peace that all may know,
That baggage can never tell;
Pure as the crystal waters flow,
More sweet than Jacob's well;
'Tis found where flowed the bloody tide,
Close to our loving Saviour's side.

There is a place from trials free
From toil and rest and care,
Where sorrowing Christians oft times flee
Safe from the tempter's snare.
'Tis found low at the Master's feet,
Who joys his suffering ones to greet.

There is a rest earth cannot give;
Poor, thirsty, famished saint,
Fly to this rest. O fly and live—
To tell him thy complaint,
His tender heart feels all thy grief;
No other source brings such relief.

There on his loving heart recline,
Then look upon thy pain.
There every earthly wish resign,
And know what is thy gain.
Look back upon the grief of years,
And learn to smile at all thy tears

O Christian, it is thine to know
The bliss of love divine—
For thee the living waters flow,
A glorious crown is thine.
Then linger not within the vale
But haste thee, lest the foe assail.

Leave self, cave all—fly to his heart,
With humble, child like faith;
There know this joy this peace and rest;
'Tis thine in life, in death.
Go to that Christ who died, who rose—
None other can give such repose.

Russell Bigelow.

[FROM EGGLESTON'S "CIRCUIT RIDER."]

It happened that upon the very next Sunday Russell Bigelow was to preach. Far and wide over the West had travelled the fame of this great preacher, who, though born in Vermont, was wholly Western in his impassioned manner. "An orator is to be judged not by his printed discourses, but by the memory of the effect he has produced," says a French writer: and if we may judge of Russell Bigelow by the fame that fills Ohio and Indiana even to this day, he was surely an orator of the higest order. He is known as the "indescribable." The news that he was to preach had set the Hissawachee Settlement afire with eager curiosity to hear him. Even Patty declared her intention of going, much to the Captain's regret. The meeting was not to be held at Wheeler's, but in the woods, and she could go for this time without entering the house of her father's foe. She had no other motive than a vague hope of hearing something that would divert her: life had grown so heavy that she craved excitement of any kind. She would take a back seat and hear the famous Methodist for herself. But Patty put on all of her gold and costly apparel. She was determined that nobody should suspect her of any intention of 'joining the church.' Her mood was one of curiosity on the surface, and of proud hatred and quiet defiance below.

No religious meeting is ever so delightful as a meeting held in the forest; no forest is so satisfying as a forest of beech; the wide spreading boughs—drooping when they start from the trunk, but well sustained at the last—stretch out regularly and with a steady horizontalness, the last year's leaves form a carpet like a cushion, while the dense foliage shuts out the sun. To this meeting in the beech woods Patty chose to walk, since it was less than a mile away As she passed through a little cove, she saw a man lying flat on his face in prayer. It was the preacher. Awe-stricken, Patty hurried on to the meeting. She had fully intended to take a seat in the rear of the congregation, but being a little confused and absent minded she did not observe at first where the stand had been erected, and that she was entering the congregation at the nearest to the pulpit. When she discovered her mistake it was too late to withdraw, the aisle beyond her was already full of standing people; there was nothing for her but to take the only vacant seat in sight: This put her in the very midst of the members, and in this position she was quite conspicuous; even strangers from other settlements saw with astonishment a woman elegantly dressed, for that time, sitting in the very midst of the devout sisters—for the men and women sat apart. All around Patty there was not a single "artificial," or piece of jewelry. Indeed, most of the women wore calico sunbonnets. The Hissawachee people who knew her were astounded to see Patty at meeting at all. They remembered her treatment of Morton, and they looked upon Captain Lumsden as Gog and Magog incarnated in one. This sense of the conspicuousness of her position was painful to Patty, but she presently forgot herself in listening to the singing. There never was such a chorus as a backwoods Methodist congregation, and here among the trees they sang hymn after hymn, now with the tenderest pathos, now with triumphant joy, now with solemn earnestness. They sang "Children of the Heavenly King," and "Come let us anew," and "Blow ye the trumpet, blow," and "Arise my soul, arise," and "How happy every child of grace!" While they were singing this last, the celebrated preacher entered the pulpit, and there ran through the audience a movement of wonder, almost of disappointment. His clothes were of that sort of cheap cotton cloth known as "blue drilling," and did not fit him. He was rather short, and inexpressibly awkward. His hair hung unkempt over the best portion of his face—the broad projecting forehead. His eyebrows were overhanging; his nose, cheek-bones and chin large. His mouth was wide and with a sorrowful depression at the corners, his nostrils thin, his eyes keen, and his face perfectly mobile. He took for his text the words of Eleazar to Laban.—"Seeking a bride for his master," and, according to the custom of the time, he first expounded the incident, and then proceeded to "spiritualize" it, by applying it to the soul's marriage to Christ. Notwithstanding the ungainliness of his frame and the awkwardness of his postures, there was a gentlemanliness about his address that indicated a man not unaccustomed to good society. His words were well-chosen; his pronunciation always correct; his speech grammatical. In all of these regards Patty was disappointed.

But the sermon. Who shall describe "the indescribable"? As the servant, he proceeded to set forth the character of the Master. What struck Patty was not the nobleness of his speech, nor the force of his argument; she seemed to see in the countenance that every divine trait which he described had reflected itself in the life of the preacher himself. For none but the smallest of men can ever speak worthily of Jesus Christ. As Bigelow proceeded he won her famished heart to Christ. For such a Master she could live or die; in such a life there was what Patty needed most—a purpose; in such a life there was a friend; in such a life she would escape that sense of the ignobleness of her own pursuits, and the unworthiness of her own pride. All that he said of Christ's love and condescension filled her with a sense of sinfulness and meanness, and she wept bitterly. There were a hundred others as much affected, but the eyes of all her neighbors were upon her. If Patty should be converted, what a victory!

And as the preacher proceeded to describe the joy of a soul wedded forever to Christ—living nobly after the pattern of His life—Patty resolved that she would devote herself to this life and this Savour, and rejoiced in sympathy with the rising note of triumph in the sermon. Then Bigelow, last of all, appealed to courage and to pride—to pride in its best sense. Who would be ashamed of such a Bridegroom? And as he depicted the trials that some must pass through in accepting Him, Patty saw her own situation, and mentally made the sacrifice. As he described the glory of renouncing the world, she thought of her jewelry and the spirit of defiance in which she had put it on. There, in the midst of that congregation, she took out her earrings, and stripped the flowers from the bonnet. We may smile at the unnecessary sacrifice to an over strained literalism, but to Patty it was the solemn renunciation of the world—the whole-hearted espousal of herself, for all eternity, to Him who stands for all that is noblest in life. Of course this action was visible to most of the congregation—most of all to the preacher himself. To the Methodists it was the greatest of triumphs, this public conversion of Captain Lumsden's daughter, and they showed their joy in many pious ejaculations. Patty did not seek concealment. She scorned to creep into the kingdom of heaven. It seemed to her that she owed this publicity. For a moment all eyes were turned away from the orator. He paused in his discourse until Patty had removed the emblems of her pride and antagonism. Then turning with tearful eyes to the audience, the preacher, with simple-hearted sincerity and inconceivable of fact, burst out with, "Hallelujah! I have found a bride for my Master!"

Cremation of the Lady Dilke.—The Boston correspondent of the London Times writes: "The body of Lady Dilke, who died five weeks ago in London, was burned on the 10th instant at Dresden. The ceremony was performed in the furnace recently invented for burial purposes by Herr Siemens, and the relatives of the deceased lady permitting strangers to be present, a large number of scientific men attended the experiment. When the company had complied with Herr Siemen's request to offer up a mental prayer, the coffin was placed in the chamber of the furnace: six minutes later the coffin burst; five minutes later and flesh began to melt away; ten minutes more and the skeleton was laid bare; another ten minutes and the bones began to crumble. Seventy-five minutes after the introduction of the coffin into the furnace all that remained of Lady Dilke and the coffin were six pounds of dust placed in an urn. The brother-in-law of the deceased was present."

The Bible

Who composed the following description of the Bible we may never know. It was found in Westminister Abbey, nameless and dateless, but nevertheless it is invaluable for its wise and wholesome counsel to the race of Adam.

A nation would be truly happy if it were governed by no other laws than those of this blessed book.

It contains everything needful to be known or done.

It gives instruction to a Senate; authority and directions to a magistrate.

It cautions a witness, requires an impartial verdict of a jury, and furnishes the judge with his sentence.

It sets the husband as the lord of his household, and wife as mistress of the table—tells him how to rule and her how to manage.

It entails honor to parents, and enjoins obedience to children.

It prescribes and limits the sway of the sovereign, the rule of the ruler, and the authority of the master; commands the subjects to honor and the servant to obey, and the blessings and the protection of the Almighty to all that walk by this rule.

It gives directions for weddings and burials.

It promises food and raiment, and limits the use of both.

It points out a faithful and eternal guardian to the departing husband and father; tells him with whom to leave his fatherless children, and whom his widow is to trust—and promises a father to the former, and a husband to the latter.

It teaches a man to set his house in order, and how to make his will; it appoints a dowry for his wife, and entails the rights of the first born, and shows how the young branches shall be left.

It defends the right of all, and reveals vengeance to every defaulter, overreacher, and trespasser.

It is the first book, the best book.

It contains the choicest matter—gives the best instruction—affords the greatest degree of pleasure and satisfaction that we have ever enjoyed.

It contains the best laws and most profound mysteries that were ever penned; and it brings the very best comforts to the inquiring and disconsolate.

It exhibits life and immortality from time everlasting and shows the way to glory.

It is a brief recital of all that is to come.

It settles all matters in debate resolves all doubts; and cases them in and conscience of all their scruples.

It reveals the only living and true God, and shows the way to Him, and sets aside all other gods, and describes the vanity of them and all that trust in such; in short it is a book of laws to show right and wrong; of wisdom that condemns a folly and makes the foolish wise, a book of truth that detects all lies and confronts all errors, and it is a book of life that shows the way from everlasting death.

It contains the most ancient antiquities and strange events; wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds, unparalleled wars.

It describes the celestial, terrestrial and infernal worlds, and the origin of the angelic myriads, the human tribes and the devlish legions.

It will instruct the accomplished mechanic and most profound critic.

It teaches the best rhetorician, and exercises every power to the most skillful arithmetician, puzzles the wisest anatomist and exercises the wisest critic.

It is the best covenant that ever was agreed on; the best deed that ever was sealed; the best that will ever be signed.

A fact but do you believe it?

There was a man in the Pestwick Lunatic Asylum, in England, who had a curious appetite for hardware. Whenever he had a chance, he would swallow things at which even an ostrich would have made wry faces He died, which is not strange. Dissection revealed such an overloaded condition of the stomach as was a startling novelty to the surgeons. The inventory of indigestible things was as follows, 1841 articles in all; 1639 shoemakers' separables, 6 four-inch cut nails, 19 three-inch cut nails, 8 two-and a-half inch cut nails, 18 two-inch cut nails, 40 half-inch cut nails, 7 three-quarter-inch cut nails, 49 tacks, 5 brass nails, 9 brass brace buttons, 20 pieces of buckles, 1 pin, 14 bits of glass, 10 small pebbles, 3 pieces of string, 1 piece of leather three inches long, 1 piece of lead four inches long, and 1 American pegging awl—the total weight being 11 pounds 10 ounces.

Saints should resemble a spire steeple, which is smallest where it is the highest: or those orient stars, which the higher they are seated, the less they are viewed.

Duty in Little Things.

Nine-tenths of the troubles and anxieties of life come from want of faithfulness in little things. One man writes a letter to another on business, and instead of putting himself in place of the person he addresses, and striving to say what is necessary to enable that person fully and easily to comprehend his meaning, he is intent only on getting the letter off his mind. The consequence is mistake and delay, and two or three more letters back and forth to explain and the final miscarriage, perhaps, of the plan.

A merchant sells goods; his clerk is not particular in packing and marking them, and they are injured in the transit or go astray and are lost Here more trouble, misunderstanding, and perhaps a lasting quarrel.

A mechanic is employed to do a job of work, but being occupied with his own thoughts rather than the interests of his employer, he does it badly. A nail is not driven where it ought to be; a leak is left in the roof or water-pipe; a button is but slightly sowed on, or some other imperfection is allowed to remain, and by and by repairs are needed at ten-fold the cost of the original job of work.

We need not go on and specify examples of this kind, for experience will suggest an abundance of them. If every man, woman, and child, in the community would but do faithfully all that they have to do, every day of their lives, and at the same time refrain from committing evils, is it not plain that the world would be greatly the better for it? If every word spoken or written, every blow of the hammer, every stitch of the needle and every step in every business transaction, and every amusement, were to be guided by a conscientious purpose to do exactly the right thing, can any one doubt that with the absence of positive sin nothing would be wanting to the heavenly state?

Sunday Retirement.

Church goers, and especially Church workers, should endeavor to secure to themselves some part of every Sunday for quiet devotion at home. Whatever else your Sundays are, never forget that they should not entirely lose the character of Sabbath days—days of rest. No doubt the Christian Sunday, the day of the Lord's resurrection, is not an exact counterpart of the Jewish Sabbath. Yet, apart from all argument as the obligation of Sunday rest, I am sure that Christian people require a weekly Sabbath for their own health, spiritually as well as bodily and that some part of the day should be spent, if possible, not merely in religious duties, as distinguished from what are called secular, but in private religion as distinguished from public religious services, class-teaching, visiting the sick and infirm, tract distribution, looking up those who neglect public worship, and other Sunday activities. It is quite possible to spend the Sunday in a whirl of Church services and other occupations, all in themselves excellently befitting the Lord's Day, but so closely following one another as to make Sunday any thing but a day of rest. For your minister it must be so; but then they, having much command over their own time, can choose another day for their Sabbath For most of you it is not so; your Sabbath must be on Sunday, or not at all.—Advance.

The Laughing Plant.

Are we to have another Anesthetic? Palgrave's new work on Central Arabia contains an account of the "Laughing Plant." It is a native of Arabia. A dwarf variety of Oman, which attains to a height of from three to four feet, with woody stems, wide spreading branches and bright green foliage. Its flowers are produced in clusters, and are of a bright yellow color. The seed pods are soft and woolly in texture, and contain two or three black seeds of the size and shape of a French bean. Their flavor is sweet. The odor from them produces a sickening sensation, and is highly offensive. These seeds contain the highly essential property of this extraordinary plant, and, when pulverized and taken in small doses, operate on a person in a most peculiar manner. He begins to laugh loudly, boisterously; then he sings, dances, and cuts all manner of fantastic capers. Such extravagance of gesture and manners was never produced by any other kind of drug. The effect continues about an hour. When the excitement ceases the exhausted exhibitor falls asleep, which continues for an hour, and when he awakes he is utterly unconscious that any demonstrations have been enacted by him. We usually say there is nothing now under the sun; but this plant, recently discovered, as it exercises extraordinary influence over the brain, demands a careful investigation from men of science.

A good advertiser practically puts his show windows into the newspapers.

Stop and Speak.

Many young people have lately united with the different Churches. They should have a generous, cordial and [illegible] welcome. Go out of your way to speak and shake hands with them. Make them feel that they are at home, [illegible] friends, and actual members of the household. We do not mean the minister. He will do all this and much more in the way of encouraging, training and setting these new recruits at work. We mean you men and women of the pews; and especially such as are accustomed to march out of Church or social meetings with stiff conventional air and icy demeanor, without stopping to speak to or notice any body, save here and there one of "our set."

A Christian woman at our elbow relates that when years ago she united with the Church, a dear old lady whom she hardly knew, on coming out, put her arms about her in silent token of her hearty welcome. That act of kindly sympathy will never be forgotten. Speak to the young converts. Shake hands with them. Encourage them in Christian work, and show them how to engage in it. So shall ties of Christian fellowship, and love for the Church and its work, be thrown around them stronger than all worldly fascinations.—Presbyterian at Work.

Pray and Wait.

Pray frequently, and wait quietly, and the Lord will make your way plain. Jesus trains up all his servants to waiting; and if you are called to the ministry, he will exercise your soul beforehand with sharp conflicts. Joseph must be first cast into a pit by his own brethren, then into prison by his master, before he rules the kingdom; and David must be "hunted as a flea" upon the mountains before he gets the scepter. How can you tell what others feel unless you have felt the same yourself? Undertake nothing without first seeking direction from the Lord; and when any thing offers that is plausible and inviting, beg of God to disappoint you, if it be not according to his mind. You can not safely rely on your own judgment, after God has told you, "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool." This advice relates to all important things in life.

The Advocate

With this issue we close our editorial labors for the present ecclesiastical year. Six years have elapsed since our (the senior's) editorial connection with the Advocate. It was a position unsought and unexpectedly imposed upon us at that time. We accepted it not knowing what was in store for us. Some predicted an inglorious failure, others said it was a doubtful experiment, while many others extended to us their hearty congratulations and pledged their earnest support.—We determined, to make the Advocate a success, notwithstanding its repeated failures, let the price of success be what it would. Months passed before confidence could be restored in the public mind. Men were afraid to pay their money for it lest it should go down before their subscription expired. In less than twelve months this obstacle was almost entirely removed—light began to break, confidence was restored, and subscriptions began to come in from every quarter, and there has been no interruption in its progress and success since that time. The present year has been the most successful of any which have preceded it. Our subscription list has increased and our advertising patronage is now so extensive as to necessitate an enlargement of the paper at no distant day. This is more than we could reasonably look for in view of the great stringency of money matters in final circles, and the falling off of trade in every department of business. We make not this statement in any spirit of egotism or empty boast, but as a fact which the church and the public have a right to know. Our people are beginning to realize more fully than ever before, the great value of a good religious paper. While our preachers have done well, and perhaps in some instances better than heretofore, our laymen have shown a more lively interest in the paper than they have done in the past. This is a most gratifying feature, and one that promises much good in the future.

To the members of the Conference who have failed from any cause whatsoever to give us the aid we would liked to have had we have no complaints to make. To those who have rendered us such efficient service in steering the Advocate across the breakers and keeping it out in smooth waters with a full sail, we can find no word, or words, to express our emotions of gratitude. With your co operation and unfailing devotion to its welfare, the future is full of promise, and grander achievements will crown the days to come.

We have labored with unfaltering zeal and anxiety to make the Advocate subserve the interests of the church. As a Conference organ we have aimed to conduct it without partiality. Its columns have been opened to all its members. Sometimes we have found it necessary to withhold articles from publication. This is a prerogative which an editor is forced to exercise from the very nature of things, and one which every person who is accustomed to write for the press will readily concede to him. In the exercise of this right we may sometimes make mistakes.

As heretofore announced, we have recently and permanently associated with us in the general management and editorial conduct of the Advocate Robert T. Gray, Esq., whose services can but add new interest to its columns. As in the past so in the future, we will endeavor to make the paper a welcome visitor to the homes of our people, and a co-laborer to the preacher in his pastoral work.

While many of our church papers have recently raised in price, we shall continue to send forth the Advocate at $2 a year. We reduced the price from $2.50 to $2 that it might be in the reach of all. While we believe that $2.50 is as low as any paper of its size should be published, we are constrained to continue it at $2 in consideration of the great scarcity of money in the country. The best time to extend favors is when they are most needed.

It is gratifying to note that the revival work this year has been extensive throughout our Conference bounds, and in fact in all our sister Conferences. From every quarter comes the cheering intelligence that the saving grace of God has been abundantly poured out upon our people, and that the church is advancing in all her interests.

An effort is being made in Chicago to procure a fine residence in that city for Bishop Harris, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

A Church at Work.

Like everything else, the Church has a work to perform. When Christ was about to close his career on earth, he instituted the Church not as a system of denominations with variant doctrines and practices, which were to be the battle-field of contending theologians and zealots, each striving for the supremacy of his views; but as his one representative on earth—the executor of his will,—to which he confided the completion of the work which he came to initiate. The work he set before it is plain—his last will and testament made in view of his impending death, attested by witnesses innumerable, and with attending circumstances far more solemn than those which human laws require to accompany the expression of men's last wishes in respect to their worldly estate, is explicit and needs no strained and artful construction to give it effect. The mission is the conversion of the world—the means, the revealing of God's law, the holding up of his precious promises to the faithful and the terrors of destruction to the worldly and wicked. To vary the figure, the Church is God's champion with orders to rescue man from the degrading bondage in which the great enemy, sin, has placed him; — the world is the battle-ground and Faith and Prayer and Gospel tidings the strong and keen edged weapons of warfare.

With such an enemy as the Church has to confront, wily, unscrupulous and powerful, there is need ot watchfulness and activity and no place for a halt to settle wranglings as to the way in which arms are to be carried and volleys fired. The sin-bound prisoner is in imminent danger—delays are costly to him, at least, and postpone if not destroy the hopes of victory for the Church.

Too much stress is often laid upon the vindication of particular tenets of a sect, and more attention paid to the shadows which the Gospel casts, than to the substance of which it is composed. Zeal is exhibited in defending or attacking unessentials, which would be commendable and efficient if directed against the strongholds of infidelity and sin. Breath is spent by the hour in announcing the primus, secundus and ergo of some sect opinion, which had better be held in reserve for the long and warm fight with the enemy who cares less for opinions than he does for souls.

We do not underrate the value of doctrinal discussion. It gives life to a sect and causes some men to work who, without some stimulus of that kind, would die of enervation. But to fight alone for the triumph of sect opinions—to strive after the supremacy of a creed, the child, too often, of pride, imagination or logical refinements, falls far short of the work which is expected of a church. Sin is not theoretical but real; the enemy of souls laughs at the syllogisms which are built to prove his existence or the best means for his overthrow, and, the while, is mining and loosening the ground on which mortals stand. He is in earnest and must be met with equal earnestness and courage on the part of the church.

While we do not wish to boast overmuch of the success and triumphs of the branch of the Christian Church to which we belong, yet we cannot help reflecting that the Methodist Church has above all others appreciated the nature and the importance of the work required at her hands, and has unremittingly pursued it. Discarding all thoughts of parlor-tactics and easy campaigns, her early founders and their successors gave and have given themselves up to the unwearied task of battling with sin in all its forms, mild, pleasant or hideous. They did not wait for civilization, refinement and learning to plant their banners among a people, before they set up their houses of worship and proclaimed the law of God and the promised pardon for its violation; but were themselves the pioneers after whom civilization and its train followed. In the frontier wildernesses, amid danger and difficulties, in the hamlet, the solitary settler's hut or the untouched forest, they grappled with the enemy and won their victories. They may have been uncultivated in a worldly sense, but they were endowed with spiritual grace and power. Their speech may have been rude but it was forcible and suited to those to whom they were sent.—They may not have been drilled in theology and doctrine, but they knew men's hearts and the nature of their work. They had consecration and faith, knew what power there was in prayer and used it.

The history of early Methodism is radiant with her conquests and would be wonderful were it not that such devoted work as her champions did, must at all times be followed by like success. The steady onward tramp of her pioneer preachers sounds to our ears like the conquering march of Heaven's hosts against the rebellious Lucifer, and the shouts of the awakened and converted, like the falling drops of a pentecostal shower. The spirit which breathed in the early Methodists, though weakened and sometimes dormant, is not yet dead. We see its effects in the revivals, reports of which come to us from all parts of the field. Heaven grant that it may be kept alive and furnished with the strength and fervor which it possessed in other days!

The Conference.

The thirty-eighth session of the North Carolina Conference convenes in this city on this (Wednesday) morning at 9½ o'clock. Bishop Enoch M. Marvin, D. D., LL. D., will preside. He is a grand preacher of righteousness and an able presiding officer. We extend to him a most cordial welcome among us. He comes, as he writes us, "in the spirit of prayer and consecration to the Master," and we doubt not he will be received in the same spirit. In a private letter of recent date he says: "The longer I live the more clearly I see that the Son of God requires just a simple-hearted service."—Golden words are these!

From the Louisville Daily Advocate we take the following brief sketch of the Bishop:

"He was born in Warren County Missouri, June 12, 1823. In August, 1839, he offered himself to the Church at Bethlehem Camp-ground, St. Charles County Missouri, and was converted in Warren county, in December, 1840. In 1841, when only nineteen years of age, he entered the itinerant ministry in the Missouri Conference. His first appointment was to Grundy Mission, his second to Oregon Mission, his third to Liberty Circuit, and his fourth to St. Louis, as the colleague of the Rev. Wesley Browning. His subsequent fields of labor in Missouri were, Western Circuit, Hannibal, Monticello, and Palmyra Stations; St. Charles Circuit, St. Charles District, agent for Fayette and St. Charles College and as pastor of the Centenary and First Church in St. Louis. During the war he went South, and served the Marshall Station in Texas, but remained a member of the St. Louis Conference until his election to the Episcopal office in 1866. His residence is in St. Louis, Missouri."

Sunday Amusements

For a week or two past, the New York Herald, a paper of undoubted influence and enterprise which triumphs over all obstacles and ransacks the ends of the earth for food for the news-hungry, but withal a mirror in which everything sensational finds itself reflected, has been discussing the subject of Sunday amusements in the cities. It advocates the opening of theatres for the rendering of every sort of plays, opera, comedy tragedy or what not, leaving no distinction to be made between the days on which secular pursuits are proper and right, and the holy day which Heaven has set apart and consecrated for rest from toil and the hurry and worry of worldly engagements, and for the contemplation and worship of Divine things. The Herald is, of course, supported in its views by stage writers, managers and performers and by those people of irreligious and infidel thought and tendencies. As a result of the Herald's suggestions and the concurrence therein of many correspondents and notables whose opinions the inveitable interviewers obtained, the theatres and other places of amusement have been on three Sunday evenings, thrown open to the play going public. As another matter of course, the idle, worldly minded and vicious have flocked in crowds to the play-houses to devote the closing hours of the sacred day to scenes that are as far removed from piety, propriety and decency as can well be imagined.

The Germans have always favored theatre-going on Sunday. In the Fatherland the Sabbath evening is the favorite season for operas and plays, and it was in compliance first, we suppose with the demands of that element of New York society that Strakosch, a noted Jew and theatre manager, attempted the opening of his theatre in 'Gotham.' It was found to be popular with other elements and in consequence, the theatres are now in full blast on Sunday.

Raleigh District.

Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, the Presiding Elder of the Raleigh District, on Saturday and Sunday last, completed his year's work, holding his last quarterly meetings at Edenton and Person Street Churches, in this city. As we are, ourselves, within the bounds of the District and enjoy opportunities of observing what is doing and has been done, it will not be amiss to make some special mention of the District and its condition. We, (the junior) having been present at the District Conference at Franklinton last summer took occasion to state through the Advocate of which we were in temporary charge, the excellent working-order of the ministerial force on the District, and the healthy and gratifying condition in which all the interests of the church were found to be. The Presiding Elder, faithful, popular and beloved by all, has been unremitting in his attention to the District, and though absent for five weeks at the General Conference, has held, in person every quarterly meeting but one during the year. Revivals have been general and gracious and altogether nearly a thousand persons have been added to the church.

We call general attention to our advertisers, and request our brethren of the Conference, and visitors to make their purchases of those who patronize our advertising columns. We not only recommend them as in every respect worthy of patronage, but trust that they will receive whatever favors our visiting brethren may have to extend.

The Virginia Conference.

This body met at Elizabeth City on the 18th, Bishop E. M. Marvin in the chair. Paul Whitehead was elected Secretary and P. A. Peterson Assistant. The usual standing committees were appointed. Reports from the preachers were better than they were on the previous year. No deaths among its members during the past year. The Richmond Christian Advocate in its account of the first day's proceedings says:

"We are expecting a good time every way with Bishop Marvin in the chair. The Bishop is a much younger-looking man than one would suppose an occupant of his office to be. Tall and spare in his physique, with raven hair, full beard, with scarce a visible thread of gray. His voice is unusually deep-toned for a man of his slender build. He seems perfectly at home in the chair, and from his very first movements his manner and bearing prophecy that he will expedite business. He grasps the situation instantaneously and puts the vote promptly.

The vote on the new rule stands yeas 55, nays 21. Up to the time of going to press we have failed to receive the appointments.

M. E. Church Extension

The General Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church for church extension, in session at Philadelphia, Nov. 20, adopted the report of the Committee on Appropriations to the various Conferences for the ensuing year. The amount appropriated is $144,000, and includes the following:

Central New York, $500; New York, New York East, Northern Central and Western New York, $1,000 each; Ohio, Pittsburg, Central Ohio, Cincinnati, Central Illinois, Des Moines, Northwest German, Iowa, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Southern Illinois, Arkansas, East German, German Troy, and Upper Iowa, $1,000 each; Baltimore, $1,200; Central German, $4,500; California, Detroit, Michigan, Mississippi, Oregon, Washington, West Virginia, West Wisconsin, Va., $1,500 each; Western Texas, Southern German, Northwest Iowa, Louisiana, $2,500 each. Georgia, Minnesota, Nebraska, Rocky Mountain, $3,000 each; Colorado, Holston, Kentucky, Missouri, Rock River, Southwest German, South Carolina, South Kansas, St. Louis, Tennessee, Texas, Wisconsin, $2,000 each; North Carolina, $3,000; Alabama and Erie, $800 each, East Maine, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, Newark, New England, Northern Indiana, Northwest Indiana, Southwest Indiana, North Ohio, Providence and Wyoming $400 each. Missions outside of the Conference, $10,500; contingent fund, $5,600; office expenses, $12,000, redemption of bonds, $10,000.

Our congregations were favored on last Sabbath with the presence and preaching of Rev. Bros. Griffith, Boshamer and Shackford, who arrived in the city on Saturday to attend our Conference this week. They had been invited by the Presiding Elder to attend his last quarterly meetings in this city, and came in advance of our other brethren of the Conference. Bro. Griffith preached at Edenton St. Church in the morning; Bro. Boshamer at Person Street in the morning and at Edenton Street at night, and Bro. Shackford at Person Street at night. The congregations at both churches were good in the morning, (though the weather was unfavorable) and very large at night. The preaching of the brethren was, in truth, good and edifying, and the congregations were strongly impressed with its power and unction.

Prof. Robt. Round has been installed as Professor of Mathematics at Davenport Female College. He is a son of Rev. G. H. Round who has recently resigned the chair of Mathematics, is a young man of fine talent, a graduate of the Wesleyan University and has experience as a teacher. Rev. Bro. Robey writing to us says:

"While we regret the necessity which compels the retirement of the noble father from his life-long profession, we are exceedingly gratified with the good fortune which has enabled us to fill his place with his promising son".

Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell of the firm of Geo. P. Rowell & Co. of New York, and Nelson Chesman, editor of American Newspaper Directory, have formed a copartnership for the purpose of transacting the business of a Newspaper Advertising Agency in St. Louis Mo. We have had the most pleasant business relations with Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. of New York, and trust those with Messrs Rowell and Chesman will be equally pleasant. They are reliable and deserve the success which we wish them.

Rev. T. C. Moses was with us last week on his return home from his field of labor in Nash County. He is a veteran in the gospel ranks and works with indefatigable zeal in the cause of his Master. He reports good news from his circuit.

The Greensboro Patriot says: Rev. J. A. Cuninggim preached his farewell sermon to his congregation on last Sabbath, and notwithstanding the weather was very inclement, he had a good house. No minister ever served a four year's term more acceptably, and Rev. Mr. Cuninggim carries with him to his new field of labor, the love and best wishes of his entire congregation.

Bishop Cummins' successor is Rev. Dr. Bailey, of Baltimore, a conservative, or compromise candidate between the High and Low Church parties.

Revival Intelligence

Rev. T. C. Moses writes: Protracted meetings were held on the Wilson circuit, during last summer, and this fall, at the following churches: Mount Pleasant, 5 persons professed to find peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, two united with the church; one professed at Pleasant Grove, one at Buckhorn, six at Tois not, four united with the church, about thirty at Mount Zion, 18 united with the church; three professed at Horn's and three at Bethlehem.

Rev. J. B. Baily writes: As the year is drawing to a close, permit me to say a word in reference to this circuit. During the year, the blessing of God has been upon us, and he has greatly revived his work. Every appointment has shared in this general revival influence and out of more than sixty who have made a public profession, fifty four have been added to the church.

I close with the prayer, that many more may be added to the church, such as are saved and will be saved. To God be all the glory!

Rev. T. H. Edwards writes: We are closing our last round. Have one good camp-meeting, and revival at five other appointments; Seventy accessions, and nearly as many have professed conversion.

The Conference claims will more than be met. The circuit has improved three or four hundred per cent in the Missionary collections in two years. Our District Conference, has adopted the old plan of public collections at our camp-meetings, which is working well, and reviving the missionary spirit. I wish the N. C. Conference would resolve to support a foreign Missionary, it would increase our zeal very much.

We dedicated an excellent church 3rd Sabbath of Oct. The sermon was preached by Rev. S. M. Trawick, to the delight of the large congregation. The services were protracted, 16 joined the church and 12 professed conversion.

We expect to dedicate another good church 5th Sabbath inst. which will be the third one in 14 months. The sermon is to be preached by Prof. York, D. D. of Rutherford College.

South Fork is a good and improving circuit.

Rev. A. R. Raven writes:

Messrs Editors:—The Lord hath dealt bountifully with us on the Washington and Greenville station this year. In March and April our church in Washington was visited with a revival of great power; the meetings continued nearly six weeks; about 80 souls made profession of faith and 63 united with the church. The gracious work extended to every class of society, and through ours every church in the town was embraced in the heavenly visitation. When our meeting was at its height, the Presbyterian brethren commenced one also, and thus drew off their children and some of their congregation, who were penitents at our altars. They had a good time and reaped also a fine harvest. Soon after we also enjoyed a gracious revival in Greenville: 20 professed conversion, and 18 of that number were added to the church—making a total of 100 converts; 95 persons have joined our church during the year.

The charge has been greatly strengthened in every respect. Every financial interest of the church will be fully met—no deficiencies. Our missionary collections are larger by far than for many years.

Bro. Spencer, Wood writes from New Hope Academy as follows:

"As our much esteemed brother, Rev. G. Farrar is now about to take his leave from us and as he is not much disposed to let the readers of your most valuable paper know what has been his success by the help of the good Lord this year, I desire and feel that it is nothing more than due Brother Farrar that I have space enough in your paper to say to the lovers of our Zion that we have indeed had a glorious time on the Uwharie circuit. The writer of this having had the pleasure of being with Brother Farrar at quite a number of protracted meeting and some camp-meetings, I can say of a truth the Lord has been with us. The church has been revived, sinners alarmed and mourners comforted. One hundred and sixty have professed faith and a large number have joined the church. The Sunday-school interests have been greatly increased. Brother Farrar is a thorough Sunday-school advocate. We are anxious for the return to us of Bro. Farrar believe he would do great and lasting good."

Died, a Man.—The Springfield (Mass.) Union wisely says to young graduates:

"Whatever profession a young man may choose, let him take heed lest he merge his profession of a man in his profession of law, or medicine, or journalism, or whatever it be. A man's profession should always be incidental and subordinate to himself, never the chief thing to be said about him. There was once a cynical Frenchman who, recognizing that he had made the mistake we have warned against, had engraved upon his tomb, by way of epitaph: "Born a man; died a grocer." Don't let it be said of you that, born a man, you died a tradesman, no matter what the trade may be, liberal or mechanical."

The Newbern Times says: "The Atlantic & N. C. Railroad is doing a fine business, its transportation facilities being nearly all in use. Under its present management it is building up a fine trade on the N. C. Railroad, both in imports and export."

Religious Brevities

Rev. Dr. Alex. Martin, of the Presbyterian church of Danville, Va., has received a call to take charge of the Presbyterian church in Lexington, Va.

The Rev. John Murray, the founder of the Universalist churches in the United States, began his ministry in Gloucester, Mass., on Nov. 3, 1774. On Nov. 3, 1874, the hundredth return of that day was celebrated in that town with much enthusiasm. The church was decorated with flowers and leaves, and an old barrel organ, the first used by the congregation, was placed near the pulpit.

Rev. Dr. Munsey.—The Holston Methodist says that Dr. Munsey is in most excellent health, and inclines slightly to corpulency, and adds: "In Virginia we learn that Dr Munsey is spoken of for the United States Senate from Tennessee—at least he runs well in Virginia."

The Free Methodists have gone into the Bishop business, and have elected the Rev. B. T. Roberts and the Rev. E. P. Hart to be their "General Superintendents.

A telegram from Beaver, Utah, says Bishop Wm. H. Dame was arrested at his residence at Parowan, Iron county, Utah, last week, by a deputy United States marshal, on indictment for murder in connection with the Mountain Meadow massacre.

The anniversary of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be held in Boston, commencing Sunday, December 6. The Missionary Secretaries, Bishops Harris, Wiley, and others, will participate in the seavices.

The Methodist Episcopal Church of Canada has 233 regular ministers, 132 local preachers, and 22,586 members. Including Sunday-school children, about 200,000 persons attend its services. The Wesleyan Methodists of Canada are not Episcopal in government.

The time fixed for the ensuing meeting of the Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church is the 17th of February next, at Portsmouth, Va. The Washington Conference will be held at Alexandria, Va., on the 24th of February. Bishop Peck will preside on both occasions. The Baltimore Conference will be held in Winchester, Va., on the 3d day of March—Bishop Peck will also preside over their deliberations. The West Virginia Conference, Bishop Bowman, will meet at Mount Pleasant, March 24. North Carolina Conference, at Greensboro, Jan. 6th, and South Carolina, at Camden, Jan. 14 — Bishop Wiley presides at both these.

Bishop Pierce.—The Times and Planter (Sparta, Ga.) of November 21st, says:

The Methodist Church was full last Sabbath, and the Bishop delivered his first discourse since his return from the great West. It was one of those plain, practical, and yet entertaining and instructive sermons, for which he is noted.

Notwithstanding his long, tiresome journey, he looks remarkably well, and preaches with his wonted vigor. He states that his health was excellent throughout the journey; and that no amount of work in those far off regions seemed to fatigue him.

He visited many places of interest in the Western country—among others the land of Brigham Young—and those who have been favored with accounts of his trip, and descriptions of the country, are delighted.

Evacuation of Greenville M. E. Church.—We learn from the Holston Methodist that the M. E. Church at Greenville, Tenn., has been evacuated by the congregation who has been in possession of it. It will be remembered that this is the property recently turned over to the M. E. Church, South, by the Supreme Court of Tennessee.—Some of the members seem disconsolate over the question—seeming to think they have been greatly wronged. The editor of the Methodist counsels "our members at Greenville to extend all the courtesy possible to their ejected brethren. Let them use the church for purposes of worship, when it is not in use by us. "Let your moderation be made known unto all men."

Recent Publications.

Nimrod of the Sea or the American Whalemen: by Wm. R. Davis. Harper Bros. New York, 1874.

This is an eventful history of a whaling voyage, and an account of the way in which whales are caught, their habits and the uses to which they are put. "Life on the ocean wave" is always eventful and has charms for the reader as well as for those themselves who "go down to the sea in ships" and the perusal of this book will enable one to while away many pleasant hours, receiving at the same time much profitable knowledge.

Campaigning on the Oxus and the Fall of Khiva, by J. A. MacGahan. Harper & Bros., New York, 1874.

This is an intensely interesting account of travels in Central Asia, with the conquering armies of the Emperor of all the Russias, which marched against the Khivan territories in 1873. The author was the regular correspondent of the New York Herald, who went to see and report, and enjoying the opportunities of observation which a reporter and 'interviewer' is always allowed, made good use of his privileges, and has given to the reading world a book of great value. It is written in easy reporter like style,—maylap, with some of the high coloring and freedom which distinguish the Herald's correspondents; but it gives an account of Central Asia, customs of the people and scenes of the war that is very valuable.

Some of the rarest and most beautiful thoughts that have ever found shape in words, the tenderest pathos and hymnings of Christian devotion have been expressed in old Latin Hymns which have been preserved and come down to us through the ages as fresh as when first penned, and awakening in us emotions like those which gave them birth. They are vehicles of Christian thought, embody a history of some of the most important events known to man, and are a faithful daguerrotype of the age when they were written. Many of the most noted and cherished hymns of the early Christians, as well as many of those of a later day which from their beauty and tender feeling have been deemed worthy of being transmitted safely to posterity and therefore have been translated into Latin, are collected and presented to the reader in the volume prepared by Mr. March. It should be in the library of every classical scholar.

Littell's Living Age for 1875.—Since its absorption of "Every Saturday," The Living Age, always the chief, has become the only eclectic weekly of the country. After its successful career of over thirty years, it seems more vigorous and prosperous than ever before. And it would be difficult to overestimate its value to American readers as the only thorough as well as fresh compilation of a current literature which embraces within its great and generally inaccessible mass, the productions of the ablest living writers in science, fiction, poetry, history, biography, politics, theology, philosophy, criticism, and art.

Represented in its pages are such distinguished authors as Prof. Max. Muller, Pr. f. Tyndall, Dr. W. B. Carpenter, Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Prof. Huxley, Frances Power Cobbe, Richard A. Proctor, Matthew Arnold, The Duke of Argyll, Charles Kingley, Arthur Helps, James Anthony Froude, Mrs Mulock, Anthony Trollope, Mrs. Oliphant, Miss Thackeray, Wm. Black, Geo. MacDonald, Jean Ingelow Erckmann-Chatrian, Ivan Turgenieff, Tennyson, Browning, and many others,—an unequaled array of names.

For those who wish the cream of both home and foreign literature, the publishers make some advantageous combinations with other leading periodicals, by which a subscriber is, at a remarkably small cost, put in possession of the best current literature of the world. The volume begins January 1st, but those remitting now, the intervening weekly numbers are sent GRATIS.

Winston begins to rival Durham as a tobacco market, and is making inroads upon its population. Mr. H. H. Simms, of whom the Plant speaks in commendable terms, sees that Winston is the rising star and goes to worship and live in its light.

Messrs. Stokes & Thomas are erecting a mammoth leaf-tobacco warehouse in Durham. Mr. Stokes is an excellent gentleman, sober and upright, a friend of the writer and a subscriber to the Advocate—for all of which he deserves our wishes for his success.

The Landmark says there is a prospect of telegraphic communication between Statesville and the busy world.

We learn that Thos. B. Pace, of Chatham, has been appointed Internal Revenue store-keeper, and has been assigned at the Warehouse of Messrs. Thomas & Johnson, at Hadley's Mills, N. C.

The Piedmont Press: Mr. J. G. Hall, of this place, had a beef butchered Tuesday, the four quarters of which weighed 1,602 pounds. This beef was one of a pair of oxen exhibited at our late Fair and which failed to take the premium. We challenge the State to beat it.

The trial of Joseph H. Elliott for the murder of Charles T. Neal at Statesville last winter, took place at Wilkesboro last week. The number of witnesses summoned on both sides was 75 or 80. The people of Greene county, according to the Goldsboro Messenger, are opposed to the calling of a convention.

Some obstructions on the Carolina Central Railroad near Monroe, were discovered in time to prevent a serious accident to the train and passengers.

The Monroe Enquirer tells of a negro in that place, who was hurt in a singular manner. He was engaged in unloading iron when a piece flew up and struck him on the brck of the head almost completely scalping him. The cut commenced near the right ear and extended nearly around the head and the skin was raised from the skull over the top of the head. The Doctor could hide his whole hand under the scalp, at least a third of the skin on the head being taken off.

There was a row, in regulation style, on the occasion of John Robinson's circus in Monroe. Several negroes were knocked down and six or eight put in jail.

From 5,000 to 8,000 people attended the circus in Monroe, which the Enquirer calls a "great mammoth humbug."

On Saturday night the 14th ult., says the Oxford Leader, Miss Lizzie Shaw, living on the Hillsboro road, near Mr. Rufus Bobbitt's in this county, while handling a lightwood torch ignited some straw in the loft of her house, and in her efforts to extinguish the flames her clothes caught on fire and she was so badly burned that she died the next night.

Mr. W. M. Corkill, one of the proprietors of the Piedmont Press offers for sale one-fourth interest in that paper, as he is desirous of leaving the state. The Press is an excellent paper and is published in a section where the patronage ought to be and no doubt is good.

His reputation as a wide-awake merchant is growing and, more than all, is deserved.

Died, in the city of Raleigh on the 21st of July last, Eugenia C., daughter of H. H. and Elizabeth Thomas. She was born on the 22nd of August 1865.

She was quiet and earnest in the discharge of her daily duties, patient under the trials of life, kind and affectionate as daughter and sister and in her last illness evinced a sincere trust in the Lover of souls. While pauing with weakness and writhing in pain, she gave to the visiting minister the assurance that she was leaning on her Savior and that he was sustaining her. The spirit of prayer seemed to go with her even in the mazes of delirium.

Above her sleeping dust there lingers the sweet promise of the resurrection of God's children, while the comforting hope of her eternal happiness arose with her departing soul.

May God give peace and salvation to all members of the family who still survive!

Clara V. eldest daughter of J. M. and C. A. Shook, was born in Catawba co N C. Dec. 21st 1858, and died at the residence of her parents, in South Iredell. May 23rd 1874, aged 15 years 5 mo and 2 days.

Deceased was married to Wm. H. Henry, Feb. 3rd 1874, and in less than four months, the nuptial bond was broken, the dearest earthly ties were severed. She who entered upon the active duties and responsibilities of life, with such a bright future before her, was destined soon to exchange the society of loved ones for the "narrow house appointed for all the living." While a pupil of D. F. Coll ge in 1872, she professed religion and connected herself with the M. E. Church, South When disease began to prey upon her system, her mental, as well as physical powers gave way and for some time, before the messenger came for her, she was unable to discourage friends and relatives the state of her mind. In regard to her hope of happiness beyond the grave. We trust, that all is well with her—that, that Jesus whose disciple she professed to be, was with her in the tryh hour of death, to comfort and support—that now he has reached that happy place, where sin cannot follow and temptation never can reach. Kind, affectionate, sympathizing, she had many friends. The large concourse of people that attended her funeral, attest the esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. "The silver cord is loosed," devoted parents refuse to be comforted because the light of the household has been removed. but "God doeth all things well." May parents and husband, brother and sisters so love that when the Master comes and calls for them, they may be prepared to enter into the "rest which remaineth for the people of God."

T. A. Cuox.

Col. D. A. G. Palmer, was born in Stanly county N. C November 18 h 1811, and died in Statesville, N. C, November 4th 1874.

He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, about 42 years ago, under the ministry of the Rev. David Denick, of the South Carolina Conference, and was faithful until death. He removed to Statesville about 4 years ago; the other years of his life were spent in his native county, where he was highly respected and esteemed both as a citizen, and as a christian, filling positions of trust and responsibility in church and state for many years. His death sickness was protracted through several months of pain and weakness, but he bore his sufferings with christian fortitude, and was sustained to the last by a strong faith, and a bright hope. His end was peaceful and tranquil.

READ THE FOLLOWING TESTIMONIALS.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE, N. C., Oct. 23

Mr. C. P. Knight—Dear Sir: We have [illegible] months been using your Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint on our College Building, and are well pleased with it. Though it was applied by one [illegible] experience in such work, yet we have a good job.—We shall continue to use it—believing that in point of economy, durability and facility of application, it is superior to any other pigment offered in the market.

W. G. SIMMONS.

—o—

From S. McGill, M. D.

THE PLAINS, FAUQUIER Co., Va., Feb 6, 1874.

Mr. C. P. Knight—Sir: The Paint came safe to hand as ordered, 2 kegs, 5 gallons each, and 3 buckets, 1 gallon each. As practice was slack, I did the job myself. Two weeks (not constant) work, completed the house, two coats; the last coat I applied in doors, and it is now generally conceded, that, for "enamel" its the hardness, and body, and harmony of colors, there is not a handsomer job in the place. I saved sixty-five dollars by the operation—which is an item just now with Southern people. It should be generally adopted in this State. Any country lad can apply it. I have never dabbled in such stock as "certificonials," but I feel so forcibly the great adaptability of your "Enamel Paint" to the whims of our people—its excellency of material, in beauty of color, and in the fact of its being "ready mixed," that I give you permission (if it is desirable to you) to make what use you think proper of this letter. Very respectfully and truly,

From the Vestry of Mount Calvary Church

Baltimore, August 18, 1874.

Mr. C. P Knight—Dear Sir: We take pleasure in testifying to the excellent qualities of the Paint ordered from you, and applied to the exterior of Mount Calvary Church, in this city. It has now been nearly two years since it was put on, and for beauty of color, freshness of gloss and durability, it has fulfilled our largest expectations. Respectfully yours,

WILMINGTON, N. C., Dec. 26, 1873.

We desire to call especial attention to the advertisement of Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint. We can commend it from a knowledge of its merits. Some of the employees of this office having purchased some of this paint from Mr. C. P. Knight of Baltimore, have used it, and speak in the highest terms of it, after a trial of several months. We find it a most durable and cheap paint. It has a much finer finish, and its cost and convenience will recommend it be all in need of paint.

To Mothers.

I perceive that you bring up your children quite too tenderly. Your desire is to be a good mother. But, my friend, the first duty of a good mother is not so much to see that you secure to your children proper susceptibilities, as to accustom them, as early as possible, to what is the basis of every virtue; to moderation, and the control of their animal instincts.

You must also beware lest, instead of a tender mother, you play the part of a flatterer. Children who are brought up delicately from their earliest youth must necessarily be unable to resist the impulse of their instinct, which is always so powerful It is therefore your duty, my love, to educate your children so that their nature shall not receive any wrong direction. The latter happens when the love of pleasure gains the control of their mind, and when their bodies are accustomed always to require pleasant sensations; so that the latter become feeble and excitable, and the former disinclined to all labor and exertion. Therefore, nothing is more necessary than that we should exercise our pupils most in what they dislike most, although they make sad faces at it, and are made unhappy. There is no surer means of causing them, instead of becoming slaves to their passions, and thereby disinclined to labor, and controlled by their animal impulses, to require an early respect for what is beautiful and noble, and to enjoy themselves in this, instead of the former.—THEANO, the Wife of Pythagoras.

Girls, don't Talk Slang.

Girls, don't talk slang. If it is necessary that any one in the family should do that, let it be your big brother, though I would advise him not to adopt "pigeon English" when there is an elegant systematized language that he can just as well use. But don't use it. You can have no idea how it sounds to ears unused as adverse to it to hear a young lady, when she is asked if she is going to some place, answer: "Not much!" or if requested to do something which she does not wish, to hear her say: "Can't see it."

Not long ago I heard a young miss, who is educated and accomplished, in speaking of a young man, say that she intended to "go for him!" and when her assistance to some work was required she answered: "Not for Joe." Now, young ladies of exceptional character and really good education fall into this habit, thinking it shows smartness to answer back in slang phrases, and they soon slip flippantly from their tongues with a saucy pertness that is neither lady-like nor becoming. "I bet," or "you bet, is well enough among men who are trading horses or land; but the contrast is starting and positively shocking to hear those words issue from the lips of a young lady. They seem at once to surround her with the rougher associations of men's daily life, and bring her down from the pedestal of purity, wherein, she is placed, to their own course level.

Bad Wages.

'I have left my place, mother,' said a poor boy, when he returned from his work.

'Why have you left?' said the mother. 'Was your master unkind to you?'

'No, mother, he was kind enough, said the boy.

'Didn't you like the work?' asked the mother

'It was the bad wages I didn't like' said the boy solemly. 'My master wanted me to sin, and the wages of sin is death.'

His master had expected him to lie about the goods and deceive and cheat the customers; but the boy said.

"No sir; I can't do such things; I will leave your service. And he did leave it; and he was right too. Such boys will make mothers' hearts glad and will find that the Lord takes care of those who trust in him and will not work for Satan nor earn the wages of sin.

"A DROP OF JOY IN EVERY WORD"

FLEMINGTON, Hunterdon co., N.J., June 26, '71.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—It is with a happy heart that I put these lines to acknowledge that you and your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets are blessings to the World. These medicines cannot be too highly praised for they have almost brought me out of the grave. Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face, procured your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets, and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in every word I write. God's blessing rest on you and your wonderful medicines is the humble prayer of

Yours truly,
JAMES O. BELLIS.

When a medicine will promptly cure such terrible eating ulcers and free the blood of the virulent poison causing them, who can longer doubt its wonderful virtues? Dr. Pierce, however, does not wish to place his Golden Medical Discovery in the catalogue of quack patent nostrums by recommending it to cure every disease, nor does he so recommend it, but what he does claim is this, that there is but one form of blood disease that it will not cure, and that disease is cancer. He does not recommend his Discovery for that disease, for he knows it to be the most searching blood cleanser yet discovered, and that it will free the blood and system of all other known blood poisons, be they animal, vegetable or mineral. The Golden Discovery is warranted by him to cure the worst forms of Skin Diseases, as all forms of Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions, also all Glandular Swellings, and the worst form of Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores of Neck, Legs or other parts, and all Scrofulous Diseases of the Bones, as White Swellings, Fever Sores, Hip Joint and Spinal Diseases, all of which belong to Scrofulous diseases.

Good Economists

French people have a knack of making a little go a great way. In the first place not an ounce of food is wasted in harvesting or preparing for market. In the next place, not an ounce more of vegetable, flesh, fish or fowl, groceries or liquids, than is really needed, ever goes in the pot or kettle,, or is placed on the table. The wife of every French family knows to a nicety, what quantity of each kind of food is the least that will suffice to make a comfortable meal, and not a particle more than that is cooked or served. There are no slop buckets full of broken victuals left on a table, after breakfast or dinner, to be thrown on the streets or manure heap, or flung to dogs or swine, as in America. No pieces of bread and meat, or vegetables, are thrown away; such quantities are not bought as to become stale or spoiled in the cellar or pantry. Servants are never permitted to waste or steal food for poor relations, as in America. The house wife looks after the marketing, her kitchen and her pantry, with sharp eyes and unflagging care. The economy in the consumption of fuel for cooking and house warming is immense, as compared with that in our wasteful country. One reason, of course is, that wood and coal in France are scarce and dear. They cost at least double the price paid therefor in the United States; but the domestic consumption is not one quarter as much CHAFES AND INSECTS.—Near Sacramento, in California, they are cultivating the beet for sugar, and the army worm threatened it with complete destruction. Various plans had been tried to get rid of the pest. After a while some one whose wits were about him, bethought himself to experiment with turkeys. A flock of a little less than three thousand were let loose upon the invaders by relays, and after a severe struggle between voraciousness and the worms the former came off triumphant. One of the birds was gorged so full that he died and on opening him it was found that he had made way with fifteen hundred of the pest as his individual share. Any one can reckon up for himself what would have been the number probably eaten by the whole flock, reckoning them at three thousand birds. Our own farmers might get a hint from this turkey cure for too much insects, and go to work accordingly.

CLEANING CARPETS.—Take a pail of cold water, and add to it three gills of oxgall. Rub it into the carpet with a soft brush. It will raise a lather; which must be washed off with clear cold water. Rub dry with a clean cloth. In nailing down a carpet after the floor has been washed, be certain that the floor is quite dry, or the nails will rust and injure the carpet. Fuller's earth is used for cleaning carpets, and weak solutions of alum and soda are used in reviving the colors. The crumb of a hot wheaten loaf rubbed over a carpet has been found effective.

ANTIDOTE FOR SMUT IN WHEAT.—Sonoma, Cal.: We have neither rust nor smut in any of our wheat fields. I beg leave respectfully to differ from the advice given on page 467 of the monthly report of the Department for November and December, 1871, where in farmers are advised to "disard all idea of mixing ingredients with it (seed wheat) to destroy smut." This question has been so well and thoroughly tested in our State as to be no longer even a matter of doubt. All our seed wheat is soaked from eight to twelve hours in a solution of bluestone, (sulphate of copper,) in the proportion of six ounces to every 100 pounds of wheat. Smut being a fungus growth, resulting from diseased grains, the germ or vitality of these diseased grains is killed by the solution of vitriol, and thus prevented from growing and contaminating the sound grain. A farmer here would be thought crazy were he to sow his wheat without subjecting it to the above process.—Agricultural Report, November.

A Valuable Medical Treatise

Hostetter's United States Almanac for 1873, for distribution, gratis, throughout the United States, and all civilized countries of the Western Hemisphere, will be published about the first of January, in the English, German French, Norwegian, Welsh, Swedish, Bi-lingual, Bohemian and Spanish languages, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health should read and ponder the valuable suggestions it contains. In addition to an admirable medical treatise on the causes, prevention and cure of a great variety of diseases, it embraces a large amount of information interesting to the merchant, the mechanic, the miner, the farmer, the planter, and professional man; and the calculations have been made for such meridians and latitudes as are most suitable for a correct and comprehensive national Calendar.

The manufacturers extraordinary sanitary effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the staple tonic and alterative of more than half the Christian world, are fully set forth in language, which are also interspersed with pictorial illustrations, valuable recipes for the household and farm, humorous anecdotes, and other instructive and amusing reading matter, original and selected. Among the Annuals to appear with the opening of the year, this will be one of the most needed and may be had for the asking. Druggists and dealers generally throughout the United States and Canada, and many other lands, have copies for gratuitous distribution. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp, will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood The Bitters are sold in every city, town and village, and are extensively used throughout the entire civilized world.

Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint.

It is but little more than a quarter of a century since the art of painting was confined almost exclusively to a few colors, principally speaking. Now, however, thanks to the ingenuity of BRADLEY, we are not only enabled to apply the paint if we desire, but can see the shades in advance, sample cards being furnished gratis, with the different shades of tints numbered. Those who have used the "Enamel Paint," speak from experience, that it is all that is claimed for it, and evidently superior to the "old style paint." As an evidence of the great worth of the Enamel Paint, we most respectfully request all our readers to carefully read the excellent testimonials of Mr. C. P. Knight, in this paper.

Selected Poetry.

Contentment.

[illegible] beautiful stanzas are 200 years old, but were written by Robert Southwell.

My conscience is my crown,
Contented thoughts my rest,
My heart is full of fruit,
My bliss is in my breast.

My wishes are but few,
All easy to fulfill:
I make the limits of my power
The bounds unto my will.

I have no care of gold,
Who doth is my wealth:
My mind to me an empire is,
While grace affordeth health.

I fly the high climbing thoughts—
The wings of swelling pride:
Their fall is worst, that from the height
Of greatest honors slide.

Some sails of largest size
The storm doth soonest tear,
I bear so small and low a sail
As reacheth me from fear.

So while I pass Fortune's calm
I see my betters drown:
Who gazing stands, and smiles to think
How quickly she will frown.

And while I am in froward mood
Secure of an angry Fee,
Small is my ground to build her cone,
Less loss to let her go.

For the Advocate.

Concentration.

MR EDITOR:—The genius of Methodism is her aggressive spirit, conceding the largest liberty to others, and profoundly respecting their rights. She in form claims the world as her parish, and recognizes every other truly evangelical christian and church as her co-adjutor rather than as a rival or antagonist, and hesitates not therefore to lift her standard and unfurl her banner every where, on the high-ways and by ways, in populous cities or western wilds, along the ocean shore or on the mountain top, in christian or heathen lands, in the domain of royalty or the realm of an established heirarcy. She has even gone to the eternal city, and under the very nose of the Pope planted her standard hard by the throne of the "mother of harlots."

This aggressive, invasive spirit, however, springs from no hostile feelings or unholy ambition. She wages no war against any enemy, excepting the great enemy of both God and man. She marshals her hosts and contends for the conquest, but it is not the lives or liberties of men or their gold that she is striving for, but that she may promulgate the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, proclaiming peace on earth and good will among men, and looking to the moral elevation and final salvation of our race, or in one word, the grand, prompting, moving, pervading impulse of his aggressive policy is to "spread scriptural holiness over these lands." What a great work? And how she has been moved to that work, and what have been her labors, toils and sacrifices, and final success, let her history and statistics, at her near approaching centenial jubilee, tell. But it would not be strange if, in surveying the world as her field of operations, and contemplating the vast army already at work, and the wide "fields white unto the harvest" that are still opening up before her, she should at some times and in some ways mistake or adopt a line of policy not always the best.

In carrying out and carrying forward her aggressive policy, demanding a sending forth, and a sending out of her forces, she sometimes scatters a little too much and too far. To show what I mean, if you will allow, I will borrow a military illustration. Many a military commander has weakened his power and defeated his success by deploying too large a picket and detaching after them too large an advance guard, leaving thereby his main army, or more important posts in the interior too much scattered, and to the extent of this error, too much unprotected; besides the officer on post duty finds it almost impossible to reach or communicate with so many and so remote out-posts, and that mutual protection and co-operation so essential to safety and success is almost an impossibility, on account of the situation; besides, these out-posts, however important and numerous, may be stormed and overwhelmed, and have to be abandoned. No army, however well armed and disciplined, could successfully invade an enemy's land under such a policy as this. What ought its chief commander then do? give up the contest, abandon the enterprise, disband his army? by no means. Let him concentrate. Yes, that's the word, concentrate his forces.

Now for many years I have been watching these aggressive movements of our Church, and am satisfied that the errors pointed out in the above illustration will apply with equal force, and to a larger extent, to the Methodist Church. The following case would be in point. Here are two neighborhoods whose population is rather sparse, yet, whose aggregate would make a good congregation. At some School house very unsuitable, perhaps in some inconvenient, out of the way place, each neighborhood have a place for preaching. After a time the increase of population, additions to the Church, &c., demands that better and more commodious places of worship should be erected. Now if they would only consent to unite their forces, and concentrate their efforts upon some middle ground, the enterprise would ensure to the Church a better house of worship, and a more permanent and enduring influence for good. But no, each division must have their own church building and membership; neither party will concede to the other, and sometimes as much from ambition as any other feeling. They erect two Churches, when but one is needed, and thus scatter and divide their membership, and to this extent weaken their influence for good, besides imposing additional labor and oversight upon their pastor, whose ministrations are zealously watched and as zealously demanded by both parties.

Many of what are called our large Circuits in the North Carolina Conference, are swelled up just in this way. If the law of concentration could be brought to bear upon them, without detracting one single unit from their numerical force, their moral strength and influence could be almost double.

If our national motto "E Pluribus Unum" is true in regard to nations, it is equally true in regard to the Church, and however much we may spurn the charge that "Methodism has been or will be a failure," we are compelled to admit that one of her most formidable hindrances, one that has clogged her wheels and blocked up her way as much or more than anything else, has been this very one, and we are trying to point out, viz: the want of concentrated effort and policy. And at this point let me be understood as by no means anticipating, or even desiring the organic union of the two great bodies of Methodists. There are numerous and insuperable difficulties in the way of this; until these are adjusted and harmonized, we had better stand as we are. This very national division of our Church indeed affords a strong reason and argument for us here in the South giving more earnest heed to the policy of concentration.

Take another case, not uncommon. Here are two Circuits, with their central rallying points, from which goes out an influence and power that is felt and seen throughout all this locality. After a time a few brethren on the out-posts join with others on their out-posts and go about establishing a Church or camp-ground in these isolated regions remote from these central points, the result of which is to detract from, if it does not break down their interior strength, while it imposes additional and heavy labors upon the pastor; and after, perhaps, years of toil, expenditure and effort to build up and establish, at last have to abandon the undertaking; not, however, till they have diverted and thereby weakened the moral strength of the Church, and retarded her progress in their locality, and all this by weakening and scattering her central influences. Two circuits in an attempt to establish a third, may fall into the same error, and cripple the progress of the Church in some way. Our central points must not be too much sub-divided, otherwise our central influences will be too much weakened. Neither will the policy succeed of enlarging them by "hitching on" outside and remote appointments. Many of our Circuits are well nigh broken down in this way. Aggressive as our Church may be in our policy, she cannot carry the gospel to every man's door. A large portion, at least, of mankind must come to us, seek out and rally around our central points—concentrate.

But then it may be asked what is become of our mission work? I answer: detach it from the regular work, and organize it under special arrangements, looking to the establishment of central points; set down our standard there, and then rally around it, and when there is hope of permanency and success, spread out, centralize and establish first, and then reach out and link on.

The stores at which they deal, the court house to which they are summoned, the black-smith or mechanic which they employ may require miles of travel to reach, by men who live in remote and isolated regions of country; so must it be in regard to the Church upon whose ministry they attend. They must seek it out, even though it requires a travel of miles to reach it; the effort to seek them out, and carry the gospel to their very door, has cost our Church more toil and time, and an expenditure of more labor, and means, than would have half-way carried the gospel to the heathen, and it is becoming a question whether these aggressions, in this direction, have accomplished the good they should have done, in view of the patient, continued and earnest efforts that perhaps for years have been bestowed upon them.

Whatever may have been the success of these aggressive movements of our Church in former years, and there was a time when they were pre-eminently so, they certainly are not so now. They not only lack the element of permanency, but divert means and evangelical effort from our centres, where these would accomplish more for the Church and for the world than they will do or could do in these out-side regions.

The true policy, therefore, of our Church, in regard to her aggressive work, is to turn, with renewed interest and zeal, to her central points, her regular work. If she can sustain herself here, and stay the tide of sin, as seen in infidelity, fashionable extravagance and folly, covetousness, selfish indulgence, &c., that is crippling, benumbing and almost neutralizing the influence of our Church; if she can awaken the Church to greater diligence and watchfulness, and inspire her with more earnestness and zeal, and thus ward off the evils and dangers which threaten her, she will carry the aggressive movements into a channel that will accomplish more for her good and God's glory than were she to acquire a domain of territory. Look to the centre—concentrate.

It is evident, something is demanded to be done. Our preachers complain that their circuits are too large. Our Presiding Elders are overwhelmed with the vastness and extent of their districts, and our Bishops are literally run down with their accumulated labors, toil and travel, which their general superintendency demands. Now where is this thing going to stop and what is to be the end of it? It certainly is about time the Church, and even the preachers themselves, should remember that from the Bishop down, they are made like other men, of flesh and blood, muscles and nerves, brain and heart, and that it is possible to over-tax, over-reach and finally overwhelm them by the magnitude of these exhausting and ever reenring exactions. Does the Church intend to run down her principal officers, superintendents and standard-bearers? Certainly not, and yet she is in a fair way to do so, unless these labors can be lightened or economized in some way. It is here that the policy of concentration comes to the rescue; economise and abbreviate these labors by concentrating them, and what is lost by abbreviation will be more than compensated for by effectiveness; in this way you may bring all these labors that are now wearing out and running down our leaders, within the compass of human strength and endurance, and thus enhance their usefulness and perpetuity.

I have said in regard to our Mission work, "detach it from our regular, and organize it under special arrangements." It might be asked in what way could this be done? I answer; throw all the present Missionary fields into one or more districts, as suggested by one of our P. E's, and then appoint a P. E. of Missions, whose duty it will be to take the general care, oversight and management of this interest of our church, and in his quarterly visitations determine at what points to establish centres, and how many of these may be made effective and permanent; and when and in what way can they be incorporated into the regular work—and on the other hand, ascertain where and to what extent these Mission fields are fruitless of resuls, and environed with difficulties and impediments that are likely to make them a present and prospective burden to the Church; and when it is developed that these present and prospective impediments exist, lop them off as a burden to the church, yielding no adequate fruit; as a hindrance to our Mission work, diverting means and labors from other points, giving promise of more success and permanency; as a clog, not only to our Mission work, but the Itinerancy itself.

Adopt a policy something like this, Mr. Editors, and you will largely increase our Missionary contributions, gain more success and permanency to our missionary work, and encourage our Church in her aggressive policy, by guiding it with more wisdom and efficiency.

PROF. TYNDALL IN A NUTSHELL.

Prof. Tyndall's laborious address to the British Association may be readily summed up in the simple restatement of a very old argument. An egg contains all the material necessary to form a chick. It holds also, for a time at least, the force requisite to construct the animal out of its component elements. The only thing needed is to set the formative processive in action by the application of another form of force or motion, called heat. But this last must be supplied from without. The sum of Prof. Tyndall's researches is precisely analogous. He finds in matter "the promise and potency of every form and quality of life," just as the naturalist and organic chemist find the organic materials of a chick, and the promise and potency to form one, within the eggshell.—But neither the philosopher nor the experimentalist can go one step beyond the facts. They are wholly unable to explain the something from without, in whose absence neither an eggful nor a world of life can be called into a palpable existence. This is the point at which philosophy again arrives—the old point at which it has been arriving by various paths ever since the first effort to penetrate an inscrutable mystery. The Egyptians symbolized the difficulty, and their inability to surmount it, by offering the mysterious egg reverentially to their gods. They laid the unsolved problem of the finite at the feet of the Infinite. Prof. Tyndall and the British Association might learn wisdom, without humiliation, from the ancient idolators, and emulate their not ignoble submission.—London Globe.

Apprehensions are entertained in regard to the future of the University of Jena, and that in consequence of the great financial difficulties in which it has long been placed it is feared that it may be necessary to close its lecture halls and to dismiss its professors.

Present and Future

This earthly life is full of trial. A thousand outward circumstances combine to perplex and grieve, while inwardly the man who resolves on right living finds elements of disorder weakness, and wrong propensities, and a personal spiritual foe whose opposition is malignant, untiring, and powerful. We all know the heart-sinking which longs for escape from the strife; and David's is not the only tired spirit that has cried, "O, that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest." Heaven is the resting-place; and it is upward to its realm of peace the finger of our Saviour points, as he says, "Let not your heart be troubled." But what degree of rest may we now have? How much of heaven may be enjoyed on earth? Let us not expect too much. Foes, thorns, roughness, may be looked for to the last step of life's pathway. Sorrows will wound weakness distress, and the great soul hunger and thirst be in large measure unsatisfied, till we pass "through the gate into the city." And many a man's craving for holiness and rest fails of satisfaction because it embraces too much.

We shall never be right till we get to heaven! But what of the present? Let us open the Bible and ask, Is a heaven on earth a poetic fancy, or an actual possibility? Heaven is love.—We may be filled with that on earth. "Herein is our love made perfect." Heaven is purity; and here the blessedness of "the pure in heart" may be ours. Heaven is fellowship—communion with Deity. "They shall see his face." And the believer's joy is now that "truly our fellowship is with his Son Jesus Christ." Is heaven rest, and joy, and light? "We which have believed do enter into rest;" here we may "rejoice evermore," and "walk in the light of the Lord." To gather up all, will Christ be our heaven? Ruth orford would go through ten deaths and ten hells to reach him, he said; M'Cheyne, that a smile of his was worth a thousand worlds; and Charles Wesley:

O could I catch a smile from thee,
And drop into eternity!

Blessed be God, we have Jesus now. To us who believe he is precious, not simply as having loved us and died for us, and opened the kingdom of heaven, but as here with us now, in our hearts, a living, loving, personal Saviour. "I am the world's Redeemer mine!" Thousands to day testify that in the possession of Jesus, in his love, his presence, his fellowship, they anticipate on earth the happiness of heaven.

Our life in Christ tends upward.—"Set your affections on things above." Here the shadows are lengthening, and the chill night creeps upon us as the sun sets; the day will soon be over! There the light is that of the morning, which grows into eternal day. No limit to the progress of heaven! More love, more enlargement, more rest, more fellowship, more fulness of joy, pleasures forever more! Shall we now rest satisfied without the purity and love which will make us meet for the inheritance which remains? Shall we not go up and possess the goodly land which even here is provided for us?

Set Thy House in Order.

"Died suddenly!" How often these solemn words meet our gaze in the newspapers! They suggest most important inquiries to each one of us. Reader:

1. Is your business in such shape that if you should die to-nightit might be settled by your survivors without unnecessary loss to your estate? Immense sums litigation are involved, by improperly kept account books, and the neglecting of full memoranda of unfinished business.

2. Is your will made? In the event of your pulse ceasing to beat before to-morrow morning, would no injustice be done to your heirs, and those objects of Christian benevolence which it is your intention to promote after your death? Died intestate! is often the precursor of jealousies, and heart burnings, and injustice, which might have been prevented by a few strokes of the pen.

3. Have you paid all your debts? Or have you made arrangements that your creditors shall not be wronged? There may be some balances against you which you acknowledge yourself morally bound to meet, but against which no legal claim can be presented. You intend to pay them after a while. You have the ability now, but you are neglecting them. Take heed lest death, coming when you did not expect him, shall put it forever beyond your power to do justly.

4. Are you on amicable terms, as far as you can be, with everybody?—You spoke an unkind word, and wounded a sensitive heart. Have you tried to repair the damage? That brother, that sister, that neighbor, toward whom, in a moment of excitement, you acted an unchristian part, deserves better treatment. You are conscious of having wronged them. Had you not better ask their forgiveness and gain reconciliation now?—To-morrow there may be no opportunity. You know not what shall be on the morrow.

5 Have you made God your friend? If not, you have no time to lose? He waits to be gracious now. You will soon stand before Him. "This night thy soul may be required of thee." Take Jesus at once to be your Mediator and Saviour. Set the house in order.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Flower-Girl.

O my little sea-side girl,
What is in your garden growing?
"Rock-weeds and tangle-grass,
With the slow tide coming—going;
Samphire and marsh rosemary,
All along the wet shore creeping,
Sandwort, beach-peas, pimpernel,
Out of nooks and corners peeping."

O my little prairie girl,
What's in bloom among your grasses?
"Spring-beauties painted-cups,
Flushing when the south wind passes;
Beds of rose-pink centaury;
Compass-flowers to north-west turning;
Larkspur, orange-gold puccoon;
Leagues of lillies flame-red burning."

O my little mountain girl,
Have you anything to gather?
"White everlasting-bloom.
Not afraid of wind or weather;
Sweet-brier, leaning on the crag
That the lady-fern hides under;
Harebells, violets white and blue;
Who has sweeter flowers, I wonder?"

O my little maidens three,
I will lay your pretty posies—
Sea-scented, cloud-bedewed,
Prairie grasses, mountain roses—
On a bed of shells and moss.
Come and bend your bright heads nearer
Dear though all your blossoms are,
You three human flowers are dearer.

—Lucy Larcom, in St Nicholas

Bones and Meat.

There is a great deal of so called "criticism" wasted upon the Church in general and preachers in particular by those who sweepingly condemn people as a class, and things as a whole rather than confine their censure to such wrongs as should be righted, and which are no essential part of any system. But in the Methodist of last week we are glad to notice a discriminating and just criticism on a certain style of preaching so prevalent to-day, in which some points are very forcibly presented. The writer, Mr. John S. Havemeyer, says that from carefully prepared notes of sermons, he had found many discourses to be "sounds without substance; words and sentences without the savor of Scriptural saving truth—nothing in them to lift the hearer out of the world and to make his sinfulness to stand out and his weakness seem reality, or to stir him to seek and to serve the Lord with all his heart, and to aid him if he has already started." Among the several causes for this state of things mentioned by the writer, the two especially striking, as it seems to us, are, first, that "ministers have too great variety of occupation;" and, secondly, that "sermons are too abstract and indefinite."

With reference to the first, we suppose it is difficult for ministers, having especial qualifications, to keep out the paths of literature or even the lecture field, and within proper limitations we suppose there is no reason that they should; and certainly the loss to the world of the literature of Christian ministers, were such a thing possible, would be a calamity which could not be estimated, and which, more than anything else, would shake religion from turret to foundation. But when we consider the various pursuits, the speculations, the active, busy, and business life to which some clergymen devote themselves, it is a marvel that they ever find time to even preach—we do not say prepare—a sermon or make a pastoral call. As to the preaching of abstractions, the evil is a great one, we are sorry to say it is a general one, and some way it must be got rid of.—We must have in the pulpit less of the essay, less philosophizing, less speculative reasoning, and more simplicity, earnestness, and directness, and we must have freshness too. Because Saint Paul likened the Christian life to a warfare and a race, some ministers seem to think it must not be compared with anything else. As Sir Arthur Helps has said, the trouble with some ministers is that they preach as if Christianity were being presented for the first time. With reference to the preaching of abstractions, the following incident of the lamented John Newton seems appropriate. It appears that Newton once made a visit to a very distinguished man who had a great reputation as a dialetic teacher, and Newton heard him in the multitude of his distinctions, so logically and analytically laid down. When the discourse was finished the preacher came to him, shook him cordially by the hand, and said: "Well, Mr. Newton, how do you like the distinctions that I made?" "Why, sir, I liked them very well; but I perceive that you forgot one main one that lies at the bottom of them all." "Pray, sir, what was that?" "Why, sir, the distinction between bones and meat." And that is what clergy and laity all want—the "distinction between bones and meat.—Dr. Talmage.

A visitor asked him:

"What church are you of?"

"Of the church of Christ," he replied.

I mean, of what persuasion are you, then inquired the visitor.

"Persuasion!" said the dying man, as his eyes looked heavenward, beaming with love to the Saviour; "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate me from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus."

A SHORT METHOD WITH A MATERIALIST.

The London Spectator tells a good story: A materialistic lecturer and a city missionary met before an intelligent audience to discuss the question of responsibility. The lecturer's main point was the absurdity of the scriptural notion of judgment to come for deeds done in the body, inasmuch as all the matter of the body changes every few years, and it is unjust to hold the new man, who is formed from the new matter, responsible for the sins of the old man, who has passed out of existence. Then arose the city missionary, whose wits must have been lively, and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, it is a matter of regret to me that I have to engage in a discussion with a man of questionable character—with one, in fact, who is living with a woman to whom he is not married."

Up rosein wrath again the materialist. "Sir, this is shameful, and I repudiate your insolent attack on my character; I defy you to substantiate your charge. I was married to my wife twenty years ago, and we have lived happily together ever since. This is a mere attempt at ovading the force of my argument."

"On the contrary," replied the city missionary, "I reaffirm my charge. You were never married to the person with whom you are living. Twenty years ago two other people may have gone to Church, bearing your names, but there is not one atom in your bodies remaining of those which were then married. It follows inevitably that you are living in concubinage, unless you will admit that you are the same man who was married.

PANTHERS, LIONS AND SNAKES.

There was great excitement in New York, last week, by a newspaper hoax announcing that the wild beasts of Central Park had got out. The story grew until our own servant, with white cheeks, told us that "two thousand people had already been "killed, and they were still shovelling them up." It was probably got up by a reporter who had been taking a little too much the night before. It is said that bad whiskey taken in undue quantities will make a man see a whole menagerie, even when there is nothing there.

But there are snakes, panthers, and lions innumerable on every street, in the shape of bad books and unclean newspapers. They crouch and crawl and hiss everywhere. ANTHONY COMSTOCK has shot more of them than any other hunter. We wish we had many like him to throw body, mind, and soul into the effort for knocking out the teeth and extracting the sting of these cobras. Let parents especially be armed. See that none of those vile creatures hide in your children's trunks. Be watchful that not so much as a scrap of a dad newspaper comes in bound round a parcel of dry-goods. One drop of foam from a mad dog's tooth may produce hydrophobic convulsion. One picture evilly suggestive; or a sentence charged with double entendre, may do the work of moral devastation. Where are our police and mayors that they pass up and down perpetually in presence of news-stands reeking with the vomit of hell? Surely the sewers of the lost world have broken loose. Glad would we be if nothing worse than panthers, lions, and snakes were ranging the streets.—Christian at Work.

A Busy Man.

Mr. Spurgeon recently spoke in his characteristic way of the burden of his pastoral duties, to an audience in the Tabernacle, London. He referred to his illness, and advised every congregation to give their ministers a rest. They need not send them to Jericho, but let them have a little leisure, so that their brains might be refreshed. As for himself he had been six years without taking rest, and he found that his physical strenth was seriously weakened. No one living knew the toil and care he had to bear. He pleaded for no sympathy, but asked an indulgence if he some imes forgot something. He had to look after the Ophanage, had charge of a church with 4,000 members; sometimes there were marriages and burials to be performed, there was the weekly sermon to be revised, The Sword and Trowel to be revised, and besides all this there was a weekly average of 500 letters to be answered. This, however, was only half his duties, for there was innumerable churches established by friends, with the affairs of which he was closely connectly, to say nothing of those cases of difficulty which were constantly being referred to him.

Such is the power and wonder-working of God's Word, that it moves me to become an enemy to myself, and to empty myself of all that which best pleases my flesh; and to become a fool in this world, to give up the reputation of being a sagacious man, who moves on with the party of progress and stands upon the apex of the civilization of the time; and so pass into obscurity and contempt.—W. F. Besser.

Changes of the Body.

When science discovered that the human body underwent an entire change during a period of seven years, it was thought very remarkable, but Dr. Lyon Playfair read a letter a few days ago before a British Social Science Congress, wherein he declared that "all the particles of the body changed every six weeks." The same eminent authority wisely declares that the substance of all our sanity science, accumulated by ages, might be summed up in the pregnant advice of the prophet, "Wash and be clean." This learned physician says that for a thousand years after the civilization of the Egyptians, the Jews, the Greeks and the Romans faded, there was not a man or woman in Europe that ever took a bath. To this fact he attributes, in a large measure, the wondrous epidemics of the middle ages, which cut off one-fourth of the population of Europe—the spotted plague, the black death, the sweating sickness, and the terrible mental epidemics which followed in their train—the dancing mania, the mewing mania, the biting mania and witchcraft.

Bores.

A late move was made in the British Parliament to allow a pause between the prayers and sermon, at church service, to allow those to leave who did not wish to stay and be bored with a dull sermon. In this country we need no act of Parliament to authorize us to ignore prayers, and sermon, too, if our Republican wills are so minded or our temporay convenience is so best served. The members of Vatican councils and Episcopal conventions make much of prayers. It was the most decided satire of the season, Bishop Wiley sending word to the lobbies and committee-rooms that the "members of conference might come in now, as prayers were over!" There is truth as well as poetry in the assertion of a member of the Illinois Conference, that when officers of the General Conference come before the Annual to speak of the weightiest interests of the Church, members often seize their hats and the opportunity to get a breath of fresh air outside. And yet preachers wonder at the growing irreverence of the laity, and their indisposition any longer to listen to sermons.

Ministers' Rest Day.

The Christian Review believes that ministers are bound to obey the ten commandments as well as laymen, and that they have no right to work seven days in the week. As they cannot take Sunday as their rest day, they should set apart some other day.

"No man can work seven days in the week without violating the law of God; and no man can violate the law of God with impunity—even if he is a clergyman. Settle upon a day Most ministers will take Monday; the wise ones will take Saturday. Lay aside all parochial cares. Turn the key on the study. Shut up the books of theology. If you read, take useful books for your companions; but better yet, take none at all. Go into the garden; go into the carpenter's shop; go into the woods; sleep; think as little as possible; meditate rather than thank; let the mind lie fallow; dismiss sermons, studies parish work and parish duties, and account every attempt on their part to obtrude on your chosen restday a temptation of Satan to be resisted; and you will be astonished to find, after a year's experience with what freshness and vigor and mental vitality you will assume the duties that you had laid aside, and how the work that had grown wearisome will become an inspiration and a delight."

GEMS.

God enclosed the nations in the evangelical net of Galilean fishermen

Let the doctrine of the Cross be once made vital in the soul, then would there be no need of exhortation, alarm or threatening, in view of this or that judgment. It would be sufficient to say, "the Saviour died for me." If we are in trouble for our sins, and the hope of salvation vanishes, and the voice comes, "Christ has died and earned salvation for us," how the heart not only seizes but holds fast to the declaration! How the truth penetrates like a divine power into the soul, so that it can never be lost or forgotten! Then are our sins buried in the depths of the sea; they can no more tyrannize over us. Then we need sin no more.—Gessner.

Only by being made spiritual is a man capacitated for the apprehension of spiritual objects, such as God and divine things; and only by the energy thus obtained is he able critically to test, and spiritually to govern all the remaining portion of his being, as something inferior and subservient to the Spirit.—Beck.

It will be found in the end that the researches of right reason are directly in the line of faith's leading—that the scheme of Christianity as set forth in the doctrines of the Gospel is in accordance with true science—yea its very substance—and that religion passes out of the ken of reason only when the eye of reason has reached its horizon, and that faith is but its continuation, revealing to the devout worshiper the things that eye hath not seen, nor hath entered into the heart of man to conceive.—Poor.

Good manners is the art of making those people easy with whom we converse; whoever makes the fewest persons uneasy is the best bred man in company.—Swift.

Coleridge, when lecturing as a young man, was once violently hissed. He immediately retorted: "When a cold stream of truth is poured on red-hot prejudices, no wonder that they hiss.

The man who has never tried the companionship of a little child has carelessly passed by one of the greatest pleasures of life, as one passes a rare flower without plucking or knowing its value.

Good manners are not learned from arbitrary teaching so much as acquired from habit. They grow upon us by use. A coarse, rough nature at home, begets a habit of roughness which cannot be laid aside among strangers.

Several Things.

During a recent large fireen elegant piano was saved from the flames simply because a fireman was able to play upon it.

The Supreme Court of Ohio has just decided that sending a dun to a man on a postal card is unlawful—as well as saucy.

It is a remarkable fact, that however well young ladies may be versed in grammar, very few of them can decline matrimony.

Take care of your parrots. A lady in Paris has had her baby's face all torn to pieces by a parrot jealous of the caresses the mother gave the child.

"What you been a doin?" asked a boy of his playmate whom he saw coming out of the house with tears in his eyes. "I've been chasin' a birch rod round my father," was the snarling reply.

"Mother," said a little urchin when he came home, "I have seen such a smart preacher. He stamped and made such a noise, and then he got mad; he shook his fist at the folks, and there wasn't anybody dared to go up and fight him."

"What shall we do with our daughters?" inqures Mrs, Livermore, and a Western editor—an inhuman wretch—replies, "If they are like their mothers—wear false hair, corsets, and high-heeled shoes, powder and paint—wring their necks at once."

"SUCH AS I HAVE."—At the installation of Rev. William Carathers over a church in Calais, Me., the other day, Rev. S. P. Fay, of Bangor, delivered the charge to the people Among other things he urged them to be considerate of their pastor, saying that there many little kindness that would comfort and encourage him. He spoke of his own experience, at one time receiving a pumpkin from one of his parishioners, given with such kind words and intention that he felt happier for a week after. The next morning the newly-installed pastor found at his door two squashes, with a note in which was written: "Such as I have I give unto thee. We did not raise pumpkins this year."—Selected

THE STRICTNESS OF RIGHT.—There is a line beyond which we may not pass, unless we wish to join hands with Satan himself; and, young man, young woman, keep on the right side of that dividing line; do not touch it, even with the hem of your garment. Remember the children of true faith are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost its savor, there is nothing wherewith to season it; it is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men. Can we not watch one little hour? Surrounded by every blessing, can we not tread the short pathway to the grave as a lily true to the faith of our fathers?—American Rural Home.

The Conference.

The Conference which closed its labors, in this city the past week, will ever be remembered with great pleasure by the preachers, and all who witnessed its proceedings. Its deliberations were marked by brotherly kindness. The Spirit of the Divine presence pervaded the entire Conference. No jars—no discord—no bitterness of feeling. The preachers, many of them, had closed their year's labors with extensive revivals, and came up to Conference with their hearts all aglow with the love of Christ. Our beloved Bishop Marvin brought with him a blessing for all. He is a holy—a godly man—full of Apostolic zeal. His very presence inspires sacred feelings in the hearts of all. The preachers and lay delegates, will have cause to look back to the thirty-eighth session of the North Carolina Conference as being specially characterized by deep religious experience. It was a blessed season to us all. Our brethren of other denominatiens join us in saying that it produced a profound impression upon this whole community.

Bishop Marvin.

Bishop Marvin left the city Thursday evening to spend the Sabbath at Spartanburg, S. C. He will preside over the South Carolina Conference which convenes at Greenville, S. C., on Wednesday the 16th instant. This closes his Episcopal labors for the present year. From this Conference he returns to his home in St. Louis. We shall ever welcome him back again to our Conference in his official capacity. He is a model presiding officer and a grand gospel preacher.

We were gratified to learn from Rev. F. L. Reid that he met with fine success at our late Conference in the sale of the "Life, Sermons and Speeches of Rev. Dr. Reid."—More than six hundred copies were sold during the week at Raleigh.—This does not include the number sold by agents in different parts of the State, whose sales, we learn, have also been gratifying.

Dr. McFerrin, who was in attendance upon the late session of our Conference, impressed all with his efficiency and zeal in the great cause of missions. He is a great and good man—fully imbued with the spirit of the Master. His visit was greatly appreciated by the brethren of our Conference.

REVIVAL AT SPARTANBURG, S. C.—A wonderful work of grace has been in progress at Spartanburg, S. C., for the past few weeks. At last account there had been 150 conversions.—Bishop Marvin left Raleigh expecting to arrive at Spartanburg last Friday. The revival extended through Wefford College and the entire community.

We are glad to note that at the late session of the Grand Lodge of Masons of North Carolina, our young brother, Rev. F. L. Reid, was elected Grand Chaplain—a recognition of merit and talent seldom awarded one so young in years.

The Grand Lodge also adopted resolntions commending to the consideration of Masons, the recent publication of the "Life, Sermons and Speeches of Rev. Dr. N. F. Reid."

The series of articles by Rev. Jno. R. Brooks, reviewing "The Curse of Blood," will be continued in our next. In the first article which appeared some weeks since the word 'American' should have been 'Arminian'—a mistake of the printer.

The preaching at our late Conference was of an unusually high order of excellence and deeply impressed the Raleigh audiences. The churches were well filled on all occasions, and on some, were densely crowded.

We received a letter from Kittrell's containing directions concerning the Advocate but, no name appearing, we cannot follow them.

The Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina held its Conference in Enfield last week.

The Stewards of the Wadesboro Circuit, will please meet me at the parsonage in Wadesbro, on the 7th of January, 1875.

J. H. GUINN, P. E.

BRO. BOBBITT:—Please say that the good Lord has manifested his saving power on the Forsythe Circuit during the conference year now closed, in the happy conversion of about sixty souls. To God be all the glory.

North Carolina Methodism.

The position of Methodism to day in North Carolina is firmly established, widespread, influential. In 1776, the first regular circuit was organized in Halifax county. From that time onward, Methodism has been spreading though the State. Its growth in the first years of its existence was necessarily slow. It was cradled in the tempestuous storm of the old Revolutionary war. The field in which it began to operate was comparatively a moral wilderness. In those days came the Methodists, preaching in the wilderness of North Carolina, "Saying, repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Robert Williams, John King, John Wade, Isaac Rallings, were the pioneers, who came first into this wilderness, crying, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." One hundred years ago, Methodism had but three or four preaching places in the whole State, and these were confined to one county, and under the dripping forest trees. Now, she has her numerous stations, circuits, missions, as a vast Gospel net, sweeping the area of the whole State. Then she had but a small band of laborers, now she has marked off the entire territory into districts over which the watchful jurisdiction of Presiding Elders is set up; and hundreds of ministerial, and thousands of lay workmen are busy in the noble work of its spiritual and mental culture. From the days of Robert Williams until now, the Methodist Church has suffered violence, yet the work of her sons has prospered. The Lord has removed to the land of rest many of her self-denying workmen, but the work has rolled on from the tides of the East to the mountains of the West. They have not labored in vain. The wilderness and solitary place have been made glad by them, and the desert has rejoiced and blossomed as a rose. The eyes of the spiritually blind have been opened to see the glories of redeeming love, and the tongue of the dumb has become vocal with songs of salvation. It is not an empty boast to say, that the Methodist Church has taken the lead in evangelizing the popular masses of the State. Her mounted Itinerants with their wardrobe in one end of their saddle bags, and their library consisting of a Bible, Hymn book and Discipline in the other have trod the paths and highways, forded streams and ascended mountains, traveling through heat and cold, and have thus carried the Gospel, not only to the cities, towns, and wealthy districts, but to the neglected classes of the poor, the unfortunate, living in the nooks, corners, obscure places and mountain gerges of the State. For Methodism was not too proud to stoop in order to save souls. She preached in churches when she found them, and when she could not command churches, she preached, prayed, and led sinners to Christ in private houses school-houses, court houses, barns, in fields, groves, and on the highways. Her motto is, anywhere and by any means to save immortal souls. Dr. Talmage, admiring the rough and ready way of Methodists in saving sinners, says: "The saving of this world is rough work, and men cannot do it in a splendid way.—Here is a man fallen in the ditch of sin and crime How are you going to get him out We come up elegantly apparelled and look at him, and we say "what a pity it is to see a man so deep in the mud. We wish we could get him out. It is not lawful to see that man suffering there? Get a pry, somebody, and help now! I wish I had on my other clothes." While we stand there looking at the poor man, the Methodist comes along and says, "Brother, give me your hand," and pulls him up and sets him on the "Rock of Ages." Yes, that is the secret of Methodist success. It is the peculiar power of taking hold of sinners wherever they are found, and pulling them out of the horrible pit." Methodism always adapts itself to the circumstances in which it is placed." It can be princely in magnificent cities, polished in intelligent communities, and homo-spun in the backwoods without losing its peculiar power in any place.

Furthermore, our church has taken a prominent part in the Educational enterprises of the state. She has provided for the intellectual wants of her people, primary schools, academies, seminaries, and colleges, exceeding in number, if not in efficiency, those of any other denomination in the State. Her ministers have scattered also cheap religious books over the state to enlighten the popular mind. Our Sunday school scholars are by the thousand far more numerous than of any other church. Her ministers stand in the front rank as to numbers, zeal, and pulpit effectiveness. Her membership is numerous, pious, and generally intelligent. In fine, we may say without the charge of boasting, that Methodism has done already a noble work in North Carolina—in gathering a large harvest of souls, in building up literary institutions and educating her children, in diffusing religious knowledge by her journal and cheap books, in dotting the land with gospel churches, in pushing on the work of sunday-schools, and in stimulating other churches to greater zeal. She has won public confidence and respect. Her doctrines and usages are intrenched in the affection of the people. Her banner of free salvation waves in the breeze of every country. Her forces are well organized. Her resources are abundant. Her leaders are wise and vigilant. Her soldiers are brave, and her aim is to conquer every foot of N. C. territory and put it under the dominion of King Immanuel.

Religious Papers.

Bishop Marvin in a letter of recent date to the Richmond Advocate has this to say upon the subject of religious papers: "It is scarcely possible to over-estimate the value of a religious paper in a family. It creates a vital interest in the affairs of the kingdom of Christ that nothing else can. A man is more and more filled with the spirit of religion, if he is a faithful man at all, as he knows more and more of the great work which the Son of God is doing in the world. The Christian newspaper is the vehicle of this knowledge. Every family ought to have the Advocate; and if there is any difference, those need it most who are least likely to get it. I mean those families that have but little reading of any kind. When a paper is introduced once into such a family it will be eagerly read by all."

The Daily Advocate.

With much expense and great labor we issued the Daily during Conference week, and feel gratified at the success which attended its publication. Our prime object was the good of the church and we have assurances from all sources that that object was much promoted. The Conference was brought into greater prominence than ever before and the machinery of the church exhibited to eyes that had never before rested upon it, thus giving to the outside world an appreciation of the dignity, importance and working powers of Methodism. The Press of the State have spoken kind words of the Daily for which we are grateful. In the midst of the engrossing cares of Conference we failed to preserve many of the notices. Below we give a few, not in a spirit of self praise, but to show what others think of an enterprise for which some predicted a failure:

The Daily Advocate comes to us this week. The proprietors show themselves to be men of energy and enterprise. We hope their venture in the 'daily' proved a success in every respect.—Oxford Leader.

The Daily Advocate, issued from the office of the Raleigh Christian Advocate, during the sitting of the Methodist Conference, is a beautiful twenty-four column paper, containing the proceedings and much other interesting matter.—Wilmington Star.

We are in receipt of the Daily Christian Advocate printed as a daily during the sitting of the Conference in Raleigh. The Advocate is a special favorite of ours for though of a different creed, we find so much of liberal sentiment, and so much editorial ability that we forget sectarianism in admiration of genuine worth.—Hillsboro Recorder.

We acknowledge receipt of the daily Advocate, published during Conference week in Raleigh. It is a handsome, neat and interesting daily and does credit to its Editors and credit to the Church that sustains it.—Winston Republican.

The Daily Advocate is the name given a sprightly paper issued daily from the Christian Advocate Office, Raleigh, for the last week or ten days. We believe it was only premised to issue the daily during Conference, but a paper that has shown so much life should not die unsung. It was neat, spicy, newsy, religious, and has no doubt awakened new interest in the Methodist Church paper in the State, the Christian Advocate, as it has done great credit to its editors, and shown them to possess in an eminent degree the qualities necessary to conduct an able and successful journal.—Salisbury Watchman.

Our Preachers.

We are glad to announce that Rev. L. J. Holden, has been returned to this circuit, and will reside among us for another year.—Rocky Mount Mail.

REV. A. W. MANGUM.—The members and congregation of the Edenton street Methodist church, and the public generally, have great reason to thank Bishop Marvin and his council for returning this eminent divine to the charge he has so well filled for the past three years. We look upon Mr. Mangum as an able man having few superiors in the North Carolina Conference. We too rejoice in his return to this city.—Daily News.

We congratulate the congregation of the Wilmington Front Street M. E. Church on having secured the Rev. J. E. Mann for pastor of their Church, to succeed Dr. Moran. Mr. Mann is one of the ablest ministers of the North Carolina Conference.—It is with regret that the Goldsboro Church gives him up. Rev. J. R. Brooks is his successor here.—Goldsboro Messenger.

REV. H. P. COLE.—The numerous friends of this gentleman in this place and Salem will be gratified to learn that he is expected in Winston this week and will, in all probability, hold the services in the Methodist Church, Sunday.—Winston Republican.

We learn Rev. J. F. Heitman has been returned to this station. This action of the Conference will meet the approbation of the members of his church and the citizens of this town.—Winston Sentinel.

We are gratified to learn, as we do from the list of appointments published in another column, that, at the recent Methodist Conference in Raleigh, Rev. P. J. Carraway, was returned to the pastoral charge of the congregation of Tryon Street M. E. Church, of this city, to which he ministered with such great acceptability during the last Conference year. Mr. Carraway's flock will be highly pleased to know that the Bishop took this course. He is very popular with his congregation, and the hope that he should be returned was almost, if not entirely unanimous. He has labored with zeal in the Master's vineyard, and his work here during the fiscal year which has just terminated, resulted in large accession to the church and in the awakening to renewed life of all the members. The church has grown and waxed stronger under his care, and we predict for him another prosperous year.

The return of Rev. W. S. Haltom to the pastoral charge of the Second Methodist Church, will also be hailed with joy by the members of that church and congregation. He is a pious man, one whose heart is fully in the work which has been given him, and is admirably adapted in all respects to those whom he has been again called to break the Bread of Life.—Charlotte Observer.

Methodism is represented in its two ministers in this city, by earnest, pious, zealous men, who will leave nothing undone for the advancement of its interests.—Charlotte Observer.

Rev. H. B Cowles.

The last Richmond Advocate contains a lengthy and well merited tribute to this holy man of God, from the pen of Rev. J. C. Granbury, from which we take the following extract:

"I must add a few remarks on his spirit and labors. He was a man of pure and lofty character and of fervent piety. He commanded the respect and confidence of all who knew him. Not even did slander whisper aught against his Christian integrity. His reputation was stainless and lustrous. In all things he was an example to the flock; he not only pointed, bnt led, the way. He delighted to preach on the witness of the Spirit and on all the phases of vital goodness; and he drew matter out of the depths of his own spiritual consciousness. He prayed without ceasing, and set the Lord always before him; and those who associated with him felt the wholesome power of his devout spirit. He was a faithful and energetic minister of Christ. He was faithful, in that he slighted no part of his work; he scrupulously performed all his duties. He was energetic, in that he attempted great things for the Church, and carried them to completion with untiring toil and cheerful courage.

Bishop Pierce writes from his home in Georgia to the Pacific Methodist: "I left you in the midst of clouds, fog and rain—met a snow storm on the mountains, and for a thousand miles the earth was white, and when I landed at home, at 2 A. M., the rain was still falling, "but there was a light in the window," and glad eyes and hearts to greet me. My father is up and in comfortable condition. He preaches every Sabbath, and if the weather were open and dry, could preach every day. My family were all in health. On my return I eschewed the sleeping cars, (I do not like them,) and came through without lying down; and yet at the end felt fresh and strong—no weariness, no fatigue. My wife says I was made for travelling; she thinks it my lot, and that I was prepared for it. Well, I do stand it wonderfully, as compared with others. In eighty-two days I travelled nine thousand, three hundred and twenty six-miles, held four Conferences, preached thirty six sermons, made eight speeches, raised five thousand dollars for Church purposes, and dedicated four houses of worship; and yet some I wot of complain of a lack of Episcopal service."

Revival Intelligence

Rev. J. T. Bagwell in charge of Elizabeth circuit writes Nov. 27th:

BRO. BOBBITT: We have had quite a measure of success on the Elizabeth circuit during this year. The year has been characterized by marked revival interest. Members have been added at all of the appointments, 59 have connected themselves with our church this year. Several others have professed conversion, who were previously members of the church. I think the interests of the circuit generally, are improving.

Rev. Miles Foy in charge of Bladen circuit writes Nov. 18th 1874:

DEAR BRO. BOBBITT: We are glad to see such cheering views in your paper coming up from every part of our beloved Zion. It certainly must be refreshing and encouraging to our brethren in the ministry and our people everywhere who read and hear of these gracious revivals of religion. God has done great things for us whereof we are glad. To increase this joy I would say that the God of grace and power has been with us on the Bladen circuit this year. We have had revivals at all of our protracted meetings. At Deem's Chapel we had a gracious time. We baptized and received into the church 10 persons, and I suppose about that number were converted. The church was blessed and revived. At Windsor we had a feast of love and a shower of tears which lasted through the meeting. Seventeen professed and joined the Church. Eighteen penitents were left at the altar. At Center on Saturday night we had five penitents, on Sabbath we had a good time but had to close against our will. At Bethlehem we had a refreshing season, it was good to be there and see and feel that excellent glory. Bro. it does our hearts good to think of these meeting times where penitents are crying aloud for mercy, and Christians and new born converts are shouting, in the Spirit, the praise of God. We took five into the church here. The Church was called up to see who had been blessed and many came. We held a meeting at Marshburn's school house and had several conversions.

The London Missionary Society recently dedicated the South Memorial Church of Madagascar. It is erected near a precipice where, twenty-five years ago, eighteen native Christians were burned, and in other ways put to death. According to the latest statistics of this mission it has now in Madagascar thirty one English missionaries, fifty native pastors, 3,170 native teachers, 67,000 Church members, and 280,000 native adherents. It has also 764 stations and 576 schools.

Bishops Foster and Haven, of the M. E. Church, dedicated a church in Cincinnati last Sunday.

An Impostor.

MESSRS. EDITORS: There is a man by the name of Harmon Gaston Peed, preaching in the bounds of my circuit, (the Hatteras circuit,) who claims to be a member of the M. E. Church, North, and a regular ordained deacon. He is here trying to establish a church. He showed me an instrument of writing as his credentials or orders which he claimed to be from the Springfield Quarterly Conference, Illinois Annual Conference and Baltimore Annual Conference M. E. Church, signed by H. R. Ames; and also another which he claimed to be a certificate of membership from a pastor of one of the M. E. Churches, Spring field, Illinois. I have in my possession letters from several parties of the M. E. Church, North, to show that he is an impostor and his so-called credentials a forgery. I have a letter from Nelson & Phillips, Methodist Book Concern, N. Y., stating that there is no such a minister in the M. E. Church by the name of H. R. Ames. I have one from Bishop E. R. Ames stating that he did not ordain Harmon Gaston Peed at the Baltimore Conference last March, as he, the said Peed, claimed to be done, nor did he ever ordain him, as stated, so far as he could remember or ascertain. I have also another letter from W. H. Webster, Pastor of the 1st M. E. Church, Springfield, Illinois, which also proves him a fraud beyond a shadow of doubt.

You may publish this if you think it is due to the Church and community at large.

Yours truly,

W. B. MANESS.

The Religious World.

The Methodists have about one fourth of the 240 regularly incorporated Protestant churches in New York city.

The late Mr Havemeyer, Mayor of New York city, was for twenty years a trustee of Central M. E. Church in that city.

Bishop Cummins, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, purposes making Baltimore his home for the winter principally on account of family considerations.

Among the offerings of a New Zealand native congregation for the support of its native ministers during last year were half a ton of potatoes and a horse.

The London Weekly Review says the American Presbyterians are accomplishing great things in Damascus. The Arabs are remarkably interested in hearing the gospel.

The editor of the Evangelical Review, of Calcutta, India, states that 5,000 converts were baptized in India during 1873, and 1,000 in Burmah.

The Turks who murdered the Montenegrin Christians have been sentenced to only twenty years' imprisonment, which lemency has created dissatisfaction in Montenegro.

Another "expeditionary force" of Catholic priests is to leave Rome soon for this country as missionaries among the freedmen of the South.

The American Tract Society is to have a semi-centennial jubilee. In May, 1875, it will be half a century old, which event it is proposed to celebrate.

The medallion of John Wesley, which is to be placed in Westminister Abbey, is said to be nearly completed. A bas-relief under the profile represents him as preaching at his father's grave.

The West Jersey Baptist Association includes 50 churches, the oldest having been organized in 1690, and the youngest during the present year. The membership is 5,795.

The Baptist Theological Seminary at Chicago has opened the year with 39 students, and others are expected. The University, in opening for the year, enrolls some 200 names in its several classes, preparatory and collegiate.

The Khedive of Egypt is searching the mosques and monasteries of his dominions for manuscripts to form a library at Cairo. He is said to have obtained 30 different manuscripts of the Koran, and among them one computed to be 1,150 years old.

The Reformed Episcopal Church is showing its liberality. Dr. Cheney, one of the new bishops, lately said, in a public discourse in Washington, that during the two Sabbaths of his absence from his church in Chicago he had arranged to have his pulpit supplied on the first Sabbath by a Baptist, and on the second Sabbath by a Presbyterian minister.

Mr Green, of the Japanese mission of the American Board, writes to the Missionary Herald that the Gospel of Matthew, Mark, and John have been translated and published in Japanese, and Luke will soon be ready, and Genesis, and the Epistles to the Romans, Ephesians, and Hebrows, have been translated.

The attainment by the New York Weekly Witness of a subscripton list of 50,000, was celebrated by a "Reunion of the Publishers, Employees and Friends of the Paper," at the Quaker Dairy, on Broadway. A large and animated gathering, numbering about 150, surrounded the tables. E. Remington, Esq., of Ilion, N. Y., presided, and the vice-chair was occupied by Mr. Dougall, proprietor of the paper.

Rev. J. P. Moore, Presiding Elder of the Raleigh District, preached to a large audience at Edenton Street Church last Sunday morning, and at Person Street at night.

The Christian Life Supreme

We want to have life so developed in us that shall be "supreme." A Christian in the old times was, first of all, a Christian, and then, a long way down perhaps he was a shoemaker. He was a Christian, and perhaps he might belong to Cæsar's household, but that you might hardly know.—Now a days what are we? We are bankers or merchants; everybody knows that. Then after little inquiry, perhaps it may be found out that we are Christians. The thing ought to be reversed. Our religion should be the first thing. Too much, the Lord Jesus gets the scraps and the world gets the banquets. Men give to the Lord Jesus their odd minutes, and to money getting the main strength of their lives. I do believe that will have to be altered before we shall see any great work done in the land, and multitudes of conversions.

How it is going to be altered I cannot tell except by this, that life has a wonderful faculty for accomplishing great things. A little seed has been sown in a mass of rock, and you could hardly suppose it could live. But yet it has thrust itself up, and has become a tree and has lifted up the mass of rock, and by and-by it will move the rock away to make space for itself.—And life in God's people at this time is very like that seed in the rock,—Our modes of living and our habits are altogether prejudicial, I believe, to any very wonderful display of life, but life will do it somehow, it will achieve its purpose by some means. I pray God to give us that life.—Presbyterian.

MARITAL HAPPINESS.

When two people come together, says one, in the spirit of mutual love and respect, with the consciousness that life was meant for duty, and not for pleasure, and with the understanding that, in the close intimacy between man and wife, happiness will be the result of mutual forbearance and mutual service and self sacrifice, rather than of mutual perfections, the experience of wedded life even, with those who are in many respects incompatible in taste, disposition and education, will be rich in the sweetest and purest joys of earthly existence. Help ye one another, is the injunction which should be continually in the mind of a married couple. It is the purpose for which they should be joined in having bonds, and, steadily adhered to, it will call out and cultivate in both the highest capacities for usefulness and happiness.

Go on, runaway! go on in your work of destruction! Break up happy homes; ruin the young and old; fill the land with want, weeping and wo! shoot. Rake in the money by pouring out wine gladness. Blight the hopes of the most promising, make the strong bow in shame and anguish and blast the beauty of youthful vigor; fill the land with crime, and the prisons with criminals, and hell with those damned with strong drink. Go on, go on a few days more in this work, and if Satan does not get you, it will be because your soul is so small that he cannot find it. Go on if you will! Soon all of your work will come up before you and for every wrong done you will have to give account.—What a settlement the grogseller will have to make at the day of judgment? —Western Christian Advocate.

It is beginning to be believed in European countries, especially in grape-growing ones, that the exhaustion of the soil of potash is the prime cause of the great fatality of all the diseases which have recently attacked the vine. So in England, it has been claimed that orchards of apples, pears and other sour fruits, are productive in proportion to the amount of soluble potash in the soil. The leaves of all deciduous trees contain a great proportional amount of potash, and for the pits of the apple, cherry, pear and vine, in addition to their leaves, a vast amount of potash is required to furnish bases for the acids in which all are so rich. On this hypothesis it is claimed then that while some soils (clays, marls, and those made up from the decomposition of granite and feldspar rocks) are naturally admirably suited for the fruits named, nearly all other soils which are, or are capable of being well drained, may be made to produce abundantly by the application of potash in some form. And it is further stated, that the reason one tree bears more than another depends on its capacity for taking up potash; just as one animal differs from another in converting food into fat; and, moreover, the reason for bearing and non-bearing years is because the tree is not capable of taking up continuously sufficient potash. In Illinois the subject is an exceedingly interesting one, for in the centre of the State, the best prairie orchards do not have a full crop oftener than once in five years.—B. F. J., in the Country Gentleman.

Prof J. H. Pepper, the distinguished popular lecturer, in the course of a recent interview in St. Louis, expressed his belief that "America is bound to be supreme in scientific matters." When asked if he would reside permanently in this country, he said: "During my stay I have made my home in and about New York City, although I have a farm of twelve acres near New Haven, Conn. Life is short, and therefore I cannot say that I will ever become an American citizen. Agricultural matters have a strong charm for me, and recently, while I was at Rockford, I was presented with a superb plow by a firm of manufacturers."

The citizens of Mill River Valley have presented gold medals, appropriately inscribed, to George Cheney and Collins Graves the heroes of the Williamsburg reservoir disaster.

Gossip of the Week.

There is now only one Mirabeau living, the Marquis Gabriel Count Edward, a grand nephew of the great Mirabeau, has just died in Russia.

At the celebration of Hallowe'en at Balmoral, Queen Victoria and the Princess Beatrice headed the procession in an open phaeton, and, like the rest of the people, carried torches.

Mr. Leatham, M. P., recently said that, if Mr. Gladstone could overcome his objection to the disestablishment of the English Church, the Liberal party might again become united.

The municipal authorities of Seville, Spain, have, offered $10,000 reward for the recovery of Murillo's painting of St. Anthony, which was stolen from the cathedral in that city.

A man in Fitchburg, Mass., developed a fine strategic talent the other day. He was paying a back fare, when he dropped three bank bills, and the wind whisked them swiftly away. After unavailing search for an hour, a bright idea struck him. He folded a piece of paper and dropped it where the bills fell, followed his flight, and where it rested there he found also his money.

The Saviour did not become the Son of David until the princely glory of David's house had departed, and his descendants had come to the sawhorse. This was to show that the loftiness of this world must be thought low, if it would enter the kingdom of God.—Gossner.

INDEX TO NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

We direct attention to the advertisement, in this issne, of Shelby Female Seminary, conducted by our old friend, Rev. S. R. Trawick, at Shelby, N. C. Bro. Trawick is a teacher of many years experience, having for several terms conducted a school in this city with credit and success. We are glad to learn from no less competent a source than Rev Dr. Burkhead, that the Seminary at Shelby is in a flourishing condition, and that Bro. Trawick is doing much good. We regretted to see him leave Raleigh, but trust that unmeasured success will attend him in the West.

See the advertisement of S. J. & W. D. Horner's Classical and Mathematical School at Henderson, N. C. The principals are competent teachers.

Chas. M. Stieff advertises his widely-known pianos and organs.—His house is an old established one, one of the most extensive manufactories in the U. S., and his pianos of the highest standard of excellence.

BINGHAM SCHOOL.—Maj. Robt Bingham advertises this long established school in this issue, to which we invite attention. Started in 1793, it has continued to flourish and grow in favor with every passing year. It is not too much to say that as a preparatory school, it has no superior in the United States. Extraordinary inducements are offered to patrons. Sons of ministers and candidates for the ministry, irrespective of denomination, receive tuition free of charge. The community is moral, the instruction thorough and the discipline excellent. Three religious denominations are represented in the faculty and the religious thought and feeling of the students are cultivated but receive no sectarian bias from the instructors.

Maj Bingham has prepared an exhaustive circular in which the history and recommendations of the school are fully set forth. Send for it.

We call attention to the advertisement of Greensboro Female College, which appears in this issue. No words of commendation are needed from us of a College of such high grade and standing and presided over by such an able Faculty as Greensboro College is. It is an institution which every Methodist of the State ought to feel an interest in and be proud of.

We invite attention to the new advertisements of W. H. & R. S. Tucker & Co, and Thos. H. Briggs & Sons, which appear in this issue.

NEWSPAPERIANA.—We are pleased to see evidences of success in the Raleigh Daily NEWS, which has recently been enlarged to a thirty-two column paper, making it the largest daily in the State. We are always gratified to note enterprise in any direction and more especially in the newspaper line, for it evinces a growing taste in our people for more and better mind-food. The NEWS is a live paper—now a 'spicy" big journal—its editorial columns being well conducted by the chivalric Major J. W. Dunham, and the local page reflecting the activity and spice of the Chief, Capt. E. C. Woodson, whose untiring search a local item finds it hard work to escape. The NEWS is largely sought by advertisers and in every respect shows that it is meeting with favor.

In the multiplicity of cares which the publication of the Daily ADVOCATE imposed at the time, we failed to note the change in the management of the AGRICULTURAL JOURNAL, a popular and growing weekly newspaper of this city. Johnston Jones, Esq., well known to the Press of the State, as the late editor of the Charlotte OBSERVER, has assumed sole editorial management of the JOURNAL. He is a good writer, possessing a large fund of information, good practical sense, and marked editorial tact. We shall be greatly disappointed if he does not make a good paper. We trust that the editor in marshalling his corps of assistants will not lose so valuable a contributor as Col. E. W. Pou, late of this city and for a while associate editor of the JOURNAL. He is a gentleman, and scholar of rare attainments which his modesty tends to conceal, of liberal, sound and practical views in politics, letters and agriculture, and his contributions would be valuable to the JOURNAL.

Deaths

Died, in Edgecombe county, on the 15th November, 1874, of the measles, Miss Mary Ann Flora, aged 16 years, widow of J. D. Whitehead, and daughter of William Farmer, deceased. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, model body of christian character. Methodists church and friends will please copy.

Died, in Granville county, on the 3rd inst., Mrs. Martha Ann Hunt, wife of Mr. Thomas Hunt, aged 58 years, 5 months and 3 days. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for many years. Her last illness was long and painful, but she bore it with christian fortitude. She has passed through the valley of the shadow of death, and has left us only a few days in advance of us. But what is it to us? We have only to follow a few days after her, and we shall be with her forever and ever! But what is it to her? She has only gone before us a few days, and is now with her sainted mother, and other loved ones who have gone before her. Though deeply we sympathize with the bereaved friends, we would console them by saying that it is well with her, and glorious home above, and we feel sure we will meet again in Heaven.

Wheat Culture.

The following excellent article upon the culture of wheat we copy from the Petersburg Index. We recommend it to the careful perusal of all our readers engaged in agriculture:

It is within the observation of most persons, even of middle age, that the product of wheat in the older settled parts of the country has been growing gradually less from year to year for the last twenty years The free use of guano in Virginia arrested this tendency for a time, but the experience of the last few years shows that it has returned with accelerated force. There surely must be a cause for this, and it is the province of the culturist no less than of the scientific man, to detect it and apply the remedy.

Wheat culture is beyond question the most important of all agricultural operations, and has more influence on the world at large than any other Wheat is brain-food, and the progress of civilization and intellectual can be traced by the extent of its growth and consumption. Strike it from the list of life-sustaining plants, and mankind would relapse into comparative barbarism. Corn is a grain of incalculable value, but the office it performs in the human economy is altogether different. The exclusive use of it is unfriendly to intellectual development, as all our observation attests. The allowance of wheat to every family – every white family at least – should not be less than three to three and a half bushels to each member annually. The wheat crop of the State may be sufficient to supply this quota many times over; but so much is sold off to meet the exigencies of the culture, and to leave some profit withal, that it may be doubted whether half that allowance, taking the average, is retained for domestic consumption.

Believing that by a careful selection of seed, and a judicious preparation of the soil, it is entirely practicable to restore the productive capacity of our lands, we venture to submit our views to the consideration of farmers, and to implore them not to give up the cultivation of this grain in despair, as so many of them seem to have done, partially at least, if not entirely. The same pains bestowed upon it as upon cotton, tobacco, and peanuts, would redeem it from the ill favor into which it has fallen by want of attention to its peculiar requirements. The fault is not in any deficiency of fertilising material for the growth of the plant; on the other hand the growth is more luxuriant than is at all desirable. The burden of straw on all our wheat fields is immense, and the vigor with which vegetation starts in the spring deludes the farmer into the belief that his crop is highly promising But it is a plethoric rather than a healthy growth, and at harvest time we often see the stems five or six feet high, very blady, and with very lean ears. In manuring, no special provision has been made for the fruit, which is the end and aim and effort of all vegetable life.

The basis of all successful agriculture is lime; and its presence in the soil, either naturally or by addition, is indispensible to the production of good crops of wheat. With lime in the soil, one may add anything else he wishes – guano, bone dust, or any of the commercial manures. But we deem it a very rare sight to see a heavy crop of wheat without the presence of some calcareous ingredient. That such existed in all our good wheat soils in former times, though perhaps in such proportion as to be readily detected by chemical analysis, can scarcely admit of a debt. But being always found in the grain, it must have been in the land. In Mr. Ruffin's classification of soils, these were designated as "neutral." But by a long course of culture, whatever lime they contained has been taken up by successive crops, until now the crops fail through the want of it by such substitutes as have come in vogue in our day. The only resource, in order to secure crops of wheat again as in former times, is in lime of marl. Its office, so far as we are able to judge from effects, is to attract and hold the carbonic acid for the uses of the plant, and to act on the silicious portion of the soil so as to supply the stem with silicates in order to give it strength to stand upright, and resist the invasion of rust. Lime—and ashes no less—is a preventive of rust nine years out of ten. The most healthy growth of wheat is a clean straw—not blady—of a pea-green color; moderate in height and ripening of a bright, golden hue. Lime (allowing the soil to be otherwise fertile) yields to the wheat plant exactly what it wants. It withholds what has a tendency to make it plethoric, and hastens the maturity several days sooner than the manures properly so-called.

Lest we may not have made our meaning as clear as is desirable, we will endeavor to illustrate it. Several years ago we passed leisurely through the Genesee Valley, the soils of which are diluvial, and highly calcareous. It was at the time of harvest. Accustomed to the heavy growth of wheat in Virginia, and Genesee fields wore a most unpromising aspect. The stems, with scarcely a blade apparently, looked comparatively thin and as if they might almost be counted. Judging from the product of our own fields at home, we could not have estimated the yield at more than seven or eight bushels. Judge then of our surprise when we were told by experienced farmers that it was good for twenty or twenty five. If the straw was light, the ears were bending under their heavy burden.

We have, however, seen splendid wheat fields in Virginia; but so far from being of a rank, succulent growth, it stood not more than three feet high; and in this age of science and progress, we hope the day is not distant when we shall recover our prestige as being the finest wheat growing State in the American confederacy.

On a former occasion we said something about the selection of seed, a matter of no less importance than the preparation of the soil. We forbear any further remarks until the approach of harvest, when the subject will bear recurring to again.

In nothing that we have said do we wish to be understood as implying any discredit of the value of commercial manures. On the contrary we esteem them very highly, especially the phosphates or super phosphates. For all leafy plants, they are invaluable. For tobacco they may be regarded as a specific manure. They are also fine for clover and the grasses. But something in addition is needed for wheat, and our present purpose has been to point out what that is.

nothing equals Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a most powerful restorative tonic, also combining the most valuable nervine properties, especially adapting it to the wants of debilitated ladies suffering from weak back, inward fever, congestion, inflammation, or ulceration, or from nervousness, or neuralgic pains. Mr. G. W. Seymour druggist, of Canton, N. Y., writes Dr. Pierce as follows: "The demand for your Favorite Prescription is wonderful and one man stated to me that his wife had not done a day's work in five months, when she commenced taking your Favorite Prescription, took two bottles and is now on the third bottle, and is able to do her housework alone and milk fourteen cows twice a day." Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is sold by all dealers in medicines. Dec. 16 1–wk.

FAST IND'A HEMP,
And What We Know About It.

Instead of devoting a column to the merits of this strange and wonderful plant, we remain silent, and let its speak for itself through other lips than ours, believing that those who have suffered most can better tell the story. We will here quote word for word from letters recently received, simply adding our testimony to the rest in saying, that when this could be purely prepared, we know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a bad cold in twenty-four hours.

Sr. MARY'S CHURCH, Allegheny City, Pa., Nov. 16, 1874.

The Indian Hemp has been taken by Rev. [illegible] Binder, O. S. B., and Rev. Sebastian Arnold, O. S. B., both residents of this church, and so far has given relief to both. They suffered from affections of the lungs and bronchial organs. We have recommended through charity to sufferers, the same, also Indica to different persons, and continue to same in good conscience, knowing the effects by experience. Please find enclosed check for twelve bottles of syrup plus amount. We shall inform you in due time what further success the medicine shall meet with.

Yours truly,
REV. FERDINAND WOLF, O. S. B.,
87 Washington Street.

CHINA GROVE, Rowan Co., N.C., Oct. 21, 1874.

Send one dozen Ointment and one of Cannabis Indica. When Mr. J. W. Fisher brought his wife to me for examination, I found her in the incipient stage of tuberculous consumption. Then it was I concluded to make a fair trial of India Hemp, and now there is a general demand for these remedies. The ointment excels everything and anything of its kind I ever saw or tried; in many cases it acts like a charm.

Fraternally yours,
P. A. SIFFORD, M. D.

RIDGEVILLE, Caswell, N. C., Sept. 12, 1874.

Inclosed is $10 for more of the Indian Hemp. I can truly say that this medicine has done me more good than all the doctors, and I had several of the best in the country. My cough is a great deal better, and my chills and night sweats are gone. You may look for several orders soon, as many have seen the effect of this medicine on me.

W. A. FULLER.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct 30 1874

Your treatment for consumption has so improved my condition, that the inquiry comes every day from my friends, what are you taking? Several are talking of sending for some of your medicine, and James Huff desires me to order for him $9 worth of the Hemp.

WM. HUNT, North High Street.

P. S.—It is my opinion that an agent at this place would sell considerable for you.

W. H.

DICKSON, Franklin, Tenn., Sept. 19, 1874.

Send three more bottles of your consumption and bronchitis cure. My son began taking the Hemp last night three weeks ago, and he is improving rapidly. The last ten days have made him look and act like another person. I have great hopes.

J. M. BRAXTON

DEEP RIVER, Powesheik, Iowa, Jan. 3, 18-4.

I have just seen your advertisement in my paper. I know all about the Cannabis Indica. Fifteen years ago it cured my daughter of the Asthma. She had it very bad for several years but was perfectly cured.

JACOB TROUT.

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. $2 50 per bottle, or three bottles for $6 50. Pills and Ointment $1 25 each. Sent at our risk. Address

Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint.

It is but little more than a quarter of a century since the art of mixing paint was confined almost exclusively to a few comparatively speaking. Now, however, through the ingenuity of BRADLEY, we are not only enabled to apply the paint if we desire, but can see the shades in advance, sample cards being furnished gratis, with the different shades or tints numbered. Those who have used the "Enamel Paint," speak from experience, that it is all that is claimed for it, and evidently supercede the "old style paint." As an evidence of the great worth of the Enamel Paint, we most respectfully request all our readers to carefully read the excellent testimonials of Mr. C. P. Knight, in this paper.

Mode B. In my second article, on above subject, I endeavored to show that the heathen have faith sufficient for a practicable condition of salvation. It was maintained, that the only condition required of the heathen is a belief in God's existence and character, and that such is essentially the same kind of faith that is required of Christians or gospel hearers in the present number it is proposed to bring forward the reasons and evidences of saving faith.

That saving faith is one, in principle or nature, everywhere and in whomsoever found, differing only in the degree of its development, seems absolutely certain for the following reasons:

First: God, the object of faith, is one in character, in nature and character everywhere, in all ages and dispensations, and to all men. This truth is so evident that its simple statement must meet with universal assent among intelligent Theists.—They assert that "the Lord our God is one Lord"—is one in character, in nature, in essence. And that with Him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," being "the same yesterday, to-day and for ever. As one He is the same to all men, for Paul says, "there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, (which classes then embraced all men, i. e., Christian and heathen,) "for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him."

Secondly: The chief instrument, used for the development of faith, is substantially one and the same everywhere, in all ages, and to all men.—That instrument is a revelation of God to man—a revelation of His existence and character. That revelation we call in general terms God's truth—His law and gospel,—the rule of man's duty, with the fearful penalties and the condition of his salvation, with its glorious promises. Now, in this revelation—this law and gospel, with the sanctions and reward attached—we have two things concerning God clearly set forth, viz: His existence and character. Indeed, His existence is assumed in the revelation, for a revelation of or from a God that does not exist, would, of course, be no revelation. And certainly His will and disposition, as embodied in His law and gospel, constitute a faithful exponent of His character. Now, in this revelation of God's character, we have two of His perfections prominently set forth—His holiness and benevolence. These perfections of Deity, considered objectively, in their manifestation against sin and to man—are in the Bible usually called, respectively, 'justice,' 'righteousness' or 'wrath;' and 'goodness,' 'mercy' or 'love.' By the one we understand God's intense and infinite hatred of sin, together with His purpose to punish it, springing from the intense and infinite purity of His nature. By the other we understand God's intense and infinite love of the sinner, together with His desire to bless him, springing from the intense and infinite benevolence of His nature. Now, this law and gospel, in the ratio of the clearness with which they are revealed to man, exhibit to him these attributes of the Almighty—these perfections of His character.

And, as God's character is one always and everywhere, and as He certainly wishes all men to see Him as He is, we must believe that a revelation of that character is one in the same sense and to the same extent.—And as the law and gospel constitute that revelation, they must be one in nature to all men, everywhere, in heathendom and Christendom. In other words, as was noticed in my last, if the heathen have any revelation of God, it must be the gospel, as well as the law—His benevolence, as well as His holiness—His willingness to bless the penitent, as well as His purpose to punish the impenitent—the same law and gospel in substance that we have: the only difference being in the means or media, through which, and the degree of clearness with which they are revealed—To the heathen with one degree of clearness, it may be, and to the Christian with five, twenty or even one hundred

Thirdly: "The spirit of truth," the efficient Agent, who works for the development of faith, is one in the nature of His operations, everywhere and with all men. The chief, if not the only difference, being as to the measure of His influences that is brought to bear on men, in connection with the law and gospel and other instrumentalities, to produce this result

Fourthly: The design of saving faith is one with God, touching all men, everywhere; the only difference in its effect on different men being in the extent to which this design is accomplished. That design is to cleanse man's heart and life from sin, and produce affectionate obedience to God,—to assimilate, to a greater or less extent, man's character to the Almighty's. In the heathen this result may not be so fully reached, but if he has saving faith in any measure, it is reached in that measure and to that extent. It is a "faith which works by love," and makes its subject more or less like God.

Saving faith, then, no matter where or in whom found, and in what degree of strength and development, is essentially one and the same in principle or nature. It is thus one in nature, because it has the same object—God's character—the same instrument and agent for its development—a revelation of God's character and the Holy Spirit—and God has the same design in its requirement to make man like Himself in character, and thus put him in possession of happiness and Heaven.

If the heathen has saving faith at all, then it must be the same in nature with that of the Christian. It may, in strength and transforming power, be to the Christian's faith only as one is to five or even twenty "talents," the degree of light, divine influence, etc., affecting only the measure, not the nature of saving faith.

Having tried to show the oneness of saving faith, let us now examine more particularly into its nature—its nature under all dispensations and with all men. The only definition of faith, given us in the Bible, that I remember, is that of Paul, in the 11th chapter of Hebrews. He says, "Faith is the hypostasis of things hoped for, the elenchos of things not seen."—Critics tell us that the Greek word hypostasis occurs only five times in the New Testament, and that it is used by no other writer than Paul.—They say that in three of those places it is translated in the Common Version "confidence." It is so rendered in the margin of this passage; making four out of five places in which it is translated "confidence."

Clarke and Wesley render it "subsistence"—that by which the soul partially subsists on the good things promised and "hoped for."

We are told that elenchos occurs only twice in the New Testament, being used both times by Paul. In the other passage the Common Version and Wesley render it "reproof."—Clarke favors "conviction" in both passages, and McLean and Doddridge so render it in both places. Wesley translates it "conviction" in Paul's definition. There seems really to be no substantial difference between these critics about either word. According to them, if we transpose Paul's defining words, as he seems to do in the 6th verse, we have about his meaning in the following paraphrase: Faith is the conviction of the existence and nature of invisible things, the confident expectation of securing the invisible good things desired; while expectation rests on this conviction as its foundation.

Now, this is Paul's general definition of faith—faith as applied to "things not seen" and "things hoped for," generally. Let us examine his more special application of it to God and His "reward," in the 6th verse. He says, "Without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." It will be seen from this passage that only two things are embraced in the faith that Paul says is pleasing to God, viz: belief or conviction of His existence, and belief or conviction of His goodness or mercy—"must believe that He is and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." Possibly Paul means simply this: That every man's faith, to be pleasing to God and profitable to himself, must embrace, first, a 'conviction' of His existence and character: and secondly, 'confidence' in, or a going out of soul toward God, issuing from or based upon that conviction. For Paul evidently refers to such a 'conviction' of God's existence and character, as moves man to forsake sin and 'come to God,' diligently seeking Him.' He certainly means such a conviction of the evil and danger of sin, as seen in the light of God's hatred of and purpose to punish it, as shall move us to forsake it and try to be saved from it. And he means evidently, such a 'confidence' of, or 'confidence' in God's goodness and mercy, as shall move us to come to Him and diligently seek His reward or blessing. Now, I submit that this is the substance of, and the essential, indispensable thing in saving faith, under all dispensations and with all men: whether they be heathens, Jews or Christians. And I am persuaded that God requires nothing more, in the principle of faith, as a condition of pardon, from any man, let him be heathen or Christian. The Christian may have more and different facts presented to his faith, as the media through which God's existence and character, and his own duty and privileges are revealed to him; but the effect of such revelation is the same in nature with that produced in the devout heathen, by the same revelation, made through other and different facts. Faith is the fact of 'Christ crucified' is simply faith in God's holiness and goodness—His justice and mercy—His hatred of sin and love of the sinner. For 'Christ crucified' is to the sinner simply a manifestation of God's character—His holiness and love. In speaking of the atonement, Paul says its design was, among other things, 'To declare' 'His righteousness'—holiness and love—that He might be just and the justifier of Him that believeth in Jesus'—in God's justice and mercy, as displayed in Jesus crucified. And John says, 'hereby'—in this faith—'perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us.' Hence, man, seeing in 'Christ crucified' God's estimate of the demerit and danger of sin and His lovingness and willingness to forgive the sinner, turns from his sins to the Almighty. Hence, too, the prophet, in formulating and declaring the universal condition of man's salvation, practicable with all men, says, 'let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.' That was the condition of salvation in Adam's day, in Isaiah's day, in Paul's day, and it is the condition of pardon now. That is the condition of salvation in India and Africa, as well as in America—with the Jew and heathen, as well as with the Christian.

Warm-Hearted People

A great deal is said about warm hearted people, and very likely too much can not be said in their praise. But if warm-heartedness means effusion, then let us have a lower temperature. Let us not measure love by declamation. Least of all let us allow a warm heart, as we call it, to condone for lack of simple truth and justice. Let us open our eyes to the fact that there can be faithfulness, there can be love, there can be tenderness and helpfulness where there are no superlatives, where all expression is of the most simple, even of the most humdrum sort. If you want to test yourself and find out exactly what manner of friend you are, or husband, or wife, forget all the pretty or exalted speeches you have ever made, and ask yourself whether you have been honest or dishonest, unselfish or selfish, just or unjust, pure or base, generous or mean. If the oracle in your breast answers all these questions favorably your heart is warm enough.—I. W. Chadwick.

Dunces.

Fisher Ames entered Harvard at the age of twelve, and Edward at thirteen; Bishop Heber translated Phaedrus into English at seven; Anna Seward repeated from memory the first three books of "Paradise Lost" at nine; and Lord Brougham wrote on philosophy at eighteen.

But all eminent men have not been remarkable for early attainments. Some of the grandest spirits that the world has ever known—men whose works and memory are enduring—were regarded in youth as dunces. They flowered late, but bore the rarest fruit.

It is somewhat discouraging for a boy of moderate abilities, who aims to do his best, to be told that others accomplished in childhood what he can do only by hard study in the best years of his youth. But such a boy should not relax his efforts. He will succeed, if he gives his heart and mind to the work.

That distinguished teacher, Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, after speaking of those who zealously cultivate inferior powers of mind, said of such a pupil, "I would stand to that man hat in hand."

He once spoke sharply to a dull boy, who replied—

"Why do you speak angrily, sir? Indeed, I am doing the best I can."

Dr. Arnold said he never so felt a rebuke in his life.

Sir Isaac Newton was a pronounced dunce in his early school days. He stood low in his classes, and seemed to have no relish for study. One day the "bright boy" of the school gave him a severe kick in the stomach, which caused him severe pain. The insulting young Newton to the quick, and he resolved to make himself felt and respected by improved scholarship. He applied himself resolutely to study, and, ere long, stood in his classes above the boy who had kicked him, and ultimately became the first scholar in the school.

Newton owed his pre-eminence in his philosophical studies more to perseverance and application than to any marvellous natural endowments.

Oliver Goldsmith, than whom no boy could be more stupid, was the butt of ridicule at school. A second dame, after wonderful patience and perseverance, taught him the alphabet—a thing which she deemed creditable to her skill, and which she lived to mention with pride when her pupil became famous. He made no progress in the exact studies, but liked history and Latin poetry.

He was a sore trial to his ambitious mother, who made many fruitless efforts to quicken his wits by her sharp words. His relatives, teachers, and schoolmates, all told him that he was a fool, which verdict he did not dispute, but took good humoredly. Even when he had produced the "Traveller," an eminent critic said to a friend "Sir, I do believe that Goldsmith wrote that poem, and that, let me tell you, is believing a great deal."

Sir Walter Scott was a dull boy, and, when attending the University at Edinburgh he went by the name of "The Great Blockhead." But he wasted no time on trifles, and, in pursuing a study that he loved—as, for example, history or the classics—he was perserving and methodical. He was one of those whose knowledge on a subject that interested increased, until it lay like a great volume in his mind. When Walter Scott began to make use of that knowledge, society gave him another name, somewhat different from the Edinburgh appellation. It was "The Great Magician."

Hutton, the antiquarian, whose knowledge of books was deemed remarkable, was slow to learn when a boy. He was sent to school to a certain Mr. Mear. He thus tells his experience: "My master took ocasion to beat my head against the wall, holding it by the hair, but he could never beat any learning into it."

Sheridan found it hard to acquire the elements of learning. His mother deemed it her duty to inform his teacher that he was not bright to learn like other boys. Adam Clarke was pronounced by his father to be "a grievous dunce;" and Dr. Chalmers was pronounced by his teacher as an "incorrigible" one. Chatterton was dismissed from school by his master, who, finding himself unable to teach him anything in a satisfactory manner, settled it that the boy was "a fool."

Teachers are apt to become impatient over dull scholars, and predict of them that they will never come to anything. Such uncalled for prophecies ought to discourage no scholar who tries to do well. A certain Edinburgh professor once pronounced upon a student his severe opinion—Dunce you are, and dunce you will ever remain.' That student was Sir Walter Scott.

If a dull boy feels an inspiration stirring within to do something worthy in literature, or science, or art, let him set his face as a flint toward his object: let him be patient and hopeful, and he will not fail of success.—Selected.

A Christmas Hymn.

The air was still o'er Bethlehem's plain,
As if the great Night held its breath,
When Life Eternal came to reign
Over a world of Death.

The pagan at his midnight board
Let fall his brimming cup of gold;
He felt the presence of his Lord
Before His birth was told.

The temples trembled to their base,
The idols shuddered as in pain:
A priesthood in its power of place
Knelt to its gods in vain.

All Nature felt a thrill divine
When burst that meteor on the night,
Which, pointing to the Saviour's shrine,
Proclaimed the New born light—

Light to the shepherds! and the star
Gilded their silent midnight fold—
Light to the Wise Men from afar,
Bearing their gifts of gold—

Light to a realm of Sin and Grief—
Light to a world in all its needs—
The Light of Life—a new belief
Rising o'er fallen creeds—

Light on a tangled path of thorns,
Though leading to a martyr's throne—
A Light to guide till Christ returns
In glory to His own.

There still it shines, while far abroad
The Christmas choir sings now, as then,
"Glory, glory unto God!
Peace and good-will to men!"

Brazen Buddha Made to Sustain an Army in China

Rev. J. W. Lambuth, the Southern Methodist Missionary to China, in a letter to Our Missionary, relates the following:

There was a brazen image of Buddha not far from the Poyang Lake, and near the borders of the great river of China. When in a sitting posture it was forty feet high, ten feet in diameter, and twelve feet across the shoulders. It was seated in the oriental position, with the soles of the feet pointing heavenward, and in the hollow of each foot four men could rest. So large were the ears that in each a man could hide himself. This huge image was made into three parts, all of which were hollow. On one occasion, the date not being known, some beggars made an excavation into the back of this monster Buddha, and stole a great quantity of the brass. The opening was quite large enough for any one to walk into, and beggars were in the habit of sleeping [illegible] and cooking their meals, even to the number of twenty men, and yet there was room.

In the seventh year of Heenfung (1857), a great general, Tsung Quo-Fan, seeing his army deficient in supplies, determined to avail himself of the material of which this great idol was made, to meet the wants of his suffering army. He at once dispatched two trusty officers, with four hundred men, with orders to pound Buddha into pieces, and bring it with them.

When they arrived before the image, and beheld its immense size, they said: "How very lofty is Buddha, and how difficult it will be for us to fulfill the orders of our general!" They were at a loss how to begin. At last they constructed a ladder, and rested it against the shoulders of Buddha. Then a rope was to be thrown over the head of the great image, and in this way they hoped to drag it to the ground. But not a soldier dared ascend this ladder, for fear took hold of them. A handsome reward of ten taels (thirteen dollars) was then offered to the man who would ascend the ladder and throw the rope over the head of Buddha. Not a soldier would volunteer. At last a poor beggar came forward, who was bold enough for the dollars. He ascended the ladder slowly, threw the rope over the neck of this monster image, after several attempts, and came down without harm, and, amid the wonder of the fear-tricken soldiers, received his reward.

Then every man laid hold of the rope, and, with one mighty effort, brought the head of the image whirling to the ground. As the head touched the earth, it rolled over and over, and then suddenly stood still, in an erect position, facing the small army and officers. With great fear and trembling, they fell down before the head of the image and prayed forgiveness; but the mouth gave forth no utterance, and the ears heard not. Finding there was no father movement of the head, they all arose and began to carry out the orders of their commander. The image was in time entirely broken to pieces, and turned into currency with which to buy bread for a perishing army. It was made bread, and thus the lives of many were saved. But O how different from those who trust the Lord for that living bread from heaven! The one partakes to hunger and die; the other partakes and lives forever.

These items were handed to me by a dear missionary brother, to use as I saw fit. I have thrown them together, as you see, for you to use as you think best. O for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon China! O that we may all have power with God, and thus receive his blessing! With an earnest desire for God's blessing here and elsewhere, I remain yours, in Christian love, James Wm. Lambuth.

Ecclesiastical "Dead Beats."

The commercial world has a significant term which it applies, not to the unfortunate and the distressed, but to those who are exertionless in their mishap, and who succumb to adversity, expecting others to do for them what they ought to do for themselves. They have a genius for borrowing money. They are persistent bores. You know them a block away, and wish they would always stay at that distance. They are among business men calle 'Dead Beats.'

Almost every church has an element corresponding with that. These are they who, notwithstanding they have means, pay no pew rent where the pews are let, or contribute nothing where everything is voluntary. They are voluble in prayer, mighty in religious gab, make a big swash, but do nothing for religious institutions. They pray that the pastor may be blessed in his basket and store, but do nothing to keep him from starving to death. They do not recognize the fact that there is a religion in giving and a wickedness in withholding. The finances would go out for lack of coal, and the lamps for lack of oil, and the church be shut in six weeks, if it depended upon their contribution. The poor must have the Gospel preached to them, and the penniless must be welcomed, but there are not more than ten people in any church who cannot give something. If a man cannot give a hundred dollars a year he can give three cents. Woe, then, be to him if he do not give the three cents. We never like to hear a man pray who takes it all out in prayer. It is all folly for a man to pray for the world's conversion unless he give something towards it. The man whose income is not more than two hundred dollars a year ought to give some of it to God. One of the great wants of the Church everywhere is to get rid of its 'Dead Beats.'—Christian at Work.

Wolf Children.

Max Muller has a long letter in The Academy on wolf children. He says: Whether children, carried off by wolves, could be suckled and kept alive in a den for any length of time, is surely a question which students of natural history and even practical sportsmen might settle for us once for all, while the documentary evidence in favor of the existence of such wolf children might exercise the ingenuity of some of our cleverest lawyers. When they have done their work, and not till then, the work of the comparative mythologist will begin. I therefore proceed to put together some of the best authenticated cases of wolf-children, without, however presuming myself to pronounce any opinion, either adverse or favorable. He then gives a few well authenticated modern instances in which children have been fed by wolves. One of these was given by request, by Rev. Mr. Erhardt, Superintendent of the Orphanage at Secondra, regarding a boy in that Institution.

"We have had two such boys here but I fancy you refer to the one who was brought to us on March 5, 1872. He was found by Hindus, who had gone hunting wolves in the neighborhood of Mynpuri. Had been burnt out of the den, and was brought here with the scars and wounds still on him. In his habits he was a perfect wild animal in every point of view. He drank like a dog, and liked a bone and raw meat better than anything else. He would never remain with the other boys, but hide away in any dark corner. Clothes he would never wear, but tore them up into fine shreds. He was only a few months among us, as he got fever and gave up eating. We kept him for a time by artificial means, but eventually he died. Another instance is related by Col. Sleeman as having happened at Chupra. In March, 1843, a man and his wife went out to cut their crop of wheat. The woman was leading her boy, who had lately recovered from a severe scald on the left knee. While his parents were engaged, the child was carried off by a wolf. In 1849, a wolf, with three cubs was seen about ten miles from Chupra, followed by a boy. The boy after a fierce resistance, was caught, and was recognized by the poor cultivator's widow by the mark of a scald on the left knee, and three marks of the teeth of an animal on each side of his back. He used to mutter something, but never articulated any word distinctly. The front of his knees and elbows had become hardened from going on all fours with the wolves. In November, 1850, Captain Nicholetts ordered this boy to be sent to Colonel Sleeman, but he got alarmed and ran to a jungle.

Christ cannot but be most precious to a believer, because all his precious comforts come from Christ. The Lord Jesus is fairer than the fairest, sweeter than the sweetest, nearer than the nearest, dearer than the dearest, and richer than the richest, and better than the best. The elect precious is of all the most precious.—Dyer.

The knowledge of divine things flows through prayer, reading, meditation and observation.

Sentimental Religion.

Sentimentalism has come to usurp the place once occupied by formalism. The Luther of to-day would grapple with the evil of deifying mere feeling. Emotions form a very important part of one's character, but they are not all of life. Often the worst men have a 'vocation' for the expression of the sublimest sentiments. At the time they are sincere. A contrast between feeling and conduct suggests hypocrisy, but the truth is that the conscience frequently goads one into a state of mind the very opposite of the life generally led. The lofty sentiments uttered are genuine, only they are short lived. We would not for a moment countenance the belittling of affectional piety. But we would warn of the danger that lurks in the disproportionate presentation of sentiment. A body without a skeleton would be a mass of animated jelly, and so a merely emotional piety is at best shapeless pulp. Rugged principles, like foundation stones, while not complete in themselves, are a necessary basis for a good superstructure.

Home.

1. We may be quite sure that our will is likely to be crossed during the day; so let us prepare for it.

2. Every person in the house has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and therefore we must not expect too much.

3. Look upon each member of the family as one for whom Christ died.

4. When inclined to give an angry answer let us lift up the heart in prayer.

5. If from sickness, pain, or infirmity, we feel irritable, let us keep a very strict watch over ourselves.

6. Observe when others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness.

7. Watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and put little annoyances out of the way.

8. Take a cheerful view of everything and encourage hope.

9. Speak kindly to dependents and servants, and praise them when you can.

10. In all little pleasures which may occur put self last.

11. Try for the soft answer that turneth away wrath.

Forgiveness.

"I once saw," said an Abbot of Sinai, "three solitaries who had received the same injury. The first was troubled and indignant; but still, because he feared divine justice, he held his peace. The second rejoiced on his own account at the evil treatment he had received, because he hoped to be compensated therefor, but was sorry for him who had committed the outrage. The third, thinking only of his neighbor's sin, was so moved by it—for he truly loved him—that he wept freely. Thus may we see in these servants of God the working of three different motives; in one, the fear of punishment; in another, the hope of reward; in the last, the unselfish tenderness of a perfect love.'

Pride.

The superiority of some men is merely local. They are great, because their associates are little.

Life is like a theatre—during the play we take higher and lower seats, but when it is over we mingle in one common stream and go home.

We are as vain as if we were in full possession of our orginal perfection; and our being vain is a certain proof that we are not.

It is only the fool who is pleased with himself; no wise man is good enough for his own satisfaction.

To no kind of begging are people so averse, as to begging Pardon; that is, when there is any serious ground for doing so. When there is none, this phrase is as soon taken in vain, as other momentous words are upon light occasions.

You would think a man never could be proud who had once seen himself lost; yet, alas! Scripture and experience show that a man may be proud of his measure of grace; proud of forgivness; proud of humility; proud of knowing more of God than others.

There cannot be a secret Christian. Grace is like ointment hid in the hand; it betrayeth itself. If you truly feel the sweetness of the cross of Christ, you will be constrained to confess Christ before men.—M Cheyne.

A dead man can drift down stream, but it takes a live man to pull up against it. That is the time that tries a man's soul—when the tide is against him.

No thoroughly occupied man was ever yet very miserable.

A young lady at home from boarding-school for the holidays, was asked if she would have roast beef, when she replied: 'No, I thank you; gastronomical satiety admonishes me that I have arrived at the ultimate stage of deglutition consistent with dietetic integrity!' A Good Education.

The late Edward Everett condensed into a single brief paragraph his estimate of what constituted a good education. Here it is: "To read the English language well, to write dispatch a neat legible [illegible] of arithmetic, so as to dispose of at once, with accuracy, every question of figures which comes up in practice—I call this a good education. And if you add the ability to write pure, grammatical English, I regard it as an excellent education. These are the tools. You can do much with them, but you are hopeless without them. They are the foundation: and unless you begin with these, not with hashy attainments, a little geology, and all other ologies and osophies, are ostentatious rubbish."

The English Divorce Court.—The annual return made to the Secretary of State by the Register of the Divorce Court shows that in the year 1873 the court made as many as 215 "decrees absolute" for the dissolution of marriages. In 1872 the number was only 133, in 1871 it was 166, in 1870 it was 164, averaging 151 a year in those three years. The increased number in 1873 raises the average of the last four years to 167 a year. The act creating this court came into operation in January, 1858.

Methodism in America—Its Growth—Destiny.

One hundred and eight years ago, Wesleyan Methodism began its grand march across the continent of North America. Philip Embury, a carpenter, preached the first Methodist sermon ever delivered on this side of the Atlantic Ocean. It was preached in his own house in 1766, in the city of New York, to a congregation of five persons. After the sermon, the little class was formed. Such was the humble origin of Methodism in America. As green forests sleep in the tiny cup of acorns, so grand possibilities slumbered in this mustard seed of vital religion. This little vine struck its roots deep in the glebe of Scriptural truth, and has grown with marvellous rapidity. It has spread southward through all the Atlantic slope, gone westward over the Rocky mountains, and dropped its fruitful boughs along the golden coast of California.

Just here it will be eminently appropriate to insert the statistics of the denominations in the United States taken from our late minutes, in order to show both positively and comparatively the surpassing fruitfulness of Methodism in this western world. They are as follows:

Roman Catholic—The membership (counting whole families, irrespective of moral character) is variously estimated at from 2,500,000 to 5,500,000. Probably the smaller number is correct.

The grand feature of Methodism is a revival of Scriptural Christianity, the power of Divine life in the soul. The power of the Divine Spirit in the soul makes it aggressive, enterprising, self-sacrificing. Its distinguishing agency in diffusing Scriptural holiness over these lands, is its itinerant ministry. It is this grand agency, that has enabled Methodism to keep up with the march of frontier settlements, cross the Alleghanies, follow the Indian trail beyond the Mississippi, and at length fill the far west with the sound of its victories. In the wake of its luminous progress, have sprung up all kinds of improvements. It has been a popular educator, civilizer and reliner to the rude masses of the west. A distinguished outsider has "recognized in the Methodist economy, as well as in the zeal, the devoted piety, and efficiency of its ministry, one of the most powerful elements in the religious prosperity of the United States, as well as one of the truest pillars of their civil and political institutions." Bancroft, the historian, acknowledges the Methodists as "the pioneers of religion" in this country, and says, that they have "carried their consolations, songs and prayers to the farthercst cabins in the wilderness." Another talented writer has said, "Their voice went through the land as a trumpet call. It sounded over the heights and depths, and filled the country with its echoes." Not only have the banners of Methodism been planted in all the States and territories of the Union from sea to sea, but it has spread rapidly over Great Britain, its native home, into Scotland, Ireland to Nova Scotia, the West Indies, France, Africa, India, Germany, and is achieving remarkable success among the Cannibal Islands of the Southern Sea. "The world is my parish," said Mr. Wesley, and it seems that this prophecy is about to be realized. For the bright eye of the sun sees no longitude on the rolling earth, where Methodism is not working for the salvation of men. May her future history realize the noble anticipations of the poet. Montgomery, who said, "Century expanding after century, like circle beyond circle in broad water, shall carry farther and farther the blessings of the Methodist dispensation, till they have tracked every sea, and touched every shore."

A Christmas Gift.

The first and best Christmas gift to man was the Christ-child who came to bring joy and light, peace and good-will, hope and salvation to the world. The world was poor, but the coming of the Christ made it rich: it was clothed in the stained garments of sin, but Christ's robe of saving grace was thrown about it; the darkness of God's frown was upon it, but the Son turned away the wrath, and the light of his smile filled the nations with gladness. Christ was a free-gift. God owed man nothing. He had created man and given him good gifts, and in return received the ingratitude, rebellion and insult of sin. His counsel had been spurned, his law violated, and his leadership rejected, and the sword of his justice was ready to fall when his love and mercy proposed the Christmas-gift of his Son—a priceless gift—the third person in the Godhead and the jewel of Heaven! What a gift that was! Better than a kingdom is strong-limbed, free breathing health to the deformed and diseased; brighter than sparkling jewels is liberty to the captive—and dearer than the miser's heaps of gold is the king's messenger of pardon to the doomed felon on the gallows. Christ was all this to man, and more—infinitely more than man can conceive.

Christ was a free gift and is a continuing gift. Though more than eighteen hundred years have passed since Judea's shepherds heard the gift proclaimed and the wise men traversed the plains to view it, it has not grown old and valueless. Other and earthly gifts rust and decay, or go out of fashion with the changes that Time works in men's needs and tastes; but the world's first Christmas gift is as fresh and dear and priceless as ever. Time can't hurt it, for its essence is eternal—it can't go out of fashion, for man needs it as it is, in all its beauty and perfection and unchangeableness. Christ is offered now, and all the time, to every one who will open his heart to receive him. All that is required is that the heart be emptied of all else and be made a fit casket for the gift that is offered. The gew-gaws, the tinsel and base metal of sin with all of their rust and canker must be thrown away and the bright jewel received. Why do men hesitate to make the exchange? Who would not take such a Christmas gift?

Methodism

The Charlotte Observer in its issue of the 8th inst, pays a handsome tribute to Methodism and coming, as it does, from one of a different denomination, is highly appreciated. The late Conference made a deep and favorable impression upon the people of the State, and the Observer well expresses what many feel. It says:

"The interesting proceedings of the Methodist State Conference just adjourned in Raleigh recall the terse remark of the poet-biographer that "Methodism is Religion in earnest" The whole history of the church bears witness to the truth of that character ization. Search as we may the rolls of ecclesiastical polity and we shall find no fact more wonderful than the ever-increasing growth and expansion of Methodism. The little band of Oxford youths, nicknamed "methodists" for their regularity in devotional exercises, has swollen into a vast army of above twelve thousand churches and meeting houses this day!

Could the bold pioneers of the church arise from the tomb and survey the multitude of their followers—see the belt of churches and school houses wherever the Anglo-Saxon tongue is spoken, erected to propagate the simple creed they taught—might not they well exclaim in Charles Wesley's dying words "The workmen die but the work goes on!"

By the way, the death-bed utterances of both the great founders of Methodism took a prophetic turn The elder of the brothers going off in a rapture of pious enthusiasm exclaims. "The best of it all is that God is with us!"

No need to add that this too has been verified in the practical history of the church. It pleases us to know these things and note them, though our own religious views may run in other channels. We rejoice that the Conference has exhibited so many marks of growth and piety, and that the prospects of the church in North Carolina are bright and promising."

The Baltimore Episcopal Methodist has been purchased by Messrs. Johnson & Co, of Baltimore. At the earnest solicitation of the new firm, Rev. John Poisal, D. D., has assumed the editorial management of this excellent journal.

In pursuance of a time-honored custom of granting everybody a respite from work on Christmas week, we shall give our printers their holiday, and issue no paper next week. We will rest ourselves and let others rest, and gather strength for the toil of another year. The Advocate sends its greetings to all its readers and wishes them a "Merry Christmas!"

Bro. Nelson's list of appointments for his District comes too late for this issue. We have only space to say that his first quarterly meeting will be at Monroe Station on 26th and 27th inst: Concord Station and Circuit on Jan. 2nd and 3rd.

Without content we shall find it almost as difficult to please others as ourselves.

Christmas

The year would not be complete without Christmas of joy and rest.—To young and old alike it is the point to which rest from toil, forgetfulness of cares and unbending from the taxing pursuits of life are all referred. There are other holidays, church, social and national, but the busy world in caring for itself takes but little note of these. It pays them its respects perhaps, and observes them nominally, but the tension of its strung nerves is not relaxed and its thoughts still remain fixed and busied with bread-gathering and money-getting—with the elbowing for the best places—struggling for power and the harboring of all kinds of jealousies, enmities and rivalries. On minor holidays the plow may stop in the furrow, but it is carried to the shop for a new point and repairs for a new term of service, or the busy farmer busbands the time in tinkering on broken harness. The doors of the store may be closed outside, but the rear is open and the merchant is poring over his accounts and entering up profit and loss. The spindles and looms may cease their whir and rattle, but the fire in the furnace is still burning and the steam in the boiler kept ready for the engine to morrow. There may be an appearance of rest, but it is only the momentary pause the world takes, like a gladiator looking for the weak points of his adversary,—the crouching or stepping back for a spring, like a tiger in front of its prey.

But at Christmas, the glorious season of no care, the world sits down to rest, shakes hands with its friends and foes, forgets the strife and worry of business, and clubs, smokes and makes merry with its neighbors. For once in the year, it enjoys itself and gives itself up to the exercise of social facultics, putting itself and everybody else at ease and in good humor. It gives presents and receives them, lays aside its manhood dignity and goes back to childhood ways, indulges in Santa Claus frolics, tells wonderful tales and plays blind man's buff with laughter and noise. Friends and Kinspeople come on a visit and the latest and pretty give forth a cheery welcome—old times are talked of, pleasant memories taken out of their dusty place, and the maiden blush lights up the dear wrinkled face of "grandma" with the old-time beauty, as "grandpa" tells of the words he whispered a half century ago under the old "mistletoe bough." Bright-eyed and strong-limbed grand children and nephews and cousins fill the old homestead with the unrebuked and welcome noise and clatter of tin-horns and harpedoes, fire-crackers and drums, and everything is full of fun, frolic and life—except the fatted turkey.

Christmas is a Christian holiday, and Christianity would have men to be cheerful and social, and engage in becoming mirth. Its Founder, whose precious birth the season celebrates, was himself social, and consecrated feasting and joy by his presence at Cana; and his religion does not teach that he is pleased with the long, sorrowful face of the Pharisee, or the self inflicted scourges and cuttings of the prophets of Baal. Into whatsoever heart the light of religion has come, there is joy, and to reflect and express it becomingly is that heart's privilege and duty. The light that "burst o'er Judea's plains, unutterably splendid," was the light of peace and joy to the world, and those on whom it falls should not make dark-lanterns of their hearts, but should let the radiance fall on all around them.

Much less should people forget that the holiday commemorates the advent of the Saviour of the world, and turn it into a season of wild revelry and dissipation, until it resembles the Bacchanalian orgies and revels of the heathen. It is a Christmas and not a heathen holiday, and the offerings that are well-pleasing to God are not those which the perverted hearts and minds of the heathen invented for the gods of mythology.

Death of D'Arcy Paul.

The Richmond Christian Advocate contains the following tribute to Bro. Paul, who died at his residence in the city of Petersburg on the 13th instant:

"The foremost layman in our Church in Virginia, has closed a life of eighty years; a life of Christian work rarely excelled in any age of the Church of God. His name has been as a household word among us for half a century.

In the heart now cold in death the love of Christ glowed with increasing brightness to the very edge of Jordan.

Bro. Paul never seemed to us to grow old. He walked, talked, worked, and sung as a young man. Some men, as age creeps upon them, allow their interest in the Church to wane; not so with him; in everything that had religion in it he showed an unabated interest to the last day of earthly life.—Only two weeks before his death, at the funeral of his well-beloved brother Cowles, he led the solemn choir music, and his soul, as indeed it always did in singing, seemed to soar away to the highest mountain of glory.

We think there never has been a man among us just like D'Arcy Paul. We never expect to look upon his like again. His character had all the elements that make a man truly great.—He commanded beyond any one we have ever known, the confidence of men. We mean all men, in and out of the Church, with whom he came in contact. To him pre-eminently may be applied the language of St. Paul, "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord, distributing to the necessity of the saints, given to hospitality."

Intelligent to a high degree, and even amid the pressure of constant and often harassing and perplexing business, constantly storing his mind with the best thoughts of the best authors, he was most entertaining and instructive in the social circle. Abiding in the Divine love, he had a Christian firmness that never compromised a principle and never deserted a field of duty.

As a counsellor he was wise, cautious, and independent. What he felt to be right he would adhere to against the world, against the universe. His brethren delighted to honor him, and he was worthy of all they bestowed. Since the introduction of the lay element into the councils of our Church, his name has stood at the head of the list for the Annual and General Conferences, and would have stood there if he had lived a hundred years.

What amount he bestowed in charities can never be known on earth. He truly made a friend of the mammon of unrighteousness, and by a noble benevolence and a living faith his path was opened to an everlasting habitation.

What a void the death of such a man makes in the community where he lived, and where from sire to son for three generations his name has been a synonym for all that is pure, true, and generous in human nature! And what a void his death will make in the Church!

Brethren, "known ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?"

Our Preachers.

Rev. L. W. Crawford has been returned as pastor of the Methodist church at this place for another year. The appointment meets the universal approbation of the charge. He preached last Sunday with unusual fervor.—Intelligencer.

Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, who was stationed at the M. E. Church of this place, by the late conference, was in his place on Sunday last and preached to a crowded house. He acceptably served this church eighteen years ago and meets a cordial welcome at the hands of the congregation.—Greensboro Patriot.

RETURNED.—Rev. E. W. Thompson still remains the pastor of the Methodist Church of this city, having been returned for another year, at the last meeting of Conference. This gives satisfaction and pleasure, not only to Mr. Thompson's congregation but to the people, generally, of Fayetteville.—Fayetteville Gazette.

The citizens of this place and particularly the Methodists, are glad to know that the Conference has returned Rev. F. L. Reid to this station.

Rev. H. H. Gibbons has been returned to this (Tar River) circuit for this Conference year. Mr. Gibbons is a faithful, zealous, working preacher, and the circuit will not suffer while in his hands.—Franklin Courier.

The Winston Republican pays a deserved compliment to our esteemed friend and brother, Rev. H. P. Cole, late pastor of Person Street Church in this city.

The writer will not trust himself to express the feelings of regret with which he parts from one with whom he has sustained such cordial and intimate relations, lest his pen run into what some might deem extravaganza. We cannot do less, however, than commend him to his new charge as a gentleman sans reproche, a minister of talent, piety and prudence, and a companion, such as one having once known, it pains to lose. The Republican says: The pulpit of the Methodist Church was filled on last Sunday, as we gave notice, by the Rev. H. P. Cole, former Pastor of this Church. Mr. Cole preached a good sermon, full of deep christian experience and piety, to as large, intelligent and attentive audience as has assembled in this place lately. May his success, thro' his ministerial life, be as successful in winning golden opinions in all his charges as it was in this one.

In the enjoyments of Christmas, when you are surrounded with the blessings of friends and home-comforts, do not forget the poor "whom ye always have with you." Help them to enjoy the holidays and to have cause to remember this as a special season when the humanity and charity of their more favored neighbors were exhibited towards them. Many a poor shivelled limb is shivering with cold—many an eye that would otherwise be bright is dull and weary from the weakness of hunger, and Heaven will smile upon and bless the "Santa Claus" that brings wood and warm garments and food to the suffering.

Life and Sermons of Rev. Dr. Reid is a new book which every Methodist in the State ought to have. The sermons are of the highest order and full of interest. Send your orders to Rev. F. L. Reid at Louisburg, N. C.

"I would give," said an enthusiastic Southerner, in the summer of 1861, "a thousand dollars to have been in the battle of Manassas, and to have come out alive." A far more glorious battle than any waged in human wars is going on around us. The Prince of Light contends with the powers of darkness. If we chose we may take part in the contest on the side of light, and win a glorious crown.

Report of the Treasurer of N. C. General Conference Delegation.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Will you please publish this report in the Advocate so that the preachers may see whether it is accurate By overlooking a supplemental memorandum, I failed at Conference to read some of the credits, and was thereby led into error in my aggregate statement. This will make the proper corrections.

Yours truly,

On the evening of November 25th, the ladies of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Ashland, Ky., entered the residence of their pastor, Rev. W. A Dotson, and, after a short stay, left money and other valuables to the amount of one hundred dollars. To this should be added a donation of groceries, canned fruits, etc., at the opening of the year, worth not less than thirty dollars. The Presbyterians have, officially and otherwise, shown their catholicity and kindness in money and other presents to the amount of about forty dollars.

We regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Lou F. Leach, wife of J. Addison Leach, of Thomasville and formerly of this city. She had been in ill health for some months and died on the 16th inst. We tender our sympathies to the afflicted husband and friends of the deceased.

Recent Publications

We return acknowledgments to the publishers, J. H. Enniss, Esq., for a copy of Turner's N. C. Almanac for 1875. It is one of the best Almanacs offered to the public, and the present number contains a vast amount of instructive and interesting matter.—The calculations are made for the Almanac by Rev. B Craven, D. D. LL.D., and are apt to be accurate. Almanacs are found in every well-regulated household—and Mr. Hussey, of the Landmark, says he values them next to Congressional Records and Agricultural and Patent Office Reports.—The price of Turner's is 10 cents.

We have received from the publisher, a copy of the January number of Vick's Floral Guide, for 1875, published quarterly. The present number contains over 100 pages, 500 engravings, descriptions of more than 500 of the best flowers and vegetables, with directions for culture, colored plate, etc. It is believed to be the most useful and elegant work of the kind in the world. Only 25 cents for the year. Published in English and German. Address James. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, an Illustrated monthly, conducted by J. G. Holland. Scribner & Co., New York. $4 a year. The January number is unusually interesting, and contains an illustrated account of "Pre-historic South America," by Dr. Foulkes. The serial story of "Seven Oaks," by J. G. Holland, is continued in the January number, and promises to be an interesting tale.

One of the best magazines published, and full of interest and instructive articles is the January number.

ST. NICHOLAS, a magazine for the children, Scribner & Co. New York $3 a year.

This publication deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it, since its establishment, and grows better with every new number.

NORTH CAROLINA JOURNAL OF EDUCATION. Published at Raleigh N. C., S. D. Pool, Editor.

We are in receipt of the first number of this new candidate for popular favor and new worker for the cause of Education, and are highly pleased with it. It is replete with historical and educational essays and well written editorials. There are several articles by T. B. Kingsbury, Esq. We commend the Journal to our readers and wish it unmeasured success.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE An illustrated monthly of Popular Literature and Science. J. B. Lippincott & Co. Publishers, Phila. $4 a year.

The January number of this first class magazine, which begins a new volume, presents a very enjoyable table of contents. The "New Hyperian" by Ed. Strahan is concluded in this number. It contains several illustrated articles, well written and entertaining, while "Our Monthly Gossip" offers a rare variety. We trust to be able soon to publish the prospectus of this magazine for 1875.

The Stewards of the Wadesboro Circuit, will please meet me at the parsonage in Wadesboro, on the 7th of January, 1875.

The will of D'Arcy Paul of Petersburg, leaves a five store on Sycamore street to the Methodist Asylum, and $5,000 to the Washington Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

North Carolina.

We gladly welcome to our city Capt Geo N. Waitt, for a number of years the efficient conductor on the N. C. Rail road. He has resigned that position to take effect the first of January, and comes to the City of Oaks to join his brother D. S. Waitt in the mercantile business.

The Carolina Central Railway has been completed to Charlotte, and the first train ran from Charlotte to Wilmington on the 15th inst. About 700 persons took the train for Wilmington, in honor of the occasion.

Governor Brogden has granted a pardon to Davie B. Jones, white, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for life from Wayne county, in 1871, for arson.

The Cape Fear Fair was held at Wilmington last week. Col. John Wilder Atkinson delivered the opening address.

Marcus Brittaie, a son of James Brittain, near Morganton, says the PIEDMONT PRESS, shot himself through the abdomen with a pocket pistol, week before last. He was living at last accounts but the wound is dangerous.

Mr. Abernethy who keeps the toll bridge on the Catawba, counted ninety wagons in one day bound for Hickory, with produce.

The Bingham Cadets forwarded the amount ($37.50), received by them as a premium at the State Fair, to the Orphan Asylum at Oxford.

The present Sheriff of Catawba county has been in that office for twenty eight successive years.

Of the 225 inhabitants of the village of Mount Olive, Wayne county, there is only one negro, and notwithstanding this, the town is noted for its prosperity.

The Charlotte OBSERVER of the 15th says:

Up to this time, Capt. Jas. F. Johnston, the agent in this city, of the Direct Trade Union, has shipped between 300 and 350 bales of cotton direct to Liverpool.

Two horses belonging to Rev. W. S. Chaffin, about two miles from Fayetteville were poisoned recently and died in a few hours, after writhing in great agony. Their baltars ought to have been used on the miscreant perpetrator. The act is supposed to have been one of revenge.

"Long Grabs" writes to his paper the Fayetteville EAGLE, concerning Monroe, and from his letter we gather the following items: There are 25 stores and business places in Monroe, 3 Churches, 2 or 3 good schools, 1 newspaper, 1 Hotel, 2 tanneries and 1500 population. One bank with a capital of $40,000, and lots in the business part of the town cost $500 each. Over 3000 bales of cotton have been sold this season and one house is doing a business of $75,000 a year. Union county prospers, though the soil is poor—the people raise their own provisions and the money made on cotton is a clear gain. Several gold mines are in operation. About fifty new houses are going up and the population has doubled in two years. (Monroe is doing nearly as well as Winston).

The largest mercantile firm of Charlotte, Wittowsky and Rintels, do a business, says Long Grabs, of $750,000 a year. (Wittowsky and Rintels have been advertisors in the ADVOCATE. No wonder they do a good business.

The editor of the Robesonian is a practical printer, and in introducing an article on "Authors and Printers" says: "Some of the very best editorials that have appeared in the Robesonian since our connection with it were never reduced to writing and when we wrote them and went to the case to set them in type, we found it necessary to change almost every sentence."

The Revenue Collector's office has been removed from Statesville to Salisbury.

The Winston SENTINEL says that town has a man named "Orthodox Creed" and he went to church recently for the first time in three years.

Five convicts were brought from Stokes county to the penitentiary last week.

Linda Martin, a colored woman of Stokes county, made a crop of tobacco this year from which she will realize about $500.

Dr. Chas. Phillips, of Davidson College, will deliver an address at Salem on the 29th Dec., for the benefit of the Salem Literary Society.

Rev Mr. Huffham, of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, denies the absurd report of his having shot and killed two negroes recently. He has not fired a gun in three years.

After January 1st, there will be four papers published in Wilson.

Mr A. L. Rountree has resigned the presidency of the Wilson Bank and is succeeded by Mr. Jno Hutchinson, of Newbern.

A G Moore of Haw River, had an encounter at Greensboro with one Green whom he accused of having sent through the mails, some months since, a libellous and slanderous card concerning him, Moore. Col. T. C. Fuller, Green's lawyer, also came near being involved in the difficulty. Several pistols shots were fired, but no serious damage was done.

The question of running steamboats from Norfolk, Va. to Danbury, N. C., is being agitated by the ROANOKE VALLEY and Milton CHRONICLE. Father Evans says if they will send him to Congress, he will get an appropriation of $200,000 for the enterprise. The Milton CHRONICLE mentions the position of a few of the State papers on the usury question. The Albemarle TIMES, Wilmington STAR, Charlotte OBSERVER, Newbernian, Windsor TIMES are opposed to usury laws, while the Salisbury WATCHMAN and Wilson PLAINDEALER favor them.

The navigation of the Yadkin River is again talked of. It is estimated that $250,000 will be sufficient to make the river navigable from Salisbury to a point beyond Wilkesboro.

STEALING A RIDE.—Some days ago, when the train on the Western Division of the Carolina Railroad stopped at Tuckaseege, on its way West, a white man, unobserved as he himself thought, crept into one of the unoccupied box cars, the door of which was open. Conductor Finch saw him, and had the doors of the car pushed together and locked. When the train stopped at Brevard's Station, the conductor went up to the car, and, with the remark to the engineer, that he believed there was a cow in that car for that place told him to run the car off on the side track. This was done and the train went off, and the fellow who calculated to steal a ride, brought on himself imprisonment in the car until the train returned in the afternoon. When the door was unlocked and he got out, he had the appearance of one who had gone after wool and got shorn.—OBSERVER.

Our friend Henry T. Jordan, Esq., who won distinction as a talented and working member of the Legislature in 1870-72, will, it is said, remove to Durham for the practice of law. His brother, Nat Jordan, Esq., will remove to Winston—Durham's rival.

Mr. Linney, Senator from Alexander, made one of his good speeches in the Senate last week, on the usury question. It bristles with pointed arguments in favor of usury laws.

The Legislature adjourned on yesterday. There have been but few laws passed of general importance. The State debt question has received some consideration, but nothing has as yet been done towards adjusting its difficulties. The convention question has been much talked of in private and in public, but the sentiment of the legislators is much against the propriety and expediency of amending the constitution by means of a convention. All admit that the instrument which has given no less dissatisfaction to the people than it has to the Supreme Court, which has been busied, ever since its adoption, with construing and harmonizing its discordant parts, should be amended, or rather reshaped; but the assembly learned that the people will not endorse the action calling a convention. The controlling party seems to have less regard for the question of right and necessity involved, than it does for the effect upon the election in 1876. Not of them, we opine, want to return in 1876, and therefore step cautiously now. We trust that, in the recess they have taken, they will devote themselves to ascertaining or moulding the sentiments of intelligent constituents, and return in January prepared to do what is right and wise.

"A virtue and a courtesy almost Arcadian seem to obtain in the honorable town of Raleigh, North Carolina. There was a public meeting of some sort held there the other evening at which appeared divers Judges, and Colonels, and Generals upon the stage, as is the wont in Southern meetings. Several of these gentlemen were seated gracefully and in safety, but an adverse fate marked General Clingman for its own. He had secured a chair and was about to repose himself, when another gentleman thinking that he saw in the General's eye an inclination toward an adjacent chair, seized chair No. One for himself. The consequence was that the General suddenly and emphatically sat down upon the floor. The remarkable thing about this performance is that not the faintest giggle agitated the large audience. Another man of Raleigh, a church member, recently went to the semi devouring circus, and has just sent a letter to a prominent brother to say—with a $10 bill for the heathen—that he has had no peace since."

INDEX TO NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Our readers are directed to the new advertisement of D. S. Waitt & Sons—Give them a call. They are first class business gentlemen, and always accommodating to customers.

We take very great pleasure in calling attention to the new advertisement of W. B. Hutchings & Co. Mr. Hutchings is a high toned Christian gentleman, and a first class business man. His stock of saddles, bridles, buggy and wagon harness is the most complete in the State. He is prepared to fill all orders promptly and upon reasonable terms. We commend him to the patronage of our people at home and abroad.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Messrs. Williams & Haywood. For drugs, medicines, paints, oils, fancy articles, garden seeds, teas, spices, flavoring extracts, cigars and chewing tobacco, apply at this store. They are prompt and courteous gentlemen, and in every way worthy of the confidence and patronage of the dear christian family of which he was the head, dear departed Dr. Ruffin was a member of the visible church—yet his death was hopeful. Though not a church member his life was remarkably exemplary—more so than a majority of professing christians. He established the church and her ministry, fed the hungry, visited the sick, and we know that if he had been in prison he would have come out using the home, too, his extreme illness with more patience and resignation than one could do whose heart was not nourished by grace in a measure of a better life. During his illness he spoke to his christian wife of favorite portions of the divine word, such as "If a member envy the Creator in the days of thy youth," etc., and "fear God and his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." &c. But O, he is gone! yes

"Farewell, farewell, earth will soon follow
Where'er we wander—o'er wide wilds,
Far, far, I hunger and thirst sweetly,
From the glorious land of souls."

The Greensboro Patriot will please copy.

Died at his own residence in Rockingham county N. C. on 20th November 1874, at 3½ o'clock A M, after a lingering illness, Mr. John A Ratcliffe in the 62d year of his age.

We know no more interesting character were combined so many admirable elements with so little that was objectionable. He was a pure man whose integrity is above all question, a kind and obliging, affectionate neighbor, a devoted citizen he was useful in a high degree, and beloved by a society huge her with the mother sobs and other members of the dear christian family of which he was the head, dear departed Dr. Ruffin was a member of the visible church—yet his death was hopeful. Though not a church member his life was remarkably exemplary—more so than a majority of professing christians. He established the church and her ministry, fed the hungry, visited the sick, and we know that if he had been in prison he would have come out using the home, too, his extreme illness with more patience and resignation than one could do whose heart was not nourished by grace in a measure of a better life. During his illness he spoke to his christian wife of favorite portions of the divine word, such as "Remember now the Creator in the days of thy youth," etc., and "fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." &c. But O, he is gone! yes

"Farewell, farewell, earth will soon follow
Where'er we wander—o'er wide wilds,
Far, far, I hunger and thirst sweetly,
From the glorious land of souls."

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, fairly, and impartially.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it condensed when unimportant, at full length when of more interest. Every, we may say, but it is a clear, interesting and instructive paper.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and instructive matter.

The agricultural department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of non-independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, consultation, or principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. If the no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this is largely a question of expense of paper and printing we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to clubs, who may make special efforts to get subscribers. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rates for subscription. It is up to every to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at that price. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE DAILY SUN—A large four page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 65 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To club of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cents

Made from Pure White Lead, Linseed Oil & Zinc, & Always Ready for Use.

READ THE FOLLOWING TESTIMONIALS:

From the Vestry of Mount Calvary Church

Baltimore, August 18, 1874.

MR. C. P KNIGHT—DEAR SIR: We take pleasure in testifying to the excellent qualities of the Paint obtained from using your Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint on our College Building, and are well pleased with it. Though it was applied by one having no experience in such work, yet we have a good job—We shall continue to use it—believing that in point of economy, durability and facility of application, it is superior to any other pigment of red in the market.

W. G. SIMMONS

From Prof. W. G. Simmons, Wake Forest College, North Carolina.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE, N. C., Oct. 1, 1873

Mr. C. P. Knight—DEAR SIR: We have for several months been using your Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint on our College Building, and are well pleased with it. Though it was applied by one having no experience in such work

Doubly Remarked

'Tis Christmas Time.

BY MRS. JENNIE F. WILLING.

Christmas is coming! Oh, the pretty little knick-knacks that are being knit and wrought in secret! sweet, tender thoughts braided in at every stitch. Ah, the poor people, who think in their bitterness that the Christ-Child forgets to stop at the hungry cabins! Alas, the alone people! The deft, kindly hands that were so busy last years are folded together, still and cold, under the snow, and the Christmas brings only tears!

That dreary December morning Mrs. Raynor sat thinking of her little Mary, who was here last Christmas, so busy with her plans for the happy day, and now—the poor mother felt only the "Silence 'gainst which she dared not cry,

That ached round her, like a strong disease and new."

In Sabbath school that afternoon the question she dropped into the superintendent's drawer was the one that had been moaning through her heart all that gloomy day: "How can one, the light of whose life has gone out, find happiness again?"

The school was lively enough that session in spite of the winter mist without. The children had been promised the sum of all glories—a Christmas house. The superintendent—just the dearest, jolliest man alive, according to the small people—was to play Santa Claus coming up out of the chimney with loads of presents. Could anything be merrier?

"I don't care a snap for Christmas," said a boy in Mrs. Raynor's class. 'We won't get anything worth a pin—Nell and me. A stick o' candy, or a bag o' pop-corn, or somesuch trash. Rich folks' young ones get all the things that's worth having. I don't care, though," giving the boy next him a poke, to keep his bravado in countenance.

If the truth must be told, since Mrs. Raynor's bereavement her Sabbath-school teaching had been quite too mechanical—a mere matter of duty. She had hardly noticed this new boy. But the thought of how much his Christmas and her own would be alike, set her looking him over.

"Don't you keep Christmas at your house?" she asked, in that peculiarly respectful way that is the open sesame of a child's confidence.

"Christmas! Mercy on us! Why, it's mor'n mother can do to pay the rent, and get clothes and things for us all."

"How many are there of you?"

"There's me and Nell. Nell's my twin. That's her over in yon class, where the teacher has a shiny thing on her hat. The end one in the seat's Nell."

"Are you two all there are?"

"Oh, no! There's mother and Nannie. Nannie's our cousin. She's older than Nell and me, but she's little, 'bout like that one there."

Mrs. Raynor felt the heartache again. "That one there" was so like her own lost child.

"She's awful good, Nannie is," the boy went on, thawed into talkativeness by the kindness in the lady's eyes. "You just ought to see how beautiful she reads her Testament and prayin' —mother says she never seen nothin' like it. She thinks Nannie pays her way if the times is hard."

"So you have hard work to get along, do you?"

"My! Guess we do! Nell went ont for a nurse girl, but the folks was dreadful mean. So mother said if we'd got to starve to death, we'd try and keep so we could go where father's got to. We can't, you know, if we get bad. I can't get the first thing to do, only in them places that mother says ain't fit for me to be. So there it is," picking vigorously at a patch on the knee of his pants, as if to pull that off might mend matters.

"Where do you live?" asked Mrs. Raynor.

"On Pay-street, over Smith's drug store. Why up, clear to the top notch. Mother don't like to live over a drug store, for fear we'll blow up some night. They keep blowing up things down there, you know; but me and Nell we don't care; we think it would be fun to go kitin' all together, a leap better than starvin' or freezin."

He laughed a foolish little laugh. Mrs. Raynor thought there was a sob in it. Just then superintendent struck his bell, and began to read the questions in his drawer, with the answers he and his assistants had appended. Presently he came to Mrs. Raynor's: "How can one, the light of whose life has gone out, find happiness again?" The answer was: "For the love of the Master, help some one on a piece who has a heavier load than you." Simple and homely, but it went straight to her heart. Had she been selfish in her love for her husband and child? Was this Christ's lesson to her?

"Can't we do something for Christmas, auntie? Ned and Nell will be disappointed if we don't. They've been such good children." It was a wee, wee body, with a transparent Madonna-ish face, that spoke in such a wise, motherly way.

"I am sure, Nannie, I don't see how I can pinch ont the first cent of it. The times are so hard, everything so high, and—"

"My sickness last fall put you back so," said the little old child. Her needles trotted tremulously round the small mitten. Mrs. More rubbed away over the smoky tub, singing again and again the first verse of Jesus, lover of my soul." At last the resolutely cheerful singing grew broken and quavering, and stopped altogether. The poor woman dropped into a chair, and covered her face with her old sudsy apron. She used to say of herself: "I can hold up through 'most everything; but if I give way the least mite, I just go all to bits in a minute."

"O auntie, what is the matter?"

It was some time before Mrs. More could speak. Then, jumping up as suddenly as she had dropped down, "There," she said stoutly, "I'm done. Jesus said he cared for the sparrows. I reckon they were not of as much account as we are. At any rate, we've got nobody else to look to now. I oughtn't to bother you, Nannie. You've got too old a head on your shoulders any way; but the rent—I can't for my life see where its coming from," throwing ont a big sigh to keep from a relapse. Wise little Nannie said never a word. A sillier body would have talked about keeping up courage when there was no courage left to keep up. She knew a better thing to do. So she crept away into the limber room, at the head of the stairs, and asked the Lord Christ for help. It came; for had he not said: "In heaven the angels do always behold the face of my Father?" Better still, he came himself to the poor little lamb, and put into her heart an unshaken confidence in his love and care.

Mrs. Raynor's first thoughts that Monday morning were of Ned and Nell and little Nannie. She must go and see those children. What should she take them? So went to the drawer where the broken playthings, and the half worn shoes, and the little dresses, were laid away. To think of any other child wearing them! Ah, but these were Christ's little ones, and He said: 'Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these, ye do it unto me.' She took out the warmest of the dear little garments, and tied them in a parcel. Though her hands shook, and tears fell on them, yet her 'load' grew lighter every moment. Christ was helping her master the selfishness of her grief, though she did not know it then.

She was nearly out of breath by the time she reached the 'top notch' over the drug store on Fay street. She stumbled into the dark lumber room. A quaint little sprite sprang up before her, its great eyes staring with fright. Poor little Nannie was as much scared by the sudden answer of her prayers as grown people are sometimes.

Ned and Nell danced round Nannie like a pair of young Indians, when they came home and found her so snug and warm in the nice flannels. And they all had a grand, beautiful Christmas after all. Mrs. Raynor adopted Nannie as her own, in place of the little girl Christ had sent for. It was a sore trial for Mrs. More to give her up. Her grief did not last long however. Whether the child's prayers brought it about or not, I can hardly say; but the people who rented Mrs. Raynor's house, and with whom she boarded, moved into the country, so Mrs. More took their place.

Christmas morning, after the little gifts had been wondered over and enjoyed—each had something 'worth having'—Nannie read about Christ being born in Bethlehem of Judea. Then Mrs. Raynor prayed. Whatever her words might have been, her heart thanked God for teaching her to forget herself and her sorrows, to help those 'whose load was heavier than her own.' S. S. Journal.

The nature, uses extraordinary sanitary effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the staple herbs and aromatics of more than half the Curinian world, are fully set forth in its pages, which are also interspersed with pictorial illustrations, valuable recipes for the household and farm, humorous anecdotes, and other instructive and amusing reading matter, original and selected. Among the Almanacs to appear with the opening of the year, this will be one of the most useful and may be had for the asking. The proprietors Messrs. Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint.

It is but little more than a quarter of a century since the art of mixing paint was confined almost exclusively to a few comparatively speaking. Now, however, through the ingenuity of BRADLEY, we are not only enabled to apply the paint if we desire, but can see the shades in advance, sample cards being furnished gratis, with the different shades or tints, numbered. Those who have used the "Enamel Paint," speak from experience, that it is all that is claimed for it, and evidently supercedes the "old style paint." As an evidence of the great worth of the Enamel Paint, we most respectfully request all our readers to carefully read the excellent testimonials of Mr. C. P. Knight, in this paper.

Fever or Liver Complaint, BILIOUSNESS & HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weakness, debility; he is easily startled, flushes and blushes, and burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up forth ide enough to try it. In fact, he dreads every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the liver to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

Dr. C. M'Lane's Liver Pills, in cases of Ague and Fever, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

one of the first requirements of logic to prevent error, is to define your terms. Now, my whole article rested upon what I regarded as a proper definition of the term, "Knowledge of the gospel," as you use it above. You will remember that I argued to show that the gospel in the sense necessarily used in this discussion, must be synonymous with "scheme of redemption," "plan of salvation," "Atonement of Christ," etc: that the goodness, power and wisdom of God furnish a guarantee to every son of Adam, which he be on an island of the Sea or in North Carolina, that he shall have a fair trial for his life, not "Son of Christ," but, through Christ-Atonement; and if he will be saved by walking in the light he has, not being required to improve more talents than are given unto him.

Now, we are prepared for another remark. The statement. You say, "I the Bible teaches what you (I) assure it does, surely one text at least, in all the Bible, can be found in proof of your position. And yet you do not give us one text to sustain your assertion." Now charity alone leads me to suppose that you overlooked the last I gave, and upon which my whole argument was grounded. Supposing this to be the case, I will requote it, to wit:

"For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these having not the law are a law unto themselves, which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another." Rom II 14-15. Mr Watson comments upon this passage as follows: "If all know" [illegible] of right and wrong, and all possess the influences of the Holy Spirit, and all objects of faith, have passed away from the heathen, through the fault of their ancestors, not liking to retain God in their knowledge," and without the present race having been [illegible] this willful abandonment of truth, in they were [illegible] being [illegible] under law nor under grace. But as we find a doctrine of Scripture in all men so [illegible] to God, and that the whole world will be judged at the last day, we are bound to admit the accessibility of all, and with that, the means of law and the existence of a merciful government toward the heathen on the part of God. With this the doctrine of St Paul accords. No one can take strong views of the actual danger and corrupt state of the Gentiles than he, yet he admits that the Divine law had not perished wholly from among them, and though they had received no revealed law, yet by their conscience written on their hearts, meaning no doubt the traditionary law, the equity of which their conscience attested; and further, that though they had not the written law, yet that by nature they were capable of doing all the things contained in the law. He affirms, too, that such Gentiles as were thus obedient should be "justified in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to his Gospel." [illegible] Ins. Vol. II. pp. 145 146. I quoted thus lengthily for the twofold purpose, 1st. Because it is a fine setting forth of truth, and 2d. To give you a specimen of how Watson "promulgates." And so it seems that "the paper endorsed by the N C Conference" is not the only vehicle for "sentiments which you understand, opposed to God's word are promulgated." The truth is, Paul's doctrine fully [illegible] the text for all those great Arminian Divines who have demonstrated and established as a doctrine of the church, that God damns no man unconditionally, not because another fails to discharge his duty.

Let us again examine the argument. The following propositions, I think, are Scripturally and logically true: If the heathen are lost, they must be actual personal sinners. They can only be actual, personal sinners by disobeying law, in some way made known to them or rejecting the light given them. "Sin is the transgression of the law." 1 Jno. 3-4. "For where no law is, there is no transgression." Rom. IV—15. This accords with the character of God given us in the Bible. He will send no soul to perdition for not obeying a law which that soul never heard of. Therefore, if any of the heathen are lost, as we maintain some of them are, it must be because they disobey law, in some way made known to them: not a law issued in Jupiter or Neptune, of which they can know nothing, but a "law written on their hearts," or by what Mr. Watson calls the "gracious influence of the Holy Spirit." This is the principle that underlies universal Atonement.—This is the theme of the Methodist pulpit from Wesley to the present day, and this the burden of the prayer, and the inspiration of the song, that swells from Methodist altars to the glory of God. But let us draw out the logic a little further. If God has in some way given the heathen a law, or light sufficient to leave them without excuse, (as we have seen He must,) then this law must have been given by God for a purpose. That purpose [illegible] must have been, either to save [illegible] and some saved condemned, or does not, cause the church does. But because they obey or disobey the law reject on their hearts," and live by or. You the light given them by God. us further say that I "must be conscious that the subject of discussion is whether or not the heathen can be saved without the gospel." And I reply, that you must be conscious that the discussion necessarily involves the question as to whether the heathen can be lost without disobeying a law?

I make some effort to ridicule as intimate was my position as "other way" of salvation besides A little reflection would you that your sharpness to Paul in 2nd chap. position; for they are I fear other pelled to damage your good opinion of my intellect by re affirming with emphasis, that it has a great deal to do with it! and for this reason among others, your theory damages the whole train of argument by which the advocates of a Universal Atonement demonstrate that great truth of the Bible. Mr. Watson says: Those, indeed, if there be any such, who, believing in the universal redemption of mankind, should allow this—that is, that the heathen are all lost—would be most inconsistent with themselves, and give up many of those principles on which they successfully contend against the doctrine of absolute reprobation!" So it seems, my dear brother, that Mr Watson's intellect, though it be higher on the scale, is nevertheless in the same category with mine: but I can stand it, if he can! Moreover, are you not aware that your ground is pretty much that upon which all Calvinists stand, viz, the conclusion of "Calvinism has nothing to do with the question itself." "The conclusion with all its tremendous consequences must be accepted, if the premises drive you there." "I admit," says Calvin, "that the decree is horrible, but Scripture teaches it!" What! not stop appalled when premises lead to a conclusion that impugns the goodness of God, and invests with a demon like cruelty His eternal justice! "Whether it be Calvinism or not, has nothing to do with the question itself!" Indeed! why, reason and religion dictate that when we construct a sylogism upon any doctrine, and find that the conclusion is contrary to the known character of God, we should go back and rectify our premises, and humbly examine to see if our reasoning is not faulty. Kepler, before he loosened himself from the doctrine of epicycles, obtained some well ascertained facts from Tycho Brahe. His own doctrine could not be true and at the same time harmonize with those facts. Instead therefore of driving on upon his own premises, he took those well ascertained facts and rectified his reasoning. And behold, he found his premises faulty, and discovered just the opposite of what he held, that the planets revolved in elliptical orbits, which accorded with the facts, and all was clear. So we have the well-ascertained fact that God is both good and just. And it is a maxim of Arminian theology that no link in the chain of Calvinism can hold in the direction of this fact. Hence, when I fairly relegated your theory to the system of Calvinism, where you must leave it alone belongs, I was under the impression that, to the minds of Methodists and all Arminians, I had reduced your theory to an absurdity. And so I think still.

Again: You say that you "conceive it easy to show" that your doctrine, that the heathen are all lost who die before a preacher gets to them, is neither Calvinistic nor Arminian, "that like most other great truths of the gospel, held in common by both systems." Now, it seems to me that anything so important to your theory as that, so strange and so unique, and withal so "easy to be shown," ought to have secured a little effort on your part to show it! I await with curiosity.

And now, my dear brother, I come to the most strange paragraph in your criticism. The point is in my reply to the author of the "curse of blood," where I turn his proposition upon him, with the other face out, so as to show the "horrible decree" doctrine of damning the heathen unconditionally, or, what amounts to the same thing, because the church fails to send them a preacher. I will not do your heart "the injustice to suppose" that you quoted only so much of my argument as would subserve a weak cause: for it may be you are sincere when you sum up my argument thus: "The argument is that if they cannot be lost conditionally or unconditionally, they cannot be lost at all." And this the nonsense which grows out of such misrepresentation is, of course, attributable to me. Very well: if that subserves the cause of truth, let it go. I am content to leave the intelligent reader to judge if my argument was not this, to wit: The author of the "curse of blood" proposed that "the heathen must be saved either conditionally or unconditionally," and then argued to show that the condition was in the gospel, which the heathen could not get unless the church sent a preacher. I replied, substantially, that the loss as well as the salvation of a soul must be conditioned upon the same general principles. That "if the heathen are lost it must be conditionally or unconditionally." That if lost unconditionally, it was the "horrible decree" direct. But if they are lost conditionally, and the condition is lodged in a preached gospel, which depends upon the church sending it, and the church fails to do its duty, this amounted to the same "horrible decree" of injustice, viz: punishing A because B fails to do his duty. I say amounted to the same thing, for it is a principle of philosophy that no chain is stronger than its weakest link. But it is amazing how many minds are blinded to the fact that a link, by simply lengthening the chain, weakens it! My argument clearly showed that the heathen are lost conditionally, not because another fails to discharge his duty.

Let us again examine the argument. The following propositions, I think, are Scripturally and logically true: If the heathen are lost, they must be actual personal sinners. They can only be actual, personal sinners by disobeying law, in some way made known to them or rejecting the light given them. "Sin is the transgression of the law." 1 Jno. 3-4. "For where no law is, there is no transgression." Rom. IV—15. This accords with the character of God given us in the Bible. NOTES FROM THE FIELD

WHAT THE AMERICAN BOARD IS DOING.

Some days ago the Rev. J A. Lyons, Knoxville, Tenn, did me the favor to send me a copy of the Missionary Herald for December, 1828. By the same mail the Herald for January, 1875, came to hand. What a missionary history has been wrought out during these forty-seven years! The venerable ex. Secretary, Dr. Rufus Anderson, has done the cause a great service in the preparation of his admirable volumes narrating the work of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions." What trials and rewards, what trials and [illegible] were recorded! Dr. [illegible] Board in the Sandwich Islands is particularly interesting at this time. His two volumes on the "Missions of the Board to the Oriental Churches" are full of useful information. The last volume, setting forth the work of the Board in India, is as good as either of the others. These volumes will be found interesting and instructive. Those who wish to understand the spirit and plans of this oldest of American missionary organizations, should, by all means, procure Dr. Anderson's histories. Address, 'Charles Hutchins, Congregational House, No. 1 Somerset street, Boston, Mass.'

How the world has moved since this old number for December, 1828, was printed! We read, for instance: "Information has been received that the Parthian, which sailed from Boston on the 3d of November, 1827, having on board the missionaries deported to the Sandwich Islands, arrived in the port of Oahu on the 17th of April,' Now we get letters from China in less than a month's time, and the telegraph reports to us the arrival of a ship in Shanghi before the passengers can land their baggage. 'Would to God the powers of our modern civilization were consecrated to the work of saving the world!'

I did not intend, when I took up my pen, to moralize, but to condense from the official statement in the January number of the Herald, a brief account of the work now being done under the direction of the American Board. Under the care of the Board are 19 Missions, with 72 stations, and 496 out-stations. The Board employs 377 missionaries, 213 being women, 134 being men, including 5 ordained, and 8 medical physicians. In its various Missions the Board has under its direction, as native pastors, teachers, catechists, and "other helpers," 1,018 persons—in all, 1,395 laborers. The Board does a large educational work—"expending, as an educational society, in various ways, not less than $90,000 a year." There are 12 "training and theological schools," 21 "boarding schools for girls," 550 "common schools, and in the Missions schools 22,031 pupils. The receipts of the Board during its last year were nearly half a million—during its first year only $99952.

Secretary Clark makes the following very encouraging general statements: "Every year is adding to the efficiency of the native force. Pastors gaining experience and influence; many of them have become able expounders of the word, and show great practical wisdom in the care of their Churches, and generally in the conduct of ecclesiastical affairs: nearly half of them are supported by their own people, and the remainder partially so. The statistics show 27 more Churches, over 1,000 added to the roll of membership on profession of faith, and that the gospel has been regularly preached the past year, through the agency of the American Board, in 21 different languages, in 568 different towns, cities, and islands, in various portions of the globe. The influence thus exerted in leavening the thoughts and sentiments of multitudes, and in preparing for the final triumphs of the gospel, no figures can measure."

Where are the Mission-fields of the American Board? Let the reader take the best Geography and the best map he can find, and study the following "outline lesson": The Zulu Mission, in South-eastern Africa, near Port Natal, was established in 1835. This Mission contains the following stations: Umzumli, Umsumduzi, Inanda, and several others with unpronounceable names. The European Turkey Mission, established in 1858, has 4 stations: Constantinople, Eski Zagra, Somokov, and Momastic. The Western Turkey Mission, established in 1836, has 4 stations: Coustantinople, Marissa, Brousa, Nicomedia, Marsovan, Cesarea, Sivas. The Central Turkey Mission (around the north-east corner of the Mediterranean), established in 1847, has 2 stations: Aintab and Marash. The Eastern Turkey Mission, established in 1836, at Trebizond, has 5 stations: Bittis, Erzroom, Harpoot, Mardin, Van. The Mahratta Mission is one of the oldest, being established in 1813. It is in Western India, with the following stations: Bombay, Ahmednugger, Satara, Bhuinj, Sholapoor. The Madura Mission, in Southern India, established in 1834, has 11 stations: Madura, Dindigul, Tirumangalam, Tirupuvanam, Mandapasalai, Melur, Periakulam, Baltalagundu, Mana Madura, Pulney, Pasumalai. The Ceylon Mission, established in 1816, is in the District of Jaffna, North Ceylon. It has 7 stations: Battiootta, Ponditeripo, Tillipally, Oodooville, Manepy, Charagacherry, Oodoopitty The Foochow Mission, South-eastern China, established in 1847, has 2 stations: Foochow, Nantai. The North China Mission, beginning at Shanghai in 1854, and at Tientsin in 1850, has 6 stations: Tientsin, Peking, Kalgou, Tunch-Cho, Yncho, Paotingfu. The Mission to Japan, begun in 1869, has 2 stations: Kobe, Osaka. Of this Mission Dr. Clark says: "The year has been one of cheering p[illegible] this field; 2 Churches [illegible] these I at each station [illegible] the gospel members, and more [illegible]. The brethren feel that "the country is ripe for the gospel whenever government restrictions shall be fully removed. Mr. Greene has removed to Yokohama, to labor with others upon the translation of the Scriptures. Another reenforcement sailed from San Francisco, Oct. 31—Messrs De Forrest and Adams, with their wives; also, Mr. Neesima, a native of Japan, educated in this country, who went with them, to give himself to Christian work for the present, in connection with the Mission." The Micronesia Mission, established in 1852, has 3 stations: Gilbert Islands, Marshall Islands, Caroline Islands. In the two first [illegible] are a number of missionaries sent out and sustained by the Hawaiian Missionary Society The Dakota Mission, established in 1837, has 1 station, Kamchaska Station Secretary [illegible] will [illegible] Fort Snelly. The Oregon Mission, "resumed in 1872" has 1 station: Green Hill, 20 miles from Fort Smith. The Mission to Spain, begun in 1872, has 1 station: Santander. The Board has withdrawn from its Mission to Italy. The Mission to the Austrian Empire, begun in 1872, has 3 stations: Prague, in Bohemia; Brunn, in Moravia; Innsbruck, in the Tyrol. The Mission to Northern Mexico, begun in 1873, has 1 station: Monterey. The Mission to Western Mexico has 1 station: Guadalajara. Concerning this work in Guadalajara, the Secretary says: "All readers of the Herald are aware that the work of this Mission seemed full of promise in the early months of 1874; and that the assassination of Mr Stephens on the 2d of March, and the fear excited by that event, and by the continued bitter hostility of priests, and these fully under their influence, have given a sad check to the open manifestations of interest in the truth Still, however, in the midst of fears and real dangers, there are so many who do show deep interest, that the brethren are much cheered while much hampered in their efforts. Mr. Morgon joined Mr. Watkins in June, to take the place of his murdered class-mate and friend, and Mr. Edwards, of Wales, is expected to be upon the ground at an early day. A Church has been organized, with 17 members, at Guadalajara, and quite a number of persons at Abualco, where Mr Stephens fell, are anxious to join the organization."

The American Board is doing a great work. May the Great Head of the Church grant his guidance and blessing forever! A. G. H.

Messrs Editors:—In obedience to the "disposing powers" Heft Tarboro, the region of sand and whispering pines, to take up my abode, "for one year," among the hills of Chatham. I took the land route, while my wife and "children" the iron rails. They were about as long on the road from Tarboro to Pittsboro as they would have been in going to Denver City, so leaving out expenses we have been moved three thousand miles (in matter of time), in the worst weather that ever comes in this latitude. What is to be gained by holding Conference, the time ours comes on I never could see, unless it be to add to the hardships of the preachees and their family. We are either smarter or else slower than any other people in the world A veteran member of our Conference was asked some time since if he knew where Pittsboro was. Yes, he replied, but I cannot tell you how to get there. If he ever tries, as I did, to find the way, he will know the way ever after wards.

I had plenty of time to muse on the many changes, shadows and lights of an itinerant preacher's life, while on my trip to my new field of labor, saw many things to interest and instruct the mind. The hoarse murmur of the long leaf pine was my constant attendant for sixty miles. What wild notes were sent forth from these "sorrowing sisters" making the heart shiver "as if a funeral train were sweeping past." Then came the hills, gray with brave old oaks while ever and anon, the great boulder of granite lie sleeping in the sunlight, they made me think that the Titans fought through and over these hills and that these huge stones were hurled about in the wild fury of their battles. Passing these, Raleigh, "the City of Oaks" comes to view. It seems to be making rapid strides towards the dignity of a first class City. From the way her merchants stand around cotton bales, they are evidently on the thriving line; some of them are so thrifty, they have out-grown the Capitol, and Tucker Hall looks quite insignificant. Well it is good for men to get up higher; "they breathe a purer atmosphere." Hope you may grow as much as any of them and you (the senior) have grown since we were first [illegible] Leaving Raleigh I soon reached Cary, a flourishing Village, close to the shadow of a city. The Page Bro's. manufacture things there and seem to be driving a good business.—This is a place for cheap and good [illegible], surely. From Cary my route soon brought me in contact with mud, round, square and jagged rocks, my light framed buggy, built for the lower (not infernal) regions quivered in the encounter, but stood the trial, and Sam (my veteran itinerant horse) carried me over all these in safety and landed me at the Metropolis of Chatham. This was once a flourishing place, the war and its calamities, the stringency in monetary matters, together with the great tendency, to rail roads has made sad havoc with this once flourishing town. There are however still signs of life and good polished society. It needs the snorting of the "iron horse" to wake up the sluggish veins of life. We are now domiciled at the parsonage and the brethren and sisters, and especially the latter, seem very much disposed to make as feel at home. God bless the good women, who are the truest helpers we have in this great work of saving souls and building up the church. The [illegible] charge, [illegible] appointments I [illegible] to victory. If we all do our [illegible] shall work wonders in this land. Trust your paper will be a valuable auxilary and do much service in the opening campaign; "Fling your banner to the breze."

This is a wild romantic region, not as high up in the world, as the Piedmont regions, in Virginia and Western Carolina, but as rugged as anything I have met with in my travels. While nature's master-workman was adjusting things in this locality, there was evidently a hand of Chaos and discord busy too, putting things out of joint and marring anything like harmony of conception Some Amateur Scientist has said that "the Garden of Eden was located in this country and that the Primitive Pair began their career in Chatham." From some fossil remains, found here, it is [illegible] they were not devoured [illegible] suppose I suppose a special [illegible] interfered in their behalf. Ancient Devotion

It was the custom among the young men of Athens, who listened to the teaching of Socrates, to bring some gift in gratitude for his instruction. Gold and silver, and jewels worthy of the rank and wealth of the donor, were common gifts.

One morning, after the gifts had been presented, a youth too poor to make an offering cast himself at the feet of his teacher, while a blush over spread his manly face as he cried: "O Socrates, I give myself to thee." There was a murmur of applause, showing that the whole hearted, wholly-self gift was appreciated.

Shall we not, in like manner, give ourselves wholly to Christ—all that we have, and all that we are, to spend in his service—not only the love of our hearts, but the labors of our hands, and all we possess?

The apostle Paul says: 'And ye are not your own. For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and your spirit, which are God's.' If we have not thus fully and freely consecrated ourselves, let us follow the example of the Athenian youth, and, casting ourselves at the feet of the Great Teacher, cry: 'O Christ, I give myself to thee.'—Central Presbyterian.

Don't You Like Anybody?

Silence is a very good thing under certain circumstances and in certain places; but there is one sort that produces as much discomfort in a house as the spirit of angry contention. It is the silence of sullenness. Jenny Ross had this sort of silence in a wonderful degree. She was a young lady of fifteen, and might have been a great help and comfort to her mother if she had only been more pleasant in her disposition A person may be sad and depressed in spirits from illness or trouble, but sullenness and crossness have no apology. This state of mind had become so habitual with Jenny, that all the household came to look for it. O, how depressing it was to them all!

A little cousin, visiting in the house, caught the influence the first day he was there, though he was but three years old. Standing by her side as she sat sullenly sewing, he asked, innocently, 'Don't you like anybody, Cousin Jenny?' No wonder the poor little fellow arrived at this conclusion. Her sister Lucy a gentle, affectionate girl, had suffered most from Jenny's unpleasant ways. It was so depressing to her heart to receive only a short 'yes' or 'no' in answer to her questions, and to have all her efforts to please her sister turned from with coldness, and very likely construed into offences. It always [illegible] a chill over any little company [illegible] Jenny, enter the room in 'one of her spells,' as the young folks used to call them. The disposition grows with her years, and what will she be [illegible] if she is so disagreeable at [illegible] age?—Presbyterian.

A Word to the Boys.—Boys, did you ever think that this world, with all its wealth and woe, with its mines and mountains, oceans, seas, and rivers, with all its steamboats, railroads, and magnetic telegraphs, with its millions of groping men and all the science and progress of ages, will soon be given over to the boys of the present age: boys like you? Believe it, and look abroad upon your inheritance, and get ready to to enter upon its possession. The presidents, kings, governors, statesmen, philosophers, ministers, teachers, men of the future are boys now.

Knowest thou not this of old, since man was placed upon earth—that the triumphing of the [illegible] is short, and [illegible] the hypocrite but for a mo[illegible]

Close Questions.

"Your tempers. How are they? Do you become impatient under trial; fretful when chided or crossed; angry, revengeful, when injured; vain when flattered; proud when prospered; complaining when chastened; unbelieving when seemingly forsaken; unkind when neglected? Are you subject to discontent, to ambition, to selfishness? Are you worldly? Covetous of riches, of vain pomp and parade, of indulgence, of honor or ease? Are you unfeeling, contemptuous of others, seeking your own, boasters, proud, lovers of your own selves? Beware! These are the sediments of the old nature! Nay, if they exist in you, in however small a degree, they are demonstrative that the old man of sin is not dead. It will be a sad mistake if you detect these evils within and yet [illegible] make professions of holiness. These are not infirmities: they are indications of want of grace."—Bishop Foster.

Scientific.

Dr. Hilgendorf, a German, now in Japan, has found, in his studies of Japanese crania, that the cheek bones instead of being a single structure, is frequently divided by a suture into two distinct elements. Dr. Hilgendorf considers this so characteristic that he has called the additional bone the o japonicum.

Dr. D. Brauns, of Halle, has contributed to Giebel's Zeitschrift a paper "On the Measurement of Temperatures at Great Depths, with Special Reference to Observations Made in the Sperenberg Boring." This bore-hole has reached the exceptional depth of four thousand Rhenish feet. The author discusses the bearing of these observations upon theoretical questions respecting the interior of the earth.

The French astronomer Janssen has invented an ingenious apparatus for ascertaining the precise instant of contact of the planet Venius with the limb of the sun at the transit on December 10. A movable disk, having toward its circumference equi-distent round openings, turns before a second disk covered with sensitive paper. By means of clock work the front disk is made to move every second over a distant equal to the diameter of one of its openings. Hence every second there is a new plate exposed, and a new picture taken. By examining each picture it is possible to determine exactly the time of contact.

Singular Substitute for the Compass.—The Great Dismal Swamp is partly in North Carolina, partly in Virginia. It is forty miles long and fifteen to twenty miles wide. Prof. Webster, at the late meeting of the American Association, told the story of a party that divided in the swamp, a portion of the party having no compass. The latter portion of the party was lost, and after long wandering found their way out by a singular expedient. They made use of the insect for which fine-tooth combs were invented. Putting the insect on a flat piece of wood, and leaving it to its own devices, it invariably began to move in a certain direction. This direction was followed out by the party, and they were thus led out to the northward. It is supposed that this instinctive movement of the insect is due to its seeking the way toward the greatest light.

The First Gas Light.—Prof. Silliman has discovered, in a "Journal of Travels in England, Holand and Scotland," in 1805, published by his distinguished father, a memorandum of what is probably the first public use of street gas in London. Hitherto the date of the first public exhibition in that city has been put in 1807, when Mr. Winsor lighted Pall Mall. But on the fourth [of July, 1805, the elder Silliman stopped in Piccadilly to see "an object of some curiosity," which he describes as follows: "An ingenious apothecary and chemist has contrived to light his shop in a very beautiful manner, by means of the inflammable gas obtained from fossil coal. It is the same thing with the thermo-lamp, of which you have heard much in America. Every new thing by which money can be made is, of course, kept secret in London, as well as everywhere else. I took the liberty, however, of asking the owner of the shop to permit me to see his apparatus. He refused At first, but on my assuring him I was not a commercial or tradnig man, and was actuated solely by curiosity, he consented, and took me down into the cellar,"—The Galaxy.

Persons in ordering their paper changed will be careful to state the office from and to which they wish the change made.

Prof. Trawick, in charge of Shelby Seminary, writes us that the spring session of his school is opening quite favorably.

Remember, that the Christian Advocate is $2.20, postage prepaid at this office. It is the cheapest paper published in the Southern Methodist Church.

Dr. Closs sends article No. 2 in reply to Bro. Yates on the relation of the heathen to the church, which will appear in our next. It has been on hand for a week or more, but could not appear in this issue for want of room.

Sad Accident.—We are pained to learn that, on the 16th of January, Rev. W. H. Cunninggim met with an accident in which one of his legs and the ankle of his other leg were broken We tender our sincere sympathies to him and his family.

It will save us very great trouble and prevent errors on our books, if persons sending subscriptions to the Advocate will be careful to write names distinctly. post office, county and State. This is sometimes neglected by persons in ordering the paper.

During the last week two members of Edenton St. Methodist church passed from their sufferings on earth to their reward in Heaven Bryant B. Harris died on the 27th. from the effects of a fall which he had two months ago. Mrs. Mildred J. Lee, after years of patient suffering, died on last Friday.

We have received a postal card ordering the Advocate sent, for one year, to Mrs. [illegible] S. Norton. The writer sends no money and fails to sign the name. [illegible] we cannot send the paper [illegible] know who ordered it. Will the writer be kind enough to give [illegible]?

The discussion on "the curse of blood" is widening to an extent not anticipated at first. We trust it will result in good and lead our readers to a Scriptural understanding of this great question. Brethren must pardon us, however, for suggesting that the articles are too long for the general reader and leaves but little room for other matter. We must ask of them to condense and abreviate as much as possible.

We have received from Rev. B. F. Long an appropriate notice of the death of Sister Hoyle, wife of Rev. S. V. Hoyle of our Conference. She died in great peace at the Methodist parsonage in Warrenton on Thursday the 21st ult The notice will appear in our next issue. We extend to Bro. Hoyle our heartfelt sympathy in this his hour of sad bereavment.

The junior editor of this paper, Robt. T. Gray, Esq., was happily married to Miss Caro Lilley of Fayetteville, N. C., on Wednesday evening of the 27th ult. The happy couple passed through Raleigh on Thursday morning on a Northern tour, to be absent several weeks. We, in common with our readers, extend to the junior and his beautiful bride our hearty congratulations. May their live be precious in the sight of God, and may long life and great prosperity and happiness attend them.

Minutes of the Virginia Conference.—We are indebted to the Editor, Rev. P. A. Peterson, for a copy of the minutes of the eightieth session of the Virginia Conference. Price, 25 cents per copy. As usual, they are gotten up in the very best style, and contain, in addition to the Conference proceedings, very much valuable statistical information. But what is better still, they contain the able and eloquent sermon preached by Bishop Marvin before the Virginia Conference at its late session. Subject, "the law and [illegible] The sermon itself is worth [illegible] more than the cost of the pamphlet. Address Rev. P. A. Peterson, Norfolk, Va.

As a very large proportion of our readers will not be able to procure a copy of the minutes, we propose at an early date to publish the Bishop's sermon in the Advocate, so as to give all an opportunity of reading it and of profiting by the gospel truths which it so ably and earnestly enforces.

We are requested to say that the post office address of Rev. James Mahoney is New Port, N. C.

HOW SHALL WE KNOW THEM?

There is recognized in the sacred Scriptures a clear, definite and marked distinction between the believer and the unbeliever, but many totally ignore the teachings of the Bible upon this subject. Some have gone so far as to assail the authenticity and inspiration of the holy Scriptures—denied the Divinity of Christ—the reality of an experimental change of heart, the being born again, the power of the holy Ghost to change, and the doctrine of an instantaneous conversion has been derided as quixotic and visionary. But all their efforts to overturn the authority of God's word have been in vain. The testimony of the Bible still stands attested and unequivocal that God does thus work in the hearts of the children of men. To the regenerate man there is no difficulty at this point. He knows there is a radical difference between what he is now and what he was once. It may not so much affect his outward life, but it is deep and thorough in the soul and clearly defined in the sight of God.

It is true that men do not like to have the line of demarcation distinctly drawn between righteousness and sin. They know that if God is strict to mark iniquity in [illegible] according to the state of the heart, their chances for heaven are very small indeed. In their reflective moments they realize their unfitness for the dwelling place of the holy.—But somehow they imagine or suppose that God is going to pass it all by, and reward them for their selfishness and disobedience by taking them to heaven at last.

The word of God clearly teaches the doctrine of repentance and faith. This doctrine is urged and enforced by Christ. He entreats all to receive him by faith, with the promise that there shall come an instant inward quickening, and a revelation of Christ himself to the soul. In conformity with this is the experience of many.—They declare to us, that all burdened with sin, and conscious of their need, they humbled themselves before Jesus and poured out the soul in prayer, asking for forgiveness and the revelation of Christ's nearness and preciousness. He answered their cry, and there came into the soul the influence of a divine presence, breathing sweet peace, and the burden was gone. Men may scoff at such an experience, but it is real. It cannot be set aside. A blind man may deny that there are flowers in the field in summer time; but he who walks among them in the gardens and the meadows, beholding their beauty and inhaling their fragrance, could not for a moment doubt their existence or be convinced that their perfume was the "sweetness of the grasses." So a man may deny that there is such a thing as an instantaneous change in the soul in conversion, but if he has never felt it—has no experimental knowledge of it in his own soul, he knows nothing about it. It only comes through faith in Christ—he has not believed—is ignorant of it, and that ignorance defines his state. Here then lies the distinction between the believer and the unbeliever—knowing and not knowing—believing and not believing. This is the line Christ has drawn, and by which the soul's destiny for eternity will be decided. It is important for every one to see, to feel, and to acknowledge this distinction. Many are inclined to deny it altogether. Others obscure it by the improper use of terms, and by false reasoning and sophistry. They pervert the plain import of Scripture to build up doctrines more congenial to their pride and morality. But such caviling does not affect in the least the great truth of the gospel that God ever makes a clear distinction between the righteous and the wicked. and he will put every one on the one side or the other in the final day.—The lives of many Christians also tend to obscure this line of difference between those who serve God and those who serve him not. It is very much to be regreted that the Christianity of the present day has so lost its distinctive character. The holiness of Christian lives, the exalted consistency of their character and their devout faith in God, were once a living sermon burning deep into the consciences of men. But to many the fervency of this early love has been lost, and the business of this world has blotted out many of the distinctions that used to be discerned between those who lived for Christ and those who rejected him. Many are ready to assert that the difference between the church and the world is a mere question of names and creeds, and is not a distinctive principle, which has been ordained of God, and which bears directly on the eternal future. But after all, in all these things, the foundation of God's revealed truth stands sure and steadfast, having this seal, "The Lord knoweth them that are his," and "by their fruits ye shall know them."

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation from the Principal of the Raleigh Female Seminary to attend the Semi-Annual Concert given by the young ladies of that institution on the evening of the 28th of January. We regret that our engagements prevented us from being present.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate is the adopted organ of the N. C. Conference, and every Methodist in the State ought to subscribe for it and use all available means to give it a still more extended circulation. Terms $2.20 per annum postage prepaid at this office.

MINISTERIAL SU[illegible]

The question of ministerial support is one of paramount importance to the church. The taking proper care of the minister is closely allied to the success and prosperity of the church in his pastoral charge. No pastor can do the full work of a faithful evangelical servant of God when he is struggling under the depressing effects of financial embarrassment. His mind must be at ease on this whole question in order that he may accomplish the greatest good for the church. The gospel is the greatest blessing any country can enjoy, and yet if it is to be estimated in proportion to what is annually contributed for its support, in comparison with other and even useless' expenditures, it would appear that it is held by the people of this boasted enlightened age, in low esteem.

An able article in the Southern Presbyterian Review, on "The Law of the Tithe and of the Free-Will Offering," says:

"The government statistics for 1871 may well cause every honorable man to hang his head with shame, and may well fill every patriot's heart with alarm. They are as follows. Let us ponder them well, as citizens of this country:

Salaries of all Ministers of the Gospel,	$ 6,000,000
Cost of Dogs,	10,000,000
Support of Criminals,	12,000,000
Fees of Litigation,	35,000,000
Cost of Tobacco and Cigars,	610,000,000
Importation of Liquors,	50,000,000
Support of Grog Shops,	1,000,000,000
Whole Cost of Liquors,	2,200,000,000

And these are the facts in this enlightened nineteenth century and in these United States! One might infer from them that we are fast becoming, if not already, a nation of drunkards. And then consider this country's estimate of the Gospel ministry, the ministry of all denominations costing a sum less by millions than the very dogs of the land!"

Let every Methodist in North Carolina ponder well the above figures.—Our intelligent laity do not talk and write enough upon this subject.

More of Bro. Betts and the Children.—Bro Betts has excited very great interest among the children by the question propounded to them in a former issue of this paper. Since our last we have received a number of sweet little letters from them, all giving the 43d chap. of Ezekiel, 11th verse, which is a correct answer to the question. We would like to publish them all, but to do so would occupy very much of our space, to the excision of other matter. The following are the names of the dear little girls and boys who have responded, in addition to those which were given last week: Rosa Lee Jordan, Ida Bell Pennix, Celia Duncan, Willie H. Nelson, Robt Lee Burkhead, Alice Pell, A. L. King, Robt. W. Bailey, E. E. Jurney, Rachel E. Claytor, Lula H. Jenkins, Amanda J. Shepherd, James M. Durham, Sidney Bell Goode, Ella Sawyer, Julian Gibson, Lilla A. Wade, Willie G. Daily, Mamie B. Fleming, N. S. McGinn, Bettie Farrow.

FOR THE LITTLE PEOPLE AND A. D. B.

Master E. E. Jurney gives the verse which contains "thereof 9 times," and adds:

"I propose to the young readers of the Advocate, like myself, to find the only verse in the Bible that has in it the word "Eternity," and when it is found and the answer given in the Advocate, I propose to give them another."

Ida Bell Pennix answers "A. D. B.'s" question and writes: "Now, will A. D. B. please tell me in the Advocate where to find these words—'And he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one,' and tell me what is the meaning of it—what was the object of buying the sword, or what was to be done with it? As I am just as many years old as thereof is used in the verse, and don't understand what is meant by selling the garment and buying the sword, I hope A. D. B. will find it, and explain it in the Advocate for me."

Personal.

Rev. T. A. Boon has been spending a few days in Raleigh. He preached at Edenton Street Methodist Church on Sabbath evening last. His discourse was an earnest and practical presentation of the plain pointed teachings of God's word.

—We were pleased to welcome into our office the past week, Rev. I. W. Avent. He is in charge of Cumberland circuit, and represents the church as being in a healthy condition.

—We had the pleasure of a call the past week from Rev. Dr. Wilson, Presiding Elder of Greensboro District. We are glad to know that his health, which has been feeble for several weeks past, is improving. He informs us that the spring session of Greensboro Female College has opened well and the prospect for an increase of pupils is encouraging.

—Rev. J. A. Cunninggim, agent for Greensboro Female College, passed through the city last week en route for Franklinton. He made us a short visit and we had a hurried talk about the College and its interests. He is fully enlisted in the work of his agency, and is meeting with good success. We have no doubt but that the preachers and our people generally will aid him in his work. The cause he represents commends itself to the whole church.

Will the friends of Greensboro [illegible] male College consider prayerfully the following facts and suggestions?

Every one seems to rejoice that the College has been re-built and has entered again upon her grand mission. Thus far the burden has rested upon a few noble men, whose spirit of sacrifice should call forth the gratitude and hearty co-operation of the whole church.

The indebtedness has not increased during the past year, as the receipts from the agency and College operations have more than paid expenses and balanced against the interest on the borrowed money. Now as the financial conditon of the State is growing better we can and must pay the principal. We believe that God has a grand purpose to accomplish through this agency of his church, and that his providence and grace will secure its freedom from debt. As a practical question, none need doubt the ability of the church to secure this end. Consider the following estimate:

200	50	"	10,000
400	25	"	10,000
1000	10	"	10,000
2000	5	"	10,000
10000	1	"	10,000
Making			$76,000

Thus thirteen thousand and seven hundred persons can pay the whole debt and no one be seriously burdened. And we have confience in the willingness, as well as the ability, of the church to come to the rescue.

We would appeal especially,

1st. To the preachers of the North Carolina Conference. You, my brethren, are to be the beneficiaries. In laboring to raise this amount you are working for your own families and those of your co-laborers. When the Conference shall have secured the above amount, $3,000 will be given annually in board and tuition to the preachers' daughters. With this incentive, and the great good the College will secure to humanity, we expect your hearty co-operation,

2nd. To the former pupils of the College.—What has the College done for you, intellectually, socially and spiritually? And through you what a blessing it has been to the whole church—exerting an elevating influence upon those around you? Will you not manifest your gratitude and appreciation by earnest, practical effort in raising funds and increasing the patronage of the College? Plead as woman alone can plead. that this burden may be removed from your beloved Alma Mater. We believe you will. We confide in you.

We propose to keep a record of the names of all the donors and the amounts, that future generations may know to whom they are indebted for such large blessings.

Send all amounts to.

J. A. Cunninggim,
Greensboro, N. C.

Rev. A. G. Brown, Secretary of Randolph Macon College, writes to the Baltimore Methodist of a liberal donation made to that Institution. Mr. Pace belongs to a family in Virginia noted for the energy, enterprise and liberality of its members. He is closly related to the Pace Brothers (Edward and Robert) of Danville, Va. whose go-aheadativeness and generosity are well known to all who have ever visited Danville, or the Northwestern section of this State. The letter says:

"You will be pleased to hear that since your editorial was writen, we have received the largest donation ever made to Randolph Macon by any one person, at one time, in all the years of her long and honorable history. It is a donation of $10,000, with the promise of $5,000 more on certain conditions, from our esteemed friend and brother, James B. Pace. of Richmond, Va. Bro. Pace, though comparatively a young man, is one of the most enterprising and prosperous business men in all the South, and he has donated this amount to the cause of Christian Education from a sincere desire to use his growing wealth to the glory of God and the good of his fellow men. The son of our venerable brother in Christ, Green T. Pace, of Danville, Va., who has recently erected in that prosperous town (mainly at his own expense) the handsome Church and Parsonage on Lynn street, we cannot be surprised that he should exhibit a similar spirit of noble Christian beneficence.—May the divine blessing descend upon son and sire, now and evermore!"

The Southern Christian Advocate says Bishop Pierce and Dr. Lovick Pierce spent Sunday the 17th inst, in Macon. The Bishop occupied the pulpit of First Street Church, morning and night; and his venerable father, preached at Mulberry Street in the morning, and at the College at night. The day was unfavorable, and the congregations though good were by no means so large as they would otherwise have been. We heard the Doctor with great pleasure while for nearly an hour he presented a clear and forcible exposition of part of the 14th of Romans. On Monday night he suffered a severe attack of his troublesome asthmatic ailment, which however yielded promptly to remedies, and he was able to return, Tuesday morning, to his Sunshine home. The Bishop is in fine health, and though his spirits sink a little under the embarrassment to his work of the long season of bad weather, he is cheerful in the hope of brighter days to be crowded with [illegible] readers [illegible] he promises [illegible] letters which always [illegible] give such [illegible]

The True Home.

As a means of happiness the real, true home has no equal. Nowhere else can there be found the content, the peace, the solid and enduring joy that spring in continual streams of freshness and purity over that family whose members are bound together in the ties of affection. The interest of each becomes near to the hearts of others, every joy is brightened by communicating it, every sorrow is soothed by the sympathy it receives. This happiness is not confined to the family alone, but spreads like a magnetic influence. The cheerful feeling of the inmates is diffused over all who come in contact with them, and the warm rays of affection that animates them shed a reviving influence upon many a weary and lovely heart.

To the many such homes to which the Advocate pays its weekly visits, let us wish peace and prosperity, and above [illegible] that every home in to which it finds its way may be made such by its refined tone and influence.

Around the influences of homes like these memory loves to linger. How often when gazing at the multitude of some crowded and busy street has the memory of my mother in a far off home, stolen gently into my heart and filled my eyes with tears. To how many has the memory of a father's hopes and a mother's love been the rock which has supported them through innumerable difficulties? How many can look back to the home of their youth as the starting point from which they have pursued, with integrity, a life of usefulness and honor? How many have been rescued from sin and sorrow by the ever welcoming arms of home once forsaken, but now prized as the only refuge of the wanderer? Let nothing then tempt us for a moment to depreciate or spurn this most momentous influence. Let no rude touch render less sacred the homes of our youth or the firesides of riper years. Let us rather bend all our efforts to cherish, purify and build up true homes.

Mr. Editor: Will you please announce that the Mount Pleasant circuit, Charlotte District, was assessed $10 for expenses of Delegates to our late General Conference; and paid $12 for which I have a receipt from Rev. Dr. Craven. The fact was stated to Rev. Dr Wilson, and reiterated to Rev. Dr. Craven at the late session of our Conference, but is omitted from the report as published in your paper of the 23rd ultimo.

Yours truly,

J. P. Simpson.

Snow Hill, N. C., Jan. 1875.

Will the Board of Missions and the Board of Finance let us know the amounts to be raised the present year for Missions, Bishops and Conference Fund?

The District Stewards are now holding their annual meetings. They are to distribute the amounts among the various pastoral charges, but can not do their work unless they are furnished with the amounts expected from each District. Please brethren let us have the amount or some confusion may follow.

Carthage, N. C. S. D. Adams.
January 28, 1875.

To the Preachers and Lay Members of the N. C. Conference—My Dear Brethren: I appeal to you, for you are all interested. I am on the Onslow circuit this year by the appointment of the Bishop,—am out of house and home; and hence I have commenced to build a small one, but though small it will be convenient and comfortable, and not expensive, for we expect to do the most of the work ourselves, but shall need some money to finish off the work. I give some facts in the case which will be a good reason why I appeal to you for help. 1st. I find the most of the brethren on this circuit are poor men, but seem to be pious, and have a disposition to work. 2nd. Their pastor is without a home. and it is a hard matter for him to find a suitable one in a suitable place. 3d. Two of the most wealthy appointments, viz, Bethsaid and Haw Branch, have been detached from the circuit and added to the Kenansville circuit. 4th. We do not expect to build an expensive house, hence our requests will be small, and will be extremely obliged to any one for, even, a small favor, for any amount from 5 dollars to 50 cents.

Now, brethren, send me a small donation, and direct your letters to W. C. Gannon, Newberne, N. C., who is our agent, or to me at Swansboro, N. C., or to my Presiding Elder, Bro. Black, of the Wilmington District.—Brethren, you help me, and when you begin to build, I will help you. "God loveth a cheerful giver."

L. W. Pigott.

Swansboro, N. C., Jan 27th, 1875.

Bishop Keener, says the Baltimore Methodist, organized the Southern German Mission Conference for Texas and Louisiana in Houston, Texas, a short time since. Two were admitted on trial, and the young Conference surpassed its American sister in its missionary collection. The new Conference numbers fifteen, all of whom voted for the proposed rule on temperance.

Religious Brevities

Rev. R. N. Sledd, of the Virginia Conference, is lying quite sick at his residence in Petersburg.

The first sermon by a Methodist resident missionary (Rev. G. M. Peirce) in Salt Lake City was delivered, May 17, 1870. Now there are three Methodist centers in the city The central Church, Rev. C. C. Stratton, pastor, has a membership of one hundred and twelve and a Sabbath school numbering two hundred and fifty.

The Wesleyan Methodist Commercial Record and Year-Book gives the number of Methodist members through out the world at 3,692,768, those on trial not included, nor the large number of hearers, Sunday school scholars and communicants, who are not members. The number of ministers is given at 23,514.

Archbishop Alemany, of San Francisco, can boast of what is perhaps the largest wedding fee ever received by a clergyman in this country, Mr Sharon, the wealthy mine owner of that city, having given him a check for $5,000 at the conclusion of the recent marriage ceremony of his daughter.

The Indian Evangelical Review, after collecting statistics, says the actual number of converts made from the heathen in India, during 1873, is about 6,000, not including Burmah and Ceylon. The average increase during the eleven years, ending with 1861, was 983 annually, and during the next ten years, 2,784 annually.

The Secretary of War has sent a communication to Congress in relation to the claim of the Roman Cathohe mission of St. James to the whole military reservation of Fort Vancouver, which is valued at one million dollars. The claim is based on an act of Congress of 1848, and has been before the War Department for many years. The department resist the claim on the ground that this religions establishment is not a mission according to the act of 1848. The Secretary suggests that the matter be submitted to a court and jury for determination.

The National Baptist states the statistics of the Baptist Church in Philadelphia to be as follows: Number of churches, 51; number of mission chapels and stations, 13; total membership, 16,507; number of Sunday schools, 64, with 1,497 teachers, and 16,395 scholars. The money raised during the present year for religious purposes amounted to $403,-556.

The French pilgrimage to the tomb of Saint Martin of Tours, which Mgr. Frenchland, the Archbishop of Tours, was arranging at the time of his death, commenced November 10, and continued eight days. Fifty thousand pilgrims are stated to have visited Tours. The Archbishops of Paris and Bourges, and a number of bishops, took part in the religions ceremonies.

Rev George D. Gillespie, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, has been elected Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Weslin, and Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter, of Grace church, New York, having been elected to the bishopric of Iowa, and telegraphed his declinature of the office, Rev. Dr. Huntington, of Worcester, Massachusetts, was chosen.

American Methodism began in New York 108 years ago with five members under Philip Embury. There are now, in round numbers, 3,200,000 Methodist in the United States and Canada: 700,000 added to the above figures will give the number of Methodist communicants throughout the world, 3,900,000. The Christian Guardian, the organ of the Methodist Church in Canada, asks: "Would not a Pan-Methodist Conference, composed of representatives from all the branches of the great Methodist families throughout Christendom, be a grand yet perfectly feasible object? It could meet at London or New York and would doubtless draw still closer together, and possibly, in cases territorial contiguity, lead to the organic union of some of these now separate bodies.

Centenary church, Chicago, is crowded, and some one suggests that 1 300 members are too many for any one man to look after and care for.

A Church Burnt.—Siloam Church, on Surry circuit, was destroyed by fire last week. When the accident occured the church was being used as a school house. This is another evidence against using the house of God for any other purpose than divine worship. Siloam was sacred to me. Within its sacred walls I first connected myself with the Methodist church. My sainted mother—grandmother,—grandfather, and a host of departed loved ones, worshiped in this church. I hope another will be built over its sacred ashes.

East Baltimore Station.—The Baltimore Methodist says: We are glad to announce a delightful work of grace which has been in progress for some weeks on Fell's Point. Our valued friend, endeared by the fondest recollections of many long years, Rev Geo. Hildt, has been laboring in this revival with all the vigor of youth. About 150 conversions are the result thus far.—This famous old station was our first field of labor in Balt[illegible] more. Precious memories cluster around it. We preached on Sunday night at the Broadway church, now a separate and important charge—an offshoot of East Baltimore—of which the Rev. Robert N Baer is pastor.

Bishop Marvin.—The Nashville Advocate says:—"Bishop Marvin left St. Lonis on Friday night, in time, as was thought, to reach Nashville on Saturday; but a driving wheel of the locomotive broke, and he did not reach Louisville in time for the connection. But it is an ill-wind that blows no good; so the Bishop preached in Chesnut street church on Sunday morning, and in Broadway at night. He reports the prospect in Louisville as quite encouraging. Several joined the Church in the morning."

The Legislature.

The bill for taxing dogs, now pending before the Legislature, is creating considerable interest among the farmers of the State, especially those who pay attention to sheep-raising. We regard this a very important bill—one which should be passed without a dissenting voice.—Gentlemen who are engaged in sheep-raising, tell us that the dogs destroy them in large numbers every year, and many of our best farmers have abandoned all effort in "sheep growing" for the same reason.

A bill passed the Senate creating a new county out of New Hanover. It is to be called Pender county in honor of the late Genl. W. D. Pender of Edgecomb.

A bill introduced by Mr. Linney, providing that a party can give a mortgage on his real estate and bring suit on it instead of a bond has passed its third reading in the Senate.

Mrs. Bagley, wife of D. W. and Elizabeth Bagley, was born February 8th, 1824, and went to rest January 18th, 1875, in the 51st year of his age.

In the memory of the dead is blessed, Prov. x. 7. The influence of a good and holy life is not as the tide on the bosom of the lake undulating to shore, so for or of a christian life is felt through all eternity. Such an influence has been left by Mrs. Bagley. He was converted to God in 1840 year, two years before the late Methodist Episcopal Church separated as with her consent, and lived a consistent member of the Church of Christ until the Master's call. He was a kind husband, a tender parent, a faithful friend, and a consistent Christian. He has left a widow and seven children to mourn their loss, but they mourn not as those who have no comfort.

Come rock beyond the bounds of time
Where what we now deplore,
Shall rise in full immortal prime
And bloom to fade no more.

At a meeting of the Methodist of Washington N C the undersigned committee were appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the late Mr. Raven who departed this life on the 22nd day last, in the 37th year of his age, whose untimely departure has cast a gloom over our entire community.

Whereas, God in his wisdom deemed it best to remove from our midst, sister Eliza H. Raven, a devoted earnest of our esteemed pastor Rev. A. R. Raven, whose sudden and unexpected death has bereft him of a tender and affectionate companion and us of a very dear friend, therefore be it resolved, 1st, That in the decease of sister Raven the church and society have sustained the loss of a pious christian mother, a lady of refinement and integrity, whose greatest glory was to live so as to win a crown in the Kingdom of her Lord and Saviour.

2nd, That we bow with humble submission to the will of our merciful Father, believing that he doeth all things well"—and extend to brother Raven and the relatives of the deceased our sincere and heartfelt sympathies and condole with them in this their hour of affliction, commending them to him who hath said, "fear not, I am with thee, be not dismayed, I am thy God."

3rd, That as Christ has assured us of a home beyond this "vale of tears" where the happy spirit of the loved one is basking in the sunshine of God's presence thither we greet the bereaved ones, where

They that meet shall sing forever
For beyond the rolling river,
Voice to sing and love forever
In that happy land.

4th, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished for publication to the "Raleigh Christian Advocate" and also to the Washington Echo.

A New Paper

The Orphan Friend will be published every We until Friend will be published at the Orphan Asylum, in Oxford N C, by the children of the Orphan Asylum, and will enter a field occupied by no other paper, representing no party in politics and no sect in religion; but helping all parties and sects to unite in promoting the judicious education of the young, and the continuous improvement of the old. It will discuss the duties and privileges of parents and teachers, and will defend the rights and denounce the wrongs of children. It will explain how our University lies desolate and our Colleges and Schools are poorly attended, while the Stockade itself seems to be too small to contain the vast throngs which crowd our penitentiary. It will give special attention to poor orphans, and will tell them how to escape their present degradation, how to grow up into wise and virtuous men and women, and how to secure liberal wages for honest work. The object of the paper is to help all on people to be good and do good. Price, one dollar a year, always in advance. A few cash advertisements will be admitted, at ten cents a line for the first insertion, and five cents a line for each subsequent insertion. The same advertisement will not be inserted more than thirteen times, as a live paper can not afford to clog any one long forever. The first number will appear on Wednesday, the 26th of January, 1875. All friends of the young are requested to forward subscriptions at once.

Merry Workers.

Tell me what the mill doth say,
Clatter, clatter, night and day;
When we sleep and when we wake,
Clatter, clatter it doth make,
Never idle, never still,
What a worker is the mill!

Hearken what the rill doth say
As it journeys every day;
Sing'ing sparkle, on the wing,
Ripple, ripple, it doth sing,
Never idle, never still,
What a worker is the rill!

Listen to the honey bee,
As it dances merrily
To the little fairy's drum
Humming, drumming, drumming drum.
Never idle, never still,
Humming, drumming, hum it will.

I, like the mill, the rill, the bee,
I would never idle be.
What says cock a doodle doo?
Up—there's work enough for you.
If I work them, with a will,
It will be but playing still.
Ever merry, never weary,
It will be but playing still.

What a Little Girl Did.

A lady who thought she would try to do some good, called together some poor little girls on Saturday afternoon to teach them sewing. She got two or three to help her, and they gathered together quite a number of poor children whose parents did not attend church. There was present one little girl whose mother had died, and whose father kept a small store or shop. They were talking about the holy Sabbath, and the wrong of doing any work on the Sabbath, and the thought took hold on the little girl's mind. They did not know who she was, but she went home, and on Saturday evening she said to her father, throwing her arms around his neck: "Father, you are a good father. I love you," but, said she, "sometimes you are naughty." "Why," said he, "what makes you talk that way Who has put that nonsence into your head?" "Father, it is wrong. You know I love you," and she nestled up close to him. He tried to put her away, but she would have her arms around his neck. "Now, father," she continued, 'don't keep the store open any more.' On Sunday morning he was restless. He didn't go to open the store as usual, and he would wait till after breakfast. Finally he said, "My little girl, put on your bonnet, and we will go to church. I will not keep the store open to day." And he went to church for the first time in some years, and in three or four weeks that man was converted, and all through the soft, kind entreaty of that little child.—Bishop Simpson.

Farm, Garden & Household.

Improving a Worn-Out Farm.

From the Country Gentleman.

A correspondent in Somerset County, Pa., who for three years has been endeavoring to raise wheat, and who with some barnyard manure can only get ten bushels per acre, makes the following inquiries—his farm being "worn out acres of high and dry land, on which he can now only raise hay and straw enough for manure for six or seven acres:

1. Will lime destroy the sorrel which often overgrows all crops, and if so, is it best applied to wheat? And how much?

2. Is lime useful to corn, and if so, how should it be applied? The sorrel grows most where the manure is applied.

3. I have fifteen acres of pretty good sod land, plowed for corn and oats next spring. Will lime improve it; should it be broadcasted, and would fifty bushels per acre be enough? As lime can be had only for very hard work or cash, I should be very sorry to throw it away.

4. I have a seventy acre sour swamp, where muck can be had by the hundred tons. Will it pay to dig and haul it? Some say 50, others 100 and 200 loads should be applied to the acre, and I am at loss. Please inform me.

5. Shall I plow sod land for wheat?

1. On some soils of peculiar characteristics lime has extirpated sorrel, but this result may be regarded as an exception and not the general rule. Sorrel, like other weeds, is to be destroyed by cultivation, and will doubtless have to be treated in this way on your land, where its growth is increased by manure. Lime is, however, generally useful to land, but it is not often that its effects are very obvious or striking, although long continued. On some land it has no visible effect. We advise you to experiment with it on a moderate scale. You will thus learn more about it than you can from any amount of advice. It often happens that 50 bushels per acre are nearly as good as twice or three times that amount. As it usually effects a moderate and long continued improvement of the land (in connection with manuring, &c.) it is not important to what crop it is applied, provided it can be evenly spread in a finely pulverized state, and inter mixed with the soil by harrowing.

2. The general improvement which it usually effects is felt by corn as well as other crops.

3. The previous answers meet this question. Lime should always be applied broadcast. We would not advise you to expend a very large sum for liming, until by experimenting a year or two you learn its results. As a matter of economy in expenditure, you may apply a moderate quantity, say not over 50 bushels per acre, and as an experiment a portion of the land with half that amount, observing the comparative results.

4. Muck, applied directly to land, produces a good effect under two conditions; first, when there is little or no vegetable matter in the soil; and secondly, where there are peculiar or accidental fertilizing matters in the muck. Ordinarily, neither of these conditions exist, and for this reason we cannot generally recommend its direct application with a promise of any striking effects; and in your case we again only advise experiment on a moderate scale. As an absorbent, muck is always useful in manure yards, provided it is not wet when used.

5. It is not advisable to plow compact sod land for wheat, the generally approved practice is to plant corn on sod, to be followed by barley or peas, and then wheat. A clover sod not more than two or three years old, however, often does well for wheat.

By way of general advice to our correspondent, who can at present obtain but little manure, we would recommend him to introduce gradually, and as fast as circumstances will admit, the practice of plowing under green crops of clover as being probably the cheapest mode of enriching his worn out land. If he can procure gypsum, a bushel per acre in the spring on the young clover would doubtless prove a matter of economy, and a moderate application of lime would probably be of much use to the clover. As crops and animals increase, manure made from feeding clover will greatly assist in the improvement. Time will always be required to restore worn out farms and it must be gradual and the work of years.

Treating The Wrong Disease.

Many times Women call upon their family physicians, one with dyspepsia, another with palpitation, another with trouble of the breast, another with pain here and there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy going and indifferent doctors, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and powders, assuming them to be such, when in reality they are all symptoms caused by some uterine disorder, and while they are thus only able perhaps to palliate for a time, they are ignorant of the cause, and encourage their practice until large bills are made when the suffering patients are no better in the end, but probably worse for the delay, treatment, and other complications made, and which a proper medicine directed to the cause would have entirely removed, thereby avoiding health and comfort instead of prolonged misery.

From Miss Lorinda E. St. Clair, Shade Athens Co., Ohio:

"Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Your favorite Prescription is working almost like a miracle on me. I am better already than I have been for over two years."

From Ella A. Sebaler, Zanesville, Ind.:

"Dr. Pierce—I received the medicine you sent me and began using it immediately. As a result of the treatment I feel better than I have for three years."

From Mrs. John K. Hamlin Otell P.O.:

"Dr. Pierce—The favorite Prescription I took me good, which I am very thankful for."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is sold by dealers in medicine.

A Triumph Over Humbug.

It is not difficult to disarm the timid and invalid of pseudo bitters, "entirely free from alcohol," have raised a false cry against trade preparations containing spirits, and no doubt have frightened a few sick folks into purchasing the fermented rubbish which they sell, and which is infinitely more injurious than the vilest drams drunk at tavern bars. But already a tremendous reaction has set in against these alcoholic nostrums, which, being devoid of the alcoholic ends which alone prevents Hostetter's Stomach Bitters from turning sour, does not cause nausea, as usual, experience of the demand for the great alterative, invigorant from those who have always been its patrons, shows that they have not swerved in their allegiance to America's most popular remedy, and a constant influx of new orders demonstrates in quite impression, after all, the blatant denunciations of the mock bitters men have made upon the genuine article. Sold by Hostetter's Bitters continue to cure and prevent by restraint and remittent fever, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney diseases, and the numerous other ailments to which they are adapted they will continue to defeat the forlorn opposition of humbugs, and that will be just as long as they are manufactured and sold. Be it known unto all beneficent vendors, of every degree of audacity of whatever they can never hope to pull themselves into public favor at the expense of Hostetter's Bitters the reputation of which I founded, as it were, upon a rock.

FAST IND A HEMP.

And What We Know About It

Instead of devoting a column to the merits of this strange and wonderful plant, we remain silent and let it speak for itself through other lips than ours believing that those who have suffered most can better tell the story. We will here quote a few of our word from letters recently received, simply adding our testimony to the rest in saying, that what is claimed for Hemp is no puffery properly so. We know that it positively cures consumption, and will break in a fresh cold in twenty hours. Read:

St. Mary's Mission, Allegheny City, Pa., Nov. 16, 1874.

The East India Hemp has been taken by Rev. Matthias Bindel, O. S. B., and Rev. Sebastian Arnold O. S. B., both acclimated persons of the climate, and so far has given relief in both. They suffered from affections of the lungs and bronchial organs. We have recommended through charity to sufferers, the Cannabis Indica to different persons, and continue the same in good conscience, knowing the effects by experience. Please find enclosed cork for twelve bottles of syrup pills and ointment. We shall inform you in due time what further success the medicine will meet with.

Yours truly,
Rev. Ferdinand Wolf, O. S. B.,
87 Washington Street

China Grove, Rowan Co., N. C., Oct. 21, 1874.

——: Send one dozen Ointment and one of Cancidis Indica. When Mr. J. W. Fisher brought his wife to me for examination, found her in the incipient stage of tuberculous consumption. Then it was I concluded to make a fair trial of India Hemp, and now there is a general demand for those remedies. The Oil most excels everything and anything of its kind I ever saw or tried; in many cases it acts like a charm.

Fraternally yours,
P. A. Sifford, M. D.

Ridgeville, Caswell, N. C., Sept. 12, 1874.

Inclosed is $10 for more of the Indian Hemp. I can truly say that this medicine has done me more good than all the doctors, and I had several of the best in the country. My cough is a great deal better, and my chills and night sweats are gone. You may look for several orders soon, as many have seen the effect of this medicine on me.

W. A. Fuller.

Columbus, O., Oct 30 1874

Your treatment for consumption has so improved my condition, that the inquiry comes every day from my friends, what are you taking? Several are talking of sending for some of your medicine, and James Huff desires me to order for him $3 worth of the Hemp.

Wm. Hunt, North High Street.

P. S.—It is my opinion that an agent at this place would sell considerable for you.

W. H.

Decherd, Franklin, Tenn., Sept. 19, 1874.

——: Send three more bottles of your consumption and bronchitis cure. My son began using the Hemp last night three weeks ago, and he is improving rapidly. The last ten days have made him look and act like another person. I have great hopes.

J. M. Beatton

Deep River, Poweshiek, Iowa, Jan. 3, 18-4.

I have just seen your advertisement in my paper. I know all about the Cannabis Indica. Fifteen years ago I cured my daughter of the Asthma. She had it very bad for several years but was perfectly cured.

Jacob Trout.

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. $2 50 per bottle, or three bottles for $5 50. Pills and Ointment $1 25 each. Sent at our risk. Address

Selected Poetry.

To my Sister.

The following lines relative to the memory of Mrs. [illegible] Richardson, wife of [illegible] Richardson, of the Central University, and youngest daughter of the late Rev. Dr. R. L. Kenon, of the Alabama Conference, were read in Richmond, Kentucky, Sept. [illegible], 1874.

For the Advocate.

Rev. E. A. Yates.

Rev. and Dear Brother: In my former letter I noticed your article published in the Raleigh Christian Advocate of 11th Nov. inst., reviewing what I supposed to be your main position. I gave it as your position in engaging: "The Holy Spirit by virtue of the atonement is given to men in the conscience a knowledge of right and wrong; and that to do what is wrong without a knowledge that it is wrong, and to do what is right without a knowledge that it is right, is always sin, even in the heathen."

That is a fair and candid statement of your position, and I propose in reviewing it with candid fairness and candor. Your position being an affirmative one, upon you devolves the burden of proof. I ask for the proof. Where in all the Bible is one text that teaches that a fallen, guilty creature, who has violated no law of his God, will be saved upon the condition that he lives up to the light he has? I do not ask you to show that it is in accordance with the tenor of Scripture, but I ask you to produce one single text that teaches such a plan of salvation. Is it not candid, to my mind, in giving the onus as the basis of your theory, you do not produce a single text of Scripture in proof of it? My first objection, then, is that there is not a particle of Scriptural proof to sustain your position. All we know of God's method of saving sinners is what he has revealed to us. He has revealed that they are saved through the atonement of Christ and upon condition of faith in him. "To him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10th chap. 42nd verse.—Now, if God has another way of saving sinners, where is the proof of it? It is not to be found in the revelation God has given us. And how come we to be "wise above what is written?"

My next objection is, that if they are saved by living up to the light they have—if that is true, then, as you affirm it does, they are saved by works, and not by grace. They are saved by their obedience to the light they have that "will save them."—Then their salvation is a matter of right, not of grace. That is in direct opposition to the teaching of the Scriptures. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2 chap. 8 and 9 verses. "Therefore by the deeds of the law, there shall no flesh be justified in his sight." Rom. 3d chap. 20th verse.—Faith in Christ is the only method of salvation that God has revealed for sinners. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 3d chap. 11th v. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Acts 4th chap. 12th verse. "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by faith in Jesus Christ; even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." Gal. 2 chap. 16 verse. We maintain, not only that faith in Jesus Christ is the method of salvation that God has revealed, but that there is no "other way." For the Apostle says: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. 1 chap. 8 v.

The last objection I will present is, That you suppose a case that does not exist. You say, That if the heathen live up to the light he has, that will save him. But there is no man who lives up to the light he has: "For there is no man that sinneth not." 1st Kings 8 chap. 46 v. Those who have held extreme views of christian perfection, have never maintained such a state of perfection under the influence of the gospel as that to which your theory supposes heathenism capable of raising fallen, depraved human nature. For if living up to the light they have saves them, there must be no deviation. It must be full, perfect, universal obedience. One act of this obedience, in all their life, to the law "written in their hearts," would forfeit their claim to salvation. The least deviation would mar and ruin the service. For their claim rests upon the merit of obedience—their living up to the light they have. But if the heathen raised, depraved human nature to such a state of perfection, even it is superior to Christianity; and to send the gospel to the heathen would be to do them a moral injury. It would reduce them from that high state of perfection in which they are capable of rendering perfect obedience to the law "written within," so that they can claim salvation as a matter of right, to that state of imperfection that requires the blood of atonement to constantly plead in their behalf.—Or if none of the heathen are saved but those who live up to the light they have, and none of them live up to that light, then none of them are saved. Which horn of the dilemma do you take? The Apostle is clear and distinct upon the moral state of the heathen. He says he has "proved both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin." Rom. 3 chap. 9 verse. "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3rd chap. 23rd verse.

You are very kind to inform us that Pres. Robey has misapplied the 10th chap. 13, 14 and 15 verses of the Epistle to the Romans, for we never could have learned it from anything the Apostle has said. You say the Apostle is "simply showing that the gospel is for the Gentiles as well as for the Jews; and is justifying himself in going to the Gentiles." The confidence with which you make this statement has led me to carefully examine the entire chapter, and I confess my inability to discover any such design.—I then examined Dr. A. Clark on the chapter and found that he had also failed to make the discovery. With all due deference, I must join issue with you. I maintain that the Apostle is there teaching that a man is justified by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and that is God's only plan for saving sinners. He commences the chapter by declaring his solicitude for the salvation of the Jews. He then assumes that they have failed to obtain salvation, and assigns as the reason of their failure, that they did not seek it upon God's plan, but in their own way. He then teaches that God's plan for saving sinners is faith in Christ. "For Christ is the end of the law for right usness to every one that believeth." That the Jews were ignorant of God's plan of saving sinners, and sought salvation by the works of the law. "For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." He then gives a lucid exposition of justification by faith. He then teaches that God requires the same condition of all, and that all who comply with the required condition shall be saved. "For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him." "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

These are his premises, and they follow in consecutive order. From these premises, he draws the following conclusions, viz: That they cannot call on him—(referring to the Lord Jesus Christ of whom he had been speaking as the object of faith) on whom they have not believed. That they cannot believe in him of whom they have not heard. That they cannot hear unless the gospel be preached to them. That the gospel cannot be preached unless a preacher be divinely appointed or commissioned to preach it. Or it may mean that unless the church send him, as Paul and Barnabas were sent by the church at Jerusalem to preach to the Gentiles, and Peter was to restrict his ministry to the Jews. "How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" Rom. 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses.

I ask the reader to pause right here, and read the 10th chapter to the Romans and say which of us has given a correct exposition of the teaching of the Apostle. If the Apostle means what he says in the 10th chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of the Rom., that the heathen who die without hearing the gospel preached are necessarily lost. That that "is evident from passages Pres. state just the contrary." Is that sound reasoning? Why not say, that in those passages (if it be such) the Apostle cannot teach the contrary, because in the 10th chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of Romans he declares they are lost? Would not the reasoning be the same? If so, what is such an argument worth?—The Apostle in the above cited passage teaches that they cannot be saved. That they are lost, I suppose, follows as a consequence. But if there be any passages or passage in the Scriptures that teaches just the contrary, then I will abandon my position on this subject and embrace yours. If you fail to produce such passages or such a passage, will you abandon your position and embrace mine?

The first text you cite is Rom. 2 chap. 14 v. "For when the Gentiles which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves." That is certainly Scripture. And so is this Scripture, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." The one passage no more proves that the heathen are not lost than does the other; for neither passage says one word on the subject. A Scriptural quotation does not amount to any thing unless it is applicable to the subject for which it is quoted. The text you cite, while it does not say one word about the salvation of the heathen, does teach an important truth in reference to them. It teaches that they are under law, and that is all it does teach. When you have derived that from the text it is exhausted. There is nothing more. But to teach that a man is under law does not teach that he is saved. The devils were under law, and they are damned. Wicked men were under law, and they are lost. Adam was under law and he fell. If you had continued your quotation the next verse would have taught another important truth. It teaches want law they are under. "Which show the works of the law written in their hearts; their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another." Here the Apostle does not teach that they are simply under a law, but under the law—the moral law of which he had been speaking.—Here we learn that all are under the moral law. That those who have not a written revelation have the law written on their hearts. And we learn from Rom. 3 chap. 23 v. that "all have sinned." And from 1 John 3 chap. 4 v. that, "Whosoever transgresseth also the law, for sin is the transgression of the law." And from Gal. 3 chap. 10 v. that "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." So we learn that the heathen are not only under the moral law, but under its curse. With these facts before us it is worse than trifling to talk about God damning the heathen to not believing a gospel they never heard. As ministers of Christ we should look deeper into Divine truth than that. We should remember that the gospel is a remedial plan for saving the lost; and that if it fail to reach them, that they, as a consequence, fail of its benefits.

The next text you cite is Rom. 2 chap. 12 v. "For as many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." This passage is appropriate.—It is directly to the point; but it teaches directly the opposite of the for which you adduce it. The Apostle in the 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of Rom. teaches that men cannot be saved without the gospel, and you cite this passage to prove that he has taught elsewhere just the contrary; and the passage you cite teaches that they shall perish. The one teaches they cannot be saved without the gospel, and the other states emphatically that they shall perish; and the one you cite as contrary to the other. You propose to prove by passages from the writings of St. Paul that in the 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of his Epistle to the Rom., he does not teach that the heathen who die without hearing the gospel are necessarily lost. And you propose to prove it by passages which teach just the contrary. You produce two passages. From the one we learn they are under the moral law, and that they are under its curse. From the other we learn that they shall perish. And if you had cited any other passages the result would have been the same. For the Scriptures do not contradict themselves. One portion is not contrary to another. If there is any contradiction it is in our own minds, not in the Scriptures. When you started out on that line I knew you would be defeated.

But you say, "Is not the inference clear and logical, that, as some have sinned and been judged or perished by this conscience-law, so others have not sinned and have been judged and saved by the same law?" Worse and worse. You state that to be a clear and logical conclusion which is the reverse of what the Apostle says he has proved to be true. "For we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin." Rom. 3 chap. 9 v. "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God"—"For there is no man that sinneth not." 1 Kings 8 chap. 46 v. You say: Is it not a clear and logical inference that others have not sinned, &c. When our logic contradicts the word of God as directly as that, it is time to question the correctness of our logic. But the passage you cite does not say "some." It says "as many" as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law. That the phrase "as many" includes all—every one, is manifest from the fact that the same phrase (as many) occurs in the latter clause of the sentence, "and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." Now, when you have as many as are without (as you justly remark, without the written law) and as many as are in the law, (have the written law) you have all. There is no third class who have the law and at the same time do not have it. But why cite a passage of Scripture to prove a point which so totally fails you that you have to change the Scripture you cite before you can so much as draw an inference from it (however illogical) in support of your position? But you proposed to prove by passages of Scripture, not by inferences, just the contrary of what I maintain the Apostle teaches in the 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of Romans. Your Scriptural passages have failed you, and you now resort to inferences, and you have to change the Scripture before you can find a place for an inference in favor of your position.

I now come to your last position. "That the heathen saved without the preaching of the gospel takes a low position in the scale of salvation."—Poor fellows! And all that 'just because' Bro. Yates "does not go and preach the gospel to them."—But how do you reconcile that with your previous position that they have not sinned, and upon that ground being judged and saved? I would suppose that beings coming into the world with a nature fallen and utterly depraved, without the light and influence of the gospel to assist them, who had spent a whole life in a world like this, without having sinned against God, ought to have a very high "position in the scale of salvation"—a position not only above Christians, but above angels who have not sinned. I in such untoward circumstances. I believe you do not possess any Scriptural authority for this position. It is certainly novel; and in taking it you have not shown any unusual "moral and Head marks," &c.

I now come to the motives why we should send the gospel to the heathen. You say: "Because of its humanizing, civilizing and ennobling influences,—the love of letters, the inventions of arts, the elevation of woman to her proper sphere, and the bestowal of settled principles of government." How insignificant! How beggarly and utterly contemptible! are such motives when contrasted with motives drawn from the eternal world! And if it were higher motives than these that sustains are poured into the missionary treasury? Is it for any of these that the brightest minded and purest hearts leave home and friends and country and all of earth that is dear, and spend a life in foreign lands, and live and die among savages? No, indeed! There are millions of immortal souls for whom Christ died who are perishing for lack of knowledge. "Thy brother's blood crieth against thee from the earth." We enjoy the glorious hopes of immortality begotten in us by the gospel of Christ. And shall we live in luxury, and hoard our wealth while millions of immortal souls go into eternity without hearing that there is any Saviour for the lost?

But if the heathen be under the moral law, and are under its curse, can they be saved? Yes, they can. "For God hath concluded all under sin, that he may have mercy on all."—But if the heathen can be saved, has God made any clear revelation as to how they are to be saved? I answer, he has. Is it by living up to the light they have? No. The Bible nowhere teaches that as God's plan for saving the heathen. What then is the plan that God has revealed? "And the Scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham." Gal. 3 chap. 8 v. That is the plan as God's word can make it.

I have now finished my review of your article published in the Raleigh Christian Advocate of the 11th of Nov. I engaged in it from a sense of duty, and for the purpose of counteracting its influence upon the public mind. I confess I also indulged a hope that you had embraced the sentiments contained in that article with more reflection, and that upon further investigation you would see that they are not tenable. How far I may have succeeded in accomplishing the object I have had in view is yet to be developed. I have tried to use soft words, but strong arguments. I have striven in every sentence that seemed to be sharp, that I might not either offend or wound a friend and brother. I have tried to be as dull as possible. I have had no ambition to obtain a triumph over you in an argument. I should abhor myself if I should be influenced by such a motive. If I have demolished your position it is due to God to credit on my intellect, and no discredit on yours.—Truth is easily vindicated. Error involves even a vigorous mind in difficulties. I find an easy road to travel. Yours were the struggles of a strong man in a morass.

It might provoke a smile, if it was not so serious in its consequences, to see Pres. Abernethy, Rev. J. R. Brooks and yourself starting from the same stand point, and diverging so widely, that it would be a less difficult task to reconcile you to Pres. Robey or myself than to either of your co-adjutors. Pres. Abernethy ignores the decalogue, and in fact the entire Bible. My young friend, Rev. J. R. Brooks, plants himself fully on the platform of the deist. He says, that a belief in God and his attributes is the faith required. That is identically the position of all the deistical writers. The deist believes in God and his attributes. The Christian believes in Christ. No deistical writer will object to the position of Rev. J. R. Brooks, though the better class of them will assign to Christ a more respectable position in their creed than he does. He says that Christ is but the development of one of God's attributes. And he congratulates himself that the heathen, the Christian and the Jew can all stand on his platform. I will add it is broad enough for every one else to stand upon it, except the atheist, and not be crowded then. The Jew denies Christ, villifies him for an impostor, and he can stand on Bro. Brooks' platform! It is time we make our platforms a little more christian. You take positions which I am sure your discriminating mind would reject when writing on any other subject. Such are the fruitful consequences of admitting one theological error into our creed.

Pres. Abernethy's plan for saving the heathen is the worship of idols, and I for God to accept that worship as it offered to himself. Bro. Brooks' plan is a belief in God and his attributes, from which faith in Christ is excluded; while your plan is, their living up to the light they have. From these schemes of human devising, let us turn to our true guide, the Scriptures, and there learn what is God's plan. "And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all nations be blessed." Gal. 3 chap. and 8 v. "Now, to Abraham and his seed were the promises made.—He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3 chap. 16 v. We here learn "that God will justify the heathen," and that the condition upon which he will justify the heathen is faith, "God would justify the heathen through faith," and that the faith by which God will justify them is faith in Christ: "He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." And we further learn that the means necessary to produce faith in Christ is the preaching of the gospel.—The Scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel, &c. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Rom. 10 chap. 17 v.

These strictures are directed against the error, not the men. I have not the pleasure of an acquaintance with Pres. Abernethy. I admire him for his zeal and energy in building up a literary institution of high grade, without the aid of church or state; and upon more than one occasion I have shown myself to be his friend. But he ought to learn the ten commandments. As the school boys say, he ought to learn the first and second "by heart."

It was my good fortune to be the first Presiding Elder of both Bro. Brooks and yourself when you entered the Conference. I then learned to esteem each of you for your intellect, and love you for your amiable qualities. Time has only increased my esteem and love for you both. Whatever impression these strictures may now have upon either of your minds, when I shall have passed away, as soon I will, you will then remember that your first Presiding Elder would not tolerate a theological error though advocated by two of his best friends.

As ever, your friend and brother,

WILLIAM CLOSS.

Religion

Religion of some kind is a subject which at times at least, occupies the thoughtful consideration of all the inhabitants of our mundane sphere—that is religion so called; but the true religion as taught by our Divine Master is comparatively little understood even by the baptized thousands of our modern Israel. I will pass over the perversions of the term as embraced in the thousand and one of its corruptions from the Hindoo rites to the adherents of the Arabian madman, and shall refer only to the small the most enlightened portion of our race in this progressive nineteenth century in the Protestant branches of the church militant.

By not a few, Religion is thought to be only of the emotional nature and consequently only felt as the emotions are brought into active exercise and therefore fitful. By others considered only in the light of abnegation and crucial offerings. By some, as in the moralists, a matter only of the judgement and devoid of all ebullition of feeling. My idea of true religion is this—it is a matter of faith, judgment and emotion. Taking Divine revelation as a constant and only text book, following closely its injunctions under the light and guidance of the Holy Spirit allowing the judgement, the heart, mind and emotions full scope in conformity with the revealed word. At times the emotional nature is so powerfully excited under an extraordinary flood—tide of the Spirit that it would be sinful if not impossible to restrain those feelings which could find vent only through this channel, and in different degrees affecting different individuals as to their nervous or easily excited natures in contrast with a physical nature or constitution of a phlegmatic cast.

While at times our feelings may and will be affected more than at others, for we all are more or less affected by circumstances surrounding us, yet there must be ever with us an abiding sense of our weakness, of our leader's goodness—and a clear felt faith, both in His ability and willingness to perform what His word teaches—and an inward acknowledgement of the justice of His claims. Works will necessarily follow faith as the night the day and are inseparably connected,—an existing correlation. Forms and ceremonies are necessary only as adjuncts to connectional worship but should ever be found apart from the sum and substance of vital religion.

Paul may plant and Apollos water, yet God only gives the increase. Man and God are co-workers in the soul's salvation, for without the former's willingness and exertion to be saved God would be inconsistent with Himself and the moral perfections of His being to an enforcement of it; so while the Divine Being condescends in His merciful goodness to plead with man as a sinner to embrace the terms of His salvation, man must obey.

Love, supreme love to God, and to love our neighbor as ourselves are the sum and substance of the law and embrace all others, for if these abound all the other christian graces are necessary consequents. An enumeration of the vices to shun, and the virtues to embrace are unnecessary here, they will each come up in living array before the probationer as he advances—in full force—and he who overcomes the former will find full fruition in the enjoyment of the latter—for the promise is to him who overcomes. Consolatory too is it that as thy days may demand shall thy strength ever be. And now unto Him who is able to keep us from falling and to present us faultless before His throne, be honor and Glory both now and forever. Amen.

Urgent Appeal to Southern Methodists.

DEAR BRETHREN:—This appeal is to you. Stop long enough to read and consider. We were present at the meeting of the Board of Missions in Nashville, Jan. 27. Facts were developed there extremely painful to every lover of Christ and his Church amongst us.

All the Conferences have been held but one. All the Treasurers of the Annual Conference Boards have reported except one or two. We therefore know the exact state of our finances. After paying what is already due to our devoted missionaries for services rendered the last Conference year, the Board will scarcely have money enough in the Treasury to pay them for the first quarter of the present year.

What shall be done for our missionaries? Must they suffer when we have plenty? Must they quit the field? Must the work be suspended? Shall the poor and the heathen be allowed to perish for want of the bread of life?

We appeal to our Presiding Elders. At your next quarterly-meetings make the support of Missions the first question of your Quarterly Conferences. It is the duty of your preachers to lift two collections for Missions during the year—one for Foreign and another for Domestic Missions. Now, if we were not sorely pressed for money to prevent our brethren on Missions from actual suffering, it would even then be the best policy—the best financiering to take one of these collections in the early part of the Conference year.

We appeal to every preacher in charge. Put yourself in the place of one of these brethren for whom we plead. Suppose you were certain only of one-quarter of your salary, and had to wait to an indefinite period for your second, third, and fourth? You would then feel exactly as our missionaries must feel with these facts now before them. We urge you, therefore, to present their subject to your people the first clear Sunday when most of them are present. If you can do no better, read this appeal to them, and comment and enlarge upon it. In our cities and large towns the winter is the very best season to attend to every kind of Church work, and especially is it the best time to raise money. This every pastor knows. Half the people are away in the summer.

Our missionary Secretaries published an Appeal for Missions in the Christian Advocate of Jan. 16. It was read by one of our prompt young preachers on Saturday. On Monday he was ready to pay the full amount of his assessment into the hands of the Treasurer. There are hundreds of pastors in our Church who have wealthier congregations than he.

We appeal to our people. You profess to be the heirs of salvation—the great salvation purchased by the precious blood of Christ. Is not the contribution of five, ten, twenty, or even one hundred dollars, to the cause of Missions, within the month of February, simply a question of willingness, and not a question of ability? Answer to an enlightened conscience, and you will act at once.

Think of the self-sacrificing missionary in danger of being exposed almost to nakedness and hunger—think of the ignorant, and destitute, and heathen, who must have the gospel—imagine yourselves in their situation, and then remember the Golden Rule, and we do not fear the result. What should hinder the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, or tarnish the honor of our Church, when the gold rightfully belongs to the Lord?

Send your collections, as soon as taken, to our Treasurer, the Rev. A. H. Redford, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

Chinese Books

Printing a book in China is done as follows: Two pages are written by one trained to the business on a sheet of thin paper, divided into columns by black lines, and in the space between the two pages are written the title of the work and the number of chapter and page. When the sheet has been printed it is folded down through this space, so as to bring the title, etc, partly on each page. The sheet when ready for printing, is pasted face downward on a smooth block of wood, made usually from the pear or a plum tree. As soon as it is dry the paper is rubbed off with great care, leaving behind an inverted impression of the characters. Another workman now cuts away the blank spaces by means of a sharp graver, and the block is then passed to the printer who performs his work by hand. The two points he has to be most careful about are to ink the character equally with his brush, and to avoid tearing the paper when taking the impression. From a good wooden block some 15,000 copies may be printed, and when the characters have been sharpened up a little, it is possible to obtain 8000 or 10,000 more impresions.

How to Account for Jesus.

He (Jesus Christ) is not to be accounted for by any spiritual Darwinism, by any possible process of development. Do what you will with His character, you cannot bring him into line with His predecessors, whether Jewish or Gentile, or with the culture or standard of His age. These eighteen centuries of progress have not brought the advanced guard of humanity up to Him. We can trace the rudiments of other pre eminent characters, and show whence and how they grew. There is no human or earthly accounting for Him. The character of Christ as portrayed in the Gospels is the highest possible evidence of their authenticity. It is a character which without an original, could not have been conceived by the evangelists; one for which they had neither the materials within their reach, nor the genius or culture requisite for its invention. As an actual character, it could not by any possibility have been formed by antecedent or surrounding influences. It was not a natural development for human virtue has not yet developed up to its standard. Its human side cannot possibly be authentic, unless its Divine side be equally authentic.—Dr. A. P. Peabody's Lectures for 1874.

Golden Words for Young Men.

I beg that you will remember that you may acquire fortune on terms of honor and self-respect if you will only have courage to insist upon those terms and submit to none other. I had occasion a few years ago, to say to a class of young men about to take their position in the profession of law, that I believed, and I do believe, that it was equally certain that talent, ability, honor, would achieve everything that the human heart ought to desire, if only it is insisted that they should be achieved without any concessions of one's conviction of right, or one's sense of duty; that it is equally—perhaps not quite equally—easy, perhaps not quite so speedy, but far more certain—and when the object is attained it would not turn to ashes in your grasp. I have never known a man so eager for objects of ambition or of fortune, that he sought to attain them by indirection who did not find that when they were attained they failed to satisfy. Even a man who has stolen largely of public money begins to desire public esteem and it turn round and contrive how to get it, and if he can't get the reality he seeks to get samples of the sham article. The human heart is incapable of being satisfied with anything but real victories in the race of life, and, therefore, young men, and this is the last observation I have to make to you, ever feel that the right will be successful, and the right only.—Extract from a recent Address of Gov. Tilden, of N. Y.

Editing a Newspaper.

"The world at large do not know the mysteries of a newspaper; and as in a watch, the hands that are seen are but passive instruments of the springs, which are not seen, so in a newspaper the most worthy causes of its prosperity are often least observed or known. Who suspects the benefit the paper derives from the enterprise, the vigilance, and the watchful fidelity of the publisher? Who pauses to think how much of the pleasure of reading is derived from the skill and care of the printer? We feel the blemishes of printing if they exist, but seldom observe excellences. We eat a hearty dinner, but do we think of the farmer that raises the materials thereof, or the cook that prepares them with infinite pains and skill? But a cook of vegetables, meat, pastry, and infinite bonbons, has a paradisaical office in comparison with an editor! Before him pass all the exchange newspapers. He is to know all their contents, to mark for other eyes the matter that requires attention. His scissors are to be alert, and clip with incessant industry all the little items that together form a large an interest in the news department. He passes in review each week every State in the Union, through the newspaper lens. He looks across the ocean and sees strange lands, and following the sun, he searches all around the world for material. It will require but one second for the reader to take in what two hours' search, produced. By him are read the manuscripts that swarm the office like flies in July. It is his frown that drowns them. It is his hand that condenses a whole page into a line. It is his discreet sternness that restricts sentimental obituaries; that gives poets a twig on which to sit and sing their first lays. And the power behind the throne in newspapers, as in higher places, is sometimes as important as the throne itself. Correspondents, occasional and regular, stand in awe at the silent power which has the last glance at an article, and may send it forth in glory or humility. And, in short, as the health of the body depends upon a good digestion, so the health of a newspaper depends upon that vigorous digestion which goes on by means of the editor.'

THE Wesleyans in England are greatly exercised over their liturgy, because they have discovered germs of Ritualism in it. A committee was appointed at the late Conference to consider the revision of their liturgy, and to remove all expressions that can be construed into Ritualistic form or meaning

Rev. Wm. H. Milburn is supplying the pulpit of Trinity Methodist church Chicago, pending the arrival of the expected pastor—Dr. O. H. Tiffany—in March. Crowds went to hear the eloquent "blind preacher" last Sunday.

The Preacher's Joke.

Ministers enjoy a good joke. Dr. Strong of Hartford does. He had invited a young minister to preach for him whose sermon was dull and long. The people became wearied. About the time for the commencement of the afternoon service Dr. Strong saw his people flocking across the river to another church. He readily understood that they feared to hear the same young man in the afternoon. Gathering up his wits, he said to the young minister: "My brother across the river is very feeble, and I know he will take it kindly to have you preach to his people, and if you will do so I will give you a note to him; and he will be as much obliged to you as I would to have you preach for me, and I want you to preach the same sermon you preached to my people this morning." The young minister, supposing this to be a commendation of his sermon, started off in good spirits, delivered his note, and was invited to preach most cordially. He saw before him half of Dr. Strong's people, and they had to listen one hour and a half to the same dull humdrum sermon that they had heard in the morning. They understood the joke, however, and said they would never undertake to run away from Dr. Strong again.

Be Earnest.

Are you members of the Church which Christ has purchased with His own blood? Have you tasted the good word of God and the powers of the world to come? Your very position before the world indicates what duties should rest on your heart and conscience. The Church is, or should be, "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth." A wise man has said: "The Christian is the world's Bible, and the only one which it reads." Believers should be living epistles, read and known to all men. The world is too busy to read books, either divine or human. But they read men who profess godliness critically, and the judgment they form of us, with a proper opportunity, is usually correct. They are not mistaken in supposing that piety is more than mere belief in divine revelation and outward profession. They know that when the heart is right with God, and full of love, the life will show it.

A Word About the Lungs.

In nearly all cases the natural capacity and area of the chest are sufficient for all the uses of respiration. But the capacity of the chest may be diminished by the habit of stooping, or by the abominable practice of tight lacing. The false grace of the wasp form in women is almost always gained at the expense of the lungs. The tight belt and the armor above it fatally compresses the air cells and forbids all easy union of the oxygen of the air with the currents of the blood. The lungs cannot well spare one square inch of the space which they naturally fill. Consumption is the sequel of the corsets. The war of hygiene upon tight waists must be positive and unceasing, for fashion has nothing more destructive to human life than this. The lungs are also injured by being over-worked, strained or made to do more than any reasonable estimate of their powers would allow.

Potash as a Fertilizer.

Potash forms one of the most essential constituents of a fertile soil, and one of the most important of all the fertilizing agents within reach of the agriculturist. In many plants it constitutes more than one-half of their ash, and in most at least one third. In neutralizing acids in the soil, and in the liberation of ammonia, it acts in the same manner as lime, but when it is desired simply to effect these last-mentioned objects the latter should be used, as being cheaper; potash, generally available in the form of ashes, should be applied as a manure, using the word in its strictest sense, to indicate a substance that contributes directly to building up the structure of the plants. But considerable care should be exercised in the use of ashes, and they should never, as is the practice with some in manuring corn in the hill, be mixed with guano or the refuse of the hen coost, inasmuch as the first rain that dissolves them will cause the potash to displace the ammonia in the same manner that lime displaces it from barn-yard manure and similar manures, and as we have just mentioned; and although the potash of the ashes and the phosphoric acid of the guano, or the like, would be left to benefit the plant, the ammonia would be dissipated and lost, and the value of the fertilizer depreciated. Analogous to potash in its action is soda, which, however, with a few exceptions to the rule, enters but slightly into the composition of plants, and may generally be replaced, to a great extent, with potash. Turnips and mangel wurtzel, however, require a comparatively large amount of soda, the ash of the former containing upward of twenty-eight per cent, and the latter a nearly equal

The American committee on Bible Revision were entertained at the house of Hon. William E. Dodge, in New York, on a recent evening. Dr. Schaff explained the character and progress of the Revison, and stated that it would probably require about seven years more to complete the work.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL superintendent recently said: "I think if any one could look into my heart he would see a little Sunday school there."

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE OF THE
M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

If payment be delayed six months, 2.70

All letters on business with this office should be addressed to the Editors of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

RALEIGH, N. C., FEBRUARY 10, 1875.

The Cross (X) Mark is to remind you that your subscription has expired. Let all renew promptly.

Persons in ordering their paper changed will be careful to state the office from and to which they wish the change made.

At the solicitation of some of our little readers, we propose to give them and those specially interested in them, a column in the Advocate every week to be styled The Children's Column.

Remember that the price of the Christian Advocate is $2.20, postage prepaid at this office. It is the cheapest paper published in the Southern Methodist Church.

We are greatly encouraged at the number of renewals and new subscribers we are daily receiving. A large number of our preachers are earnestly canvassing for the paper. Some of our lay brethren are also at work for it with becoming zeal, and we trust the whole church within our bounds will aid in this good work.

The Baltimore Conference of the M. E. Church, South, will convene in annual session at Mt. Vernon Place Church, Washington City, on the 3rd of March. Bishop Marvin will preside, and Bishop Doggett is also expected to be present.

Rev. W. S. Black, the efficient Presiding Elder of the Wilmington District, writes us that the out-look on his District is decidedly encouraging, —much more so than the past year. There is no district in the Conference better able to take care of its preachers and Presiding Elder than this.

We learn from a private note received from a brother at Wilmington, in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, that both of our churches there are pleased with their new preachers. Our correspondent who is a member of Front Street, speaks especially of Bro. Munn, who is gaining a stronghold upon the affections of that people, and whose congregation has largely increased both upon the ministration of the word and the weekly prayer meeting.

Bishop Doggett has been spending several days in Baltimore, preaching able and eloquent sermons. On the 31st ult., as we learn from the Methodist, he occupied the pulpit of Green and German St. Church, preaching from St. John 5, 25-30, inclusive: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Lord God, and they that hear shall live." Subject—Christ's prerogative as a Saviour and judge of mankind.

Rev. J. F. Craven, in charge of Trinity Circuit, writes us that he has been warmly received by the people of his charge. The people of Trinity College, he says, "are true Methodists —most of them take your paper. I am going to do all I can for the Advocate. I consider it among the best aids to the pastor."

Our Missions.

Who can read the last commandment of Jesus before he disappeared from earth, without believing that Missionary work is the paramount distinctive duty of the church? Who can feel that he is serving or pleasing that Saviour, if he is doing nothing for Missions? Oh, brethren, are you not in danger of divine displeasure and punishment, when you so little regard this great matter?

It is cause for humiliation to consider how very limited is the Missionary work of the Southern Methodist Church. We can do better if we will. We must do better without delay. The important thing with us is, to lead the church to understand its duty and its power. Who is exempt from the obligation to help forward the great work? No member of the church. Every one can do something. Nearly every one can give something—though it be but a dime or a cent. Let the brethren encourage every member to give that can do so, be the gift ever so small. Try it, and it will bring blessings to the church as well as to Missions! Let all pray for the grand enterprise. Sing Missionary songs. Talk about Missions. Preach and write about Missions. Let us all awake to the tremendous duty!

The Satanic Paradise

What is it? It is the American Theatre. "Ah! indeed," says one, "Where is the harm of frequenting such a beautiful place? What brilliant lights shine there! What charming music greets the ear. What magnificent scenery is displayed in the back ground!" Oh, yes, these facts are granted without controversy; but does not the Bible teach us that salvation often appears in the celestial light of an angel? His deformity is wreathed with innocent flowers. Does beauty always mean innocence? The serpent is no less deadly because he wears a coat of shining scales. The vulture is dressed in glossy plumage, while he tears asunder the flesh of the helpless lamb. The modern theatre is made as beautiful as an oriental paradise. Its floor is strewn with odorous flowers—its atmosphere fans the flushed cheek of the audience with balmy breath—its roof is hung with rosy clouds—its walls with glittering curtains, while the ear is filled with music as enchanting as that of the ancient sirens. But in this theatrical paradise, the old serpent of perdition lurks, whose fascinating gaze charms, captivates, and finally destroys. The world fell in a paradise of beauty, and in the midst of the intoxicating perfumes of the theatrical paradise, thousands fall from the purity of sentiment to the lowest walks of sin and vice. The pestilence of the mallarial tropics float through aromatic shrubbery and the most brilliantly hued flowers, but it is no less fatal when breathed by the traveler. "There is a way which seemeth right to man, but the end thereof is death." The world of darkness is populated with the victims of this "harmless amusement" so called.

But it is said, in justification of theatre-going, that in such a place one can learn a great deal of human nature. We admit that this is so.—You can learn a great deal of vicious human nature from the actors themselves. There you can learn how successfully sacred things are ridiculed—how brilliant wit can employ itself in burlesquing religion—how contempt can be generated against the ministry. How human corruption can be decked out in the shining robes of seeming innocence—how attractive the license to live in sinful lust—how pure taste is perverted, and glittering false views of life are produced. If you desire to learn these Satanic arts, go to the theatre. It is a school well adapted to promote proficiency in the higher forms of subtile evils.—But after all that may be said against theatres, exclaims a cold member of the church, "I think I can go once or twice, and even through life, and not be hurt by it." What a delusion—how completely you are under satanic influence. This is just what the devil would have you say and believe. Let us ask you candidly and in the light of divine truth, upon what principles of christian consistency can you justify yourself for wasting your money and time by attending the theatre?—How can you satisfy your conscience and reconcile your conduct with duty in setting the pernicious example of supporting this growing class of playmongers? A class of men and women who do nothing to elevate society, but all in their power to corrupt it. Men whose whole trade is to tickle the world by giggling, capering across the stage, caricaturing the solemn events of life—employing the powers of the soul, given for a higher, nobler purpose, in making people laugh, and general buffoonery. Oh! it is a slur upon the cause of religion, and an index to the deadness of your faith and christian experience to urge such an excuse for visiting the theatre. You spend your (God's) money freely to fill the pockets of bloated, degraded actors, common dancers and vagabond fiddlers, but when it comes to pay honest debts, to support the church or give a penny to the poor orphan shivering in the wintery wind, you beg to be excused. What a specimen of saintly piety!! How your light shines to lead men from God and into the darkness of the second death!—Mothers, fathers—you who regard tenderly the best interests of your children, let us plead with you to keep them from the theatre. It will destroy their morals and exert a deadly influence upon others!

The Richmond Advocate has this to say of Bro. Barrett's letter recently published in this paper:

"Bro. Barrett, of Lincolnton, N. C., writes to Bro. Bobbitt these sensible words, all of which we steadfastly believe.

We covet Barrett. As said of Abon Ben Adim, "may his tribe increase." We would like to swap for Barrett.—Hear him:"

"The Raleigh Christian Advocate is popular in this region. Your request to get up 'renewals' shall be attended to. We are ice bound at present; you must await the coming of a thaw.—Then we hope renewals will flow into your office as in streams. The preachers and people and schools and Colleges all need the paper. The Church would be better off to spend more money in that direction. Who can estimate the amount of good accomplished by a good religious newspaper?"

We can't spare him. If we begin to swap there is no telling where it would end. Bro. Barrett is but a true specimen of North Carolina Methodist preachers—We have many more just like him, true to the paper and to all the interests of the church.—Ed.

Talking Around the Church.

In the sparsely-settled rural district, where the people have few opportunities of seeing one another, it is not improper for them to give friendly greetings and exchange a few words of kindly inquiry about the wellfare of their families and neighbors; but such words should be but few, and all miscellaneous chit chat should be avoided. Nothing should be said or done at church, before services or at any other time, that does not comport with the great object of going to church—the heartfelt worship of God. All secular topics should be avoided. Never mind the state of the crops, of current topics in politics, or the late sensational rumors about anybody in the neighborhood. Put off the discussion of them for another occasion. They have no more right to take the place of God's worship than the Jewish money-changers had to conduct their mercenary operations in the Temple. Try to lift your minds out of the daily channels and, at least while at church, set your thoughts and affections on better things. Why not go into the church and sing a few good songs, till the preacher arrives? That would put you in frame for worship and have a good effect upon all. It would especially inspire the preacher as he draws near and hears the stirring songs of Zion.

Pray for Them.

We call upon all the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, who may read these lines, to offer up earnest prayer to a sin-pardoning God in behalf of Bishop Bowman, Rev. Mr. Ives of New York and the rest of the Northern Methodists who constituted the late vengeful Boston Meeting. Do not try to make evil out of their proceedings. They will do harm enough without your help and despite your effort to prevent it. Pity them and pray for them. Many, probably most of them, possibly all of them, are so biassed by education and surroundings as to really think they do right to hold such meetings and pursue such anti christian policy. Remember the words of Jesus: "Bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you."

Utter the prayer of the Redeemer on the Cross "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

On our first page will be found an article from Dr. Closs, and on our editorial page we give an article from Bro. Brooks, both communications growing out of the discussion on "the Curse of Blood." We have on hand another article from Bro. Yates, and another from Dr. Closs on the same subject. The mill is constantly grinding and of course we must adopt the miller's rule. Articles from others have been received, but we cannot admit all, who seem disposed to take part in the discussion, at the same time. Our space will not allow us to do so. Exercise patience brethren; we will give all a hearing as soon as we can.

In the mean time we beg our readers not to grow weary. The subject under discussion is one of great importance, and one upon which our people should be correctly informed.

Not on Trial

Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, the leading counsel for Rev. Henry Ward Beecher in the suit brought against him by Theodore Tilton, in a speech recently said in court: "The Christian religion is not on trial here." After quoting this remark the New York Observer very properly adds:

"That's a fact, and we are specially glad that the counsel has announced it as his opinion at the very outset of the case. Let that be kept in mind. Christians knew it before, and they wish the world to know and believe that their religion does not depend on the guilt or innocence of any man, or any number of men, in any age or country. . . The founder of their religion had twelve disciples, the boldest of whom denied his Lord and then committed suicide in an agony of remorse. If the Christian religion were on trial when its professors are exposed, it would long ago have perished. Mr. Evarts is right. The Christian religion is not in any danger at present."

Rev. Dr. Rosser, of Virginia, reached this city on Saturday. He preached Sabbath morning and evening at Edenton Street Church. His "preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and power" of God. He will preach a series of sermons at this church with the view of awakening a religious interest among the membership and a revival of God's work in the community. His preaching has been greatly blessed, wherever he has labored, in the salvation of sinners. Under his ministry we are praying and expecting a great revival of religion in this community.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate is the adopted organ of the N. C. Conference, and every Methodist in the State ought to subscribe for it and use all available means to give it a still more extended circulation. Terms $2.20 per annum postage prepaid at this office.

Rev. N. M. Jurney, Pastor of Person St. Methodist Church of this city, delivered the Anniversary speech of Bethel Lodge, I. O. G. T. on Monday evening of the first inst.

For the benefit of our readers in the country, the Raleigh Market is correctly quoted weekly.

THE CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

In our last Master E. E. Jurney asked the little readers of the Advocate to give the chapter and verse containing the word "Eternity." The first to respond to this question was little Queen Esther Betts. The following have also responded: Jennie Fitzgerald, Mary Lee and Lizzie Reid Martin, Nannie A. Woodburn, S. Annah Parker, Emma L. Johnson, Nannie E. Haynes, Aura Barrett Chaffin, Maggie McKenzie, Henry Wood Lee, Fannie R. Best, and Mattie C. Durham. All giving the 57th chapter and 15th verse of Isaiah as the place where the word eternity occurs. Some of these letters are so sweet and child-like that we really enjoy reading them. Little Emma L. Johnson writes: "I am a little girl ten years old, daughter of Rev. D. C. Johnson of the N. C. Conference. I like to look out the words given to the children, and hope there will be more in your paper."

We give the following just as they were received at this office:

UNCLE BOBBITT: You will please in form Master E. E. Jurney that I find the word "Eternity" in the 15th verse of the 57th chap. of Isaiah.

I am quite young yet, but can read the Bible, and am glad that Uncle Betts has thus set us little folks to work looking out curious and interesting things in that best of books.

I have heard my Pa speak often of Uncle Betts. He says he knew him in the army as a good and faithful chaplain to our poor soldiers.

Very respectfully,
MAMIE E. HANES.

UNCLE BOBBITT: Please tell the little readers of the Advocate that I find the word "Eternity" in the 57th chap. and 15th verse of Isaiah. I am nine years old to-day, and have been to school only one session.

AURA BARRETT CHAFFIN.

Mamma received the Christian Advocate this evening, and as I am one of the young readers of the Advocate, I tried to find the only verse in the Bible containing the word "Eternity," and found it in the 15th verse of the 57th chapter of Isaiah.

Your little friend,
MAGGIE MCKENZIE.

MR BOBBITT: "Eternity" is in 15th verse of 57th chap, Isaiah. Pa got the Advocate this evening and said as my older sister, Ida, found the other verse, I must find this one. So I ran and got Pa's concordance and found eternity there, and that is the way I found it so quick.

Pa told me to ask the Sunday school children to find a chapter in the Bible that has four verses precisely alike, each containing twenty words.

MARY LILLIE PENNIX.
Yanceyville, N. C., Feb. 3rd, 1875.

Two little girls, Emma Weddington and Nannie E. Guthrie have sent an answer to "A. D. B.'s" question since our last. Little Emma writes: "I think the Advocate the best paper I ever read." The paper has never received a compliment which we appreciate more than this. It is really gratifying to know that the dear children love their church paper. God bless them all, and make the Advocate a means in bringing them to Christ!

THE WORD "ATONEMENT."

Little S. Annah Parker, in answering Master E. E. Jurney's question, says:

"Will you and the little readers of the Advocate tell me where, and how many times, the word 'Atonement' occurs in the New Testament?"

THE WORD "REGENERATION."

Nannie A. Woodburn, a little Sunday school scholar, calls upon the children who read the Advocate to tell where and how often the word "Regeneration" is found in the New Testament.

Sing More

Cultivate singing in the family. Begin when the child is not yet three years old. The songs and hymns your mother sang, bring them all back to memory and teach them to your little ones, mix them altogether, to meet the similar moods, as in after life they come over us so mysteriously sometimes, Many a time and oft, in the very whirl of business, in the sunshine and gayety of Fifth Avenue and amid the splendor of the drives in Central Park, some little thing wakes up the memories of early youth, the old mill, the cool spring, the shady tree by the little school house, and the next instant we almost see the ruddy cheeks, the smiling faces, and the merry eyes of schoolmates, some grayheaded now, most "lie mouldering in the grave." And anon "the song my mother sang" spring unbiden to the lips and soothes and sweetens all these memories.

At other times, amid the crushing mishaps of business, a merry ditty of the olden time pops up its little head, breaks in upon the ugly train of thought, throws the mind into another channel, light breaks in from behind the cloud in the sky and a new courage is given to us. The honest man goes singing to his work, and when the day's labor is done, his tools laid aside, and he is on his way home, where wife and child and tidy table and cheery fireside await him, he cannot help but whistle or sing.

The burglar never sings. Moody silence, not the merry song, weighs down the dishonest tradesman, the perfidious clerk; the unfaithful servant, the perjured partner.—Hall's Journal.

Religious Beevities

Rev. Levi. Thorne has been called to the Newberne Baptist church.

Rev. M. M. Marshall, rector of the (Episcopal) Church, Raleigh, has been made a Doctor of Divinity by William and Mary College, Virginia.

Bishop James recently said that there are as many Methodist in Africa, China, or India now as there were in this country a hundred years ago.

The Missionary Society of the Washington Street M. E. Church Sunday school, Petersburg, Va., collected during the past year $489.75; 299.48 from the male classes, and $189.27 from the female classes.

Rev. Dr. E. H. Myers, D. D., late president of the Wesleyan Female College, at Macon, Ga., and previously editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, has been appointed pastor of the leading Southern Methodist Church in Savannah, Ga.

The Baltimore Methodist says: Bishop Marvin will probably visit the National Capitol previous to the meeting of Conference, and hold a series of religious services with Bro. Wilson some time during the present month.

The Holston Conference celebrates the centenary of Methodism this year within its bounds. The first society organized in the Holston country was in 1774, in Southwestern Virginia. This year is also the jubilee of their history as a Conference, as fifty years ago last November the Holston Conference was organized in the town of Knoxville.

Our Southern exchanges bring us good tidings. Revivals of religion are in progress in various places. Many conversions and accessions to the M. E. Church, South, are reported.

Miss Sarah L. Wilkins, of Trinity M. E. Church, South, in Baltimore, who died recently in that city, bequeathed all her property at the death of her sister to the Book Concern and the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, excepting $1,000 which she left to a young female friend, and $200 each to five charitable institutions of Baltimore. The estate is valued at $50,000.

Bishop Cummins, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, preached one evening last week in the Franklin Square Presbyterian Church, in Baltimore, of which Rev. Dr. Lefevre is pastor, upon the "true unity of Christ's people," in the course of which he said: "It is the failure to distinguish between the true mystical body of Christ and its outward manifestations in different forms of organization that has led to endless confusion. One great law pervades the universe, unity amidst adversity. It is seen in creation, in the human family, in the vegetable kingdom; in the heavens above us, and it prevails especially true in the Church of God. There is but one true spiritual Church. There are many forms of polity. United to Christ all believers are one, though separated into various visible societies.

We have received a copy of the address of Grand Master, John Nichols, Esq., delivered before the Grand Lodge of Masons of North Carolina at its late annual meeting. The address is plain, practical and pointed, and the printing is neatly done by Edwards, Broughton & Co. of this city.

The following item has been furnished us for publication in the Advocate:

William S. Schaub of Stokes county has been married 40 years, has raised 8 children, has never bought a pound of pork or bacon, has had some of each to sell every year; and every year has had hogs to weigh over 200 lbs. Has killed 9 weighing an average of 457 lbs. the heaviest 558 lbs., their aggregate weight being 4116 lbs. This is something not many can say. And his pastor adds that Bro. Schaub takes and reads the Advocate, pays for it in advance, and remembers his preacher.

The Board of Directors of the Masonic Temple have determined to commence the erection of the building at an early day.

TO THE PREACHERS AND LAY MEMBERS OF THE N. C. CONFERENCE.—My Dear Brethren: I appeal to you, for you are all interested. I am on the Onslow circuit this year by the appointment of the Bishop,—am out of house and home; and hence I have commenced to build a small one, but though small it will be convenient and comfortable, and not expensive, for we expect to do the most of the work ourselves, but shall need some money to finish off the work. I give some facts in the case which will be a good reason why I appeal to you for help. 1st. I find the most of the brethren on this circuit are poor men, but seem to be pious, and have a disposition to work. 2nd. Their pastor is without a home, and it is a hard matter for him to find a suitable one in a suitable place. 3d. Two of the most wealthy appointments, viz, Richland and Haw Branch, have been detached from the circuit and added to the Kenansville circuit. 4th. We do not expect to build an expensive house, hence our requests will be small, and will be extremely obliged to any one for, even, a small favor, for any amount from 5 dollars to 50 cents.

Now, brethren, send me a small donation, and direct your letters to W. C. Gannon, Newberne, N. C., who is our agent, or to me at Swansboro, N. C., or to my Presiding Elder, Bro. Black, of the Wilmington District.—Brethren, you help me, and when you begin to build, I will help you. "God loveth a cheerful giver."

L. W. PIGOTT.

Angels still Visit this World.

The life of a Methodist itinerant Preacher is not all toil and anxiety. Ever and anon some kind sympathizing angel pays him a visit, and causes him to forget his toils, and the household is lit up with light and joy. Such was the case at the humble Preachers home in the quiet village of Lenoir on Christmas day We were notified on the preciding day, to make no arrangements for dinner, but have the table spread, which was accordingly done. The little ones looked at the table, and then at the cold cooking stove and seemed to be somewhat bewildered at the prospect for a Christmas dinner, as they were ignorant of the fact that an angel had passed around among the Methodist families, and had whispered to them, let us light up the Parsonage on Christmas day, and gladen the hearts of our minister and his family. About high noon, the baskets and waiters began to come in, and soon the table was loaded with all that the most fastidious epicure could desire. We mention only one dish. The turkey weighed 17lbs, and every thing, indeed, was correspondingly inviting, both in quality and also in preperation. What purported to be only a dinner turned out to be nearly a weeks supply. If my good friend Bro. Lafferty of the Richmond Christian Advocate had been present, he would have seen a dinner so far supassing the one he ate at the Parsonage, that he certainly would have repented wasting space in his valuable paper to notice it.

If the people but knew how much such acts of kindness were appreciated, and what an indelible impression they make, they would certainly become more common on the great anniversary occasions. I have just commenced my 3rd year on the Lenoir circuit for this term, and my 7th in all. This is perhaps one of the hardest circuits in the Conference; 16 regular appointments, 931 members, rides long, and roads rough; but the climate is healthy, the people are kind, and appreciative. The preacher has access to good schools, and then some kind Angel pays a visit, and the preacher is encouraged to renewed effort.

"The Curse of Blood,"—Rev. W. M. Robey Again.

MESSRS. EDITORS: As promised in the "Advocate" of the 20th inst., I now offer a word in reply to Bro. Robey's third article concerning the heathen. I fear that your readers are growing tired of this discussion, and as I have already written a good deal on the subject, I wish to be brief in this article. For these and other reasons, I will not follow Bro. Robey in dissension; the irrelevant matter of which his article is so largely composed. The importance of human agency and the gospel as means of human salvation; the question as to whether God "permits" or "decrees" sin; the inability of mere power in God to save men, etc., are questions not involved in the issue between us.—And the fact that the heathen would be better off with the gospel than without it has no bearing on the question. Nor does it prove anything to the point to show that more heathen would be saved with the gospel than without it. All these things may be conceded without at all affecting my position. The simple question under discussion is this: Is the written or preached gospel indispensably necessary as a condition of the possible salvation of the heathen? Bro. Robey affirms and I deny this proposition. If he will admit that the heathen, in the absence of the written or preached gospel, have a possibility or chance of salvation, I will no longer dispute with him. I must say, and I do it with perfect candor, that in passing over what I regard as irrelevant matter. I am not conscious of wishing to avoid any of Bro. Robey's arguments nor of a willingness to treat him with disrespect or unfairness. Apart from the wrong involved in such a course, I see no necessity and feel no temptation to do so. For, I certainly see no difficulty in answering conclusively and with entire fairness every argument he has presented in his whole series, including the fourth and last number. And in saying this I intend no reflection on Bro. R., but on his cause. But to the argument Bro. Robey still insists that no rational adult heathen can be saved without the gospel. But, in answering the objection that his theory is inconsistent with the justice of God, he denies what I once understood him to affirm—that God damns them because of their failure to believe on Christ. He admits that such a course would be "manifestly unjust." He explains that in the articles I have been reviewing, he intended to teach, and that he now holds, that the heathen are all lost because they are "sinners." But I will give his position in his own words. He says: "No unenlightened heathen can be saved. But why is the heathen lost? Not because he has never heard the gospel. If he had heard it he might not have been saved. But he is lost because he is a sinner. For what is he punished? * * * Because he is a sinner." By the term "sinner," of course Bro. R. means a transgressor of the moral law, as given in the decalogue and a summary of which Jesus gives us when He says, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," etc. According to Bro. R., then, the heathen are damned, not for a lack of faith, but because of a violation of, or a failure to comply with, the moral law. I certainly cannot see that his cause is at all strengthened by this explanation of his position. Let us see if it is. In the first place, his theory seems to be inconsistent with the plain teaching of the Scriptures. The Bible certainly seems to teach that the immediate cause of the sinner's damnation is not his violat on of the moral law, but his failure to comply with the law of faith. Not because he, from the force of inherited depravity or outward temptat on, does wrong; but because he fails, in the strength of inparted or provised grace, to repent of such wrong. Not because he has inherited the disease of sin that naturally develops itself in outward traugression, but because he willfully refuses to apply, by faith, the remedy for this disease. That is what I understand Jesus to teach when He says, "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation"—the reason or cause of condemnation—damnation—"that light is come into the world and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." Again, He says: "He that believeth not shall be damned." Now, in these formal statements of Jesus as to proximate cause of man's condemnation and ruin, are we not taught too plainly for controversy that it is not his "evil deeds" or violations of the moral law, but his positive unbelief and willful rejection of offered and obtainable light and mercy? Is not this gospel light that Jesus speaks of? And does He not teach that those who received it would not have been condemned if they had not received and rejected it? And, if the heathen does not receive any of this light, is he condemned for his "evil deeds?" Is there in fact any other real cause or condition of the sinner's final ruin than his unbelief or rejection of offered and obtainable mercy? Are we not taught here that unbelief is the only condition of damnation, in the same sense that faith is the only condition of salvation? But will Bro. R. say that all this is not applicable to the case of the heathen? Is God harder with them than He is with us? If so, is He not a "respecter of persons" in the sense in which Paul, in Rom. 2: 11, says He is not? Will Bro. R., on reflection, say that there is a heathen in hell who did not go there because he rejected offered mercy? If so, how can it be said that "the Lord is good to all, and His tender mercies are over all His works?" Will he say that this refers to temporal blessings? If so, are not these "tender mercies" cruel curses in disguise? Do they not make the heathen's unavoidable hell more intolerable by creating a greater contrast between it and life in this world?

But again. Does not Bro. R admit that the very exis ence of the heathen is one of the results of the atonement?—that they would never have been born into the world apart from God's purpose and plan to redeem them—except on the basis of the atonement? If he does, (and he must admit it,) is not the death of Christ a position and unmitigated curse to them? Now, it is not sufficient to say that it proves a curse to those who reject Christ. They might have made it a blessing. But, on Bro. Robey's theory, His death was absolutely and necessarily (with them) a fearful curse—bringing them into existence, and consequently, consigning them to hell, without any chance or possibility of salvation. Will Bro. R. say that God could not help it?—that He is in no way "responsible" for this result of the atonement? Now, if, as Bro. R. says God could not send the gospel to the heathen without human agency, and He saw that this human agency would not be available, could He not have prevented this result in some other way? Could He not have prevented Christ's dying for them? Was He under any dire necessity of bringing the great bulk of our race into existence when it was ont of His power to give them any chance of salvation? Is He still under that necessity in all heathen lands? And if He is under such necessity, is He forced to write His "law in their hearts," and thus necessitate their becoming guilty and punishable by its violation? Could He not have withheld that law and saved them as He does infants and idiots? But, if He saw best to write this law in their hearts, could He have written the gospel too—a knowledge of His goodness as well as His holiness, His mercy as well as His justice? And, if He could do it, and He did the best He could, as Bro. R. teaches, did He not write the gospel "in their hearts?" And—if He did, and they are still lost, are they not lost because they sin against gospel light and reject gospel mercy?

But the most serious objection to Bro. Robey's theory is the one urged in my first article: That it is inconsistent with God's justice. On his theory that the heathen have no gospel—no revelation of God's mercy and grace—it is just as cruel and hard to damn them for their sins as it is to damn them for not believing on Christ. For, according to the teaching of the Bible and that of Bro. Robey himself, the heathen can no more help committing sin than they can help not believing or Christ. Let us hear from Bro. R. on this point. In his first article he says, "neither can it be maintained that some adult heathens live up to the light they have and are therefore saved." I suppose he means, of course, that it is impossible for them, with the light they have, to so keep the moral law as to be saved by its "deeds"—their morality or virtue. That this is Bro. Robey's opinion seems to be put beyond question in his third article. He says, "no man can be saved unless he repents. But no man can repent without the motives presented in the gospel. No man can have these motives without a knowledge of the gospel. Therefore no unenlightened heathen can be saved." Now, if "no man can repent without the motives presented in the gospel," of course no man can keep from sinning without those "motives." Certainly, if those motives are necessary to enable a man to "repent"—stop sinning—keep from sinning in the future—they were necessary to enable him to keep from sinning in the past. So, then we may say: No man can avoid sinning without the motives presented in the gospel. No man can have these motives without a knowledge of the gospel. Therefore no unenlightened heathen can avoid sinning. Now, if the heathen can not avoid sinning, is it just in God to damn them for being "sinners?" Is such a course in harmony with His revealed character of justice and mercy? Bro. Robey knows it is not. It would be damning them for not performing (to them) an impossibility—for not improving a talent they never possessed—the power to avoid sin. But as this is a very important point, and as I am "seeking for truth" and not "striving for victory," let us look into the matter a little further. Let us see if the Bible does not prove more directly that the heathen can not avoid sin. Sin exists in two forms or under two conditions. It may possess a position or a negative character. It may consist in doing what is forbidden, or in a failure to do what is rejoined. John says, "sin is the transgression of the law," and that "all unrighteousness is sin." He probably means that all unholiness—impurity—fail—ure to comply with the requirements of the moral law—failure to love God supremely etc.—is as really sinful as is a positive transgression of that law—the taking of God's name in vain or hating God, for instance. Now, Paul says, "the carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." The apostle evidently teaches that the natural heart hates God—that it is not, and can not be "subject to the law" of love to Him—till changed by grace. Now, as the heathen are born into the world with this "carnal mind" or depraved heart, and as they have not, (on Bro. Robey's theory,) the "motives," knowledge and grace of the gospel, in any measure, how can they help hating God? How can they love Him? If they are born with the disease of sin in their moral "systems," and the gospel is the only "medicine" that will keep it from "braking out into actual transgressions, how can they avoid sin in the absence of the gospel? But, it may be said that God damns the heathen for their idolatry, and that they can keep from that sin. Is not idolatry the outgrowth of "the carnal mind" or depraved heart of the heathen? If it is, how can they avoid it without the 'motives' and restraining grace of the gospel? If 'the motives of the gospel' are necessary to enable the heathen to 'repent' of idolatry, are they not necessary to restrain them from the original act of idolatry? But how are the heathen saved from heart sins—heart idolatry, for instance? Is not that as bad as the outward act of idolatry? Is any sin pardoned except on condition of repentance and faith? If a heathen should refrain from all outward immoralities, could he be saved? Fortunately Bro. R. has, in his fourth article, answered this question for me. He says 'the best sinner in a heathen land must be lost because to him the remedy is inaccessible. They are not saved because they are virtuous, or moral or sincere; but because they trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. In him the worst sinners have hope. Out of him the best has none.' I am free to confess that I hardly have language to express my utter abhorrence of such a theory. It is truly a 'horrible' one. Just think of it. 'the best sinner must be lost.' He has no hope or chance of salvation. Let him do his very best—be as 'sincere,' 'virtuous' and 'moral' as it is possible for him to be, and yet he 'must be lost,' There is no 'hope' for him on any practicable condition. If he yield to the force of inherited depravity and outward temptation and become an actual 'sinner,' God will damn him for that. If he lives as 'virtuous' and 'moral' a life as he can, God will damn him because he is 'out of Christ.' If, in the absence of the remedy of his diseased moral nature, which 'is inaccessible' to him, he should unwillingly feel pride, hatred or revenge, he 'must be lost'—eternally damned—for it. Do what he may, his case is absolutely and eternally a hopeless one? But to cut the matter short: Do heathen can or they can not avoid sin and keep from becoming 'sinners.' If they can, then they may be saved by 'the deeds of the law, without the gospel. If they can not do so, then it is manifestly unjust in God to damn them for their sins, as we have seen, Bro. R. says they can not be saved in any way—that they all 'must be lost'—that their 'sincerity, virtue and morality can not save them.' the latter half of it is true.

But I may be asked: How do you avoid the force of the passage of Scripture which Bro. R. quotes so often and with so much apparent confidence? I mean the passage from Ezekiel: "When I say unto the wicked O wicked man thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand." In the first place his passage has no direct reference or special application to the heathen. It was to warn the people of God, by his ministers, of their danger. In the next verse you will find that God says, 'O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel.' The watchman was not commissioned to and warn the heathen, unless Bro. R will insist that the Israelites were at the time referred to, heathen. The warning was concerning the sin and its penalty more particularly—'thou shalt surely die'—and the Jews, to whom the warning was to be given, already had the law and knew its penalty. I had been given to them through Moses. The watchman was to warn them as Peter did those to whom he wrote, by stirring up their 'pure minds by way of remembrance of what they already knew or might have known. It was to warn them in the sanctuary service which Paul wanted every man within the reach of its public or private ministry, also as all faithful christian ministers warn their congregations now. Just as Bro. Robey warns his pupils and others who wait on his ministry. The fact is that our 'Watchman, Peter and Paul all wanted men to obtain the danger, who previously had or might have had some knowledge of the danger and were, consequently, 'without excuse' for their sins. This is the case with most men whom christian ministers warn now. And it is plainly the reason why they 'die in their iniquity' and are punished, and while warning the negligent of the 'watchman or miner to warn them. They fail to improve to the utmost knowledge and 'gospel motive' and are damned for that; while the mangled suffers I see is punished for his failure to carry them out in five hundreds of these cases. I fail to warn the young people of my congregation who already have the Bible and have received instruction and warning at home and in the Sabbath school, they may 'die in their iniquity' and God, in a certain sense, may be responsible for their blood, but they will have excuse, because they have not possessed any knowledge of the gospel. Robey will show me any passage of Scripture which he thinks, by any fair construction, opposes the doctrine I have taught, I will assure you that like the house of Israel, they had received some previous knowledge of saving. And I think I will satisfy me that to extreme heathen who have no received, and could not, by their own effort, have received any knowledge of or hearing of the sin of unbelief, I will agree to admit that 'God waits after or overlook that ignorance in order to not punishing them for a sin they do not know of or have no means of knowing.' Of course in so doing he would be guilty of no injustice. Now, Messrs. Editors, taking Bro Robey's premises or a part of his theory, I based an argument to prove that they are not 'personal sinners' or 'wicked' in any more, or punishable sense; and that God does not damn them for their sins. Does not Bro. R. admit, with all other high thinking divines, that there are at least three indispensable conditions of moral responsibility, 'call' gener. knowledge and means needed?

Now he not hold that every man must be capable of understanding his moral law, must have some knowledge of that law, and must have the power to obey that law before he can be justly held responsible for its violation? Of course he does. If he does not, we may as well discontinue this discussion. For, I certainly do not know how to argue with a man who denies fundamental truths and principles. Does he not hold that in the absence of any one of these conditions, man is not responsible for his acts? Does he not know that because of the absence of one of these conditions in the case of infants, idiots and maniacs, he the God-man holds them responsible for their acts? Now according to Bro R. two of these conditions of be possibility are lacking in the case of the heathen—knowledge and moral freedom. He says the talk of the heathen having a knowledge of God without knowing Christ is 'bosh.' And as the heathen know nothing of Christ or his mercy the know nothing of God. And if they know nothing of God, of course they know nothing of his law, or both, so far as their control or obey it. And, as we have already seen, he teaches that in the absence of the gospel and its 'motives,' the heathen are morally free—have not the power to 'repent' or obey the moral law. Now, if we can not predicate 'sin' or 'wickedness' in any moral sense, of the immoralities of infants, idiots and lunatics, because of the absence of one or two of these conditions, how can we, under the same circumstances do so of the idolatry of the heathen? And, in God, for these reasons, take infants, idiots and lunatics to heaven, together with heathen, who were Christians up to the time of their lunacy. If he does this notwithstanding these lunatics may have committed the crimes of blasphemy and murder, considered objectively, why may he not, for the same reasons, take the heathen, who are objectively guilty of idolatry?

I hope very soon to show that Bro. Robey's fourth article has no more real strength than those I have already reviewed.

Thankfulness.

If every cross that here has shaped my own
Had chosen for me its time and way;
If all the ways that I must tread alone
Were ways of my own choice;

If every day's work had been a thrill of pleasure
Had charmed me by its ease;
If every heart that has brought me cheer
Were opened to my touch;

If every step that has come to me
On the summer's soft grass
Had chosen another way more free,
And I had chosen it pass;
If every soul that has cared to mine,
With its kindling touch so dear,
Had dropped the cup with its wine, sweet wine,
And left me with duty here:—

I still would say—looking up to God
With thanks for the what has been:
For the love that lies beneath the sod
And the coming bloom again!"

Communicated.

For the Advocate.

To Rev E. A Yates.

Rev. and Dear Brother: I feel confident that in addressing you this communication, you will not attribute to me a desire to enter the arena of controversy, or to see my name in public print. I would greatly have preferred addressing you a private communication, if by so doing, the evil effects to the cause of Christ of your communication published in the Raleigh Christian Advocate of the 11th Nov., could have been counteracted.

When President Abernethy published in the Raleigh Christian Advocate that idolatry is no sin, and that God accepts the worship of an idol as if offered to himself, the utter ignoring of the Bible was so glaring that I did not fear that any one would be injured by it. The Rev. Mr. A. ought, however, to learn the ten commandments, especially the second commandment, before he attempts again to enlighten the public.

Your communication of the 11th Nov. is not, however, likely to be thus harmless. You advocate a theory which men wish may be true; and upon which covetousness seizes with avidity; and which paralyzes every effort to carry out the great commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.' That I have not overstated the practical effect of your theory, let me call your attention to one fact. The M. E. Church, South, with a membership numbering 676,609 maintains only three missionaries in foreign fields, while the Southern Presbyterian Church, occupying the same territory, whose deliverances have been clear and distinct in opposition to your theory, with a membership of only 92,000, maintains ten in foreign fields, besides 16 among the Indians. I do not mean to say that that fact proves the theory advanced by Pres. Robey to be true, or yours to be false. But I do say, that a theory which obstructs the sending the gospel to millions for whom Christ died, and who are perishing for "lack of knowledge," should not be promulgated unless we have the most incontestable proof that it is the teaching of God's word.

A full conviction that the sentiments contained in your communication of the 11th Nov. are not sustained by the word of God, but are in opposition to its teaching, and are paralyzing to every missionary effort, could alone prompt me to review your article. If in so doing, I shall write one sentence or word which shall seem to be either harsh or unkind, let me assure you, in advance, that nothing harsh or unkind is intended. I write from no love of writing, but from a solemn sense of duty. I have no fondness for religious controversy. Forty-five years ago I entered the ministry in the M. E. Church—first as a local preacher and then as a member of the Virginia Conference, and more than forty years of my ministry have been spent in N. C., and I have never had a controversy with a minister of any denomination upon a disputed point in theology. I engage in this discussion with reluctance. But I have no choice left me. When sentiments opposed to what I understand to be the teachings of God's word are promulgated through the paper endorsed by the N. C. Conference, I would be recreant to duty to remain silent.

Before I attempt any review of your article, I deem it proper to state clearly what I understand to be the point of discussion, so that if I have misapprehended you, you may correct me. I understand it to be this: Does the word of God anywhere teach that any of those to whom the gospel is commanded to be preached will be saved without a knowledge of the gospel? I understand you to take clearly and distinctly the affirmative of this question. For you say, "The Holy Spirit by virtue of the Atonement gives the heathen in his conscience a knowledge of right and wrong; and therefore he who is without the outward teaching has a law within, which he obeys—lives up to the light he has—will save him." The first clause of your sentence will not be objected to, but how you reach your conclusion from your premise, is incomprehensible That the Holy Spirit gives the heathen a knowledge of right and vrong is your premise. I suppose the legitimate conclusion that would follow would be that, therefore, they are responsible for their moral conduct: and if they violate the moral law they incur guilt, and expose themselves to its penalty. But more upon this point in its proper place. As the affirmative is yours, so the burden of proof devolves upon you. If the Bible teaches what you assume it does, sure one text, at least, in all the Bible can be found in proof of your position. And yet you do not give us one text to sustain your assertion. Is it not fair to presume that, knowing the burden of proof devolved upon you if you could have found it within the Bible, you would have furnished it?

Did you discover the embarrassment of your position and adroitly attempt to call off attention from the only point at issue, by assuming that the negative of this question would involve those who maintain it in the doctrine of Calvinism? I will not do the injustice to your intellect to suppose you did not see that whether the negative side of the question you were discussing is Calvinistic or not, has nothing to do with the question itself. Our inquiry is not what is Calvinistic or what is Arminian, but what do the Scriptures teach us to the salvation of those who are without the gospel. Whatever the Scriptures do teach we are bound to believe, or become infidels Whether the theory Pres. Robey advocates is Calvinistic or Arminian, may present a subject for another discussion, but it can have no place here. I conceive it will be easily shown to be neither, but, like most other great truths of the gospel, held in common by both systems.

In reply to Pres. Robey's proposition, that "If the heathen are saved at all, they must be saved either conditionally or unconditionally," you rejoin: "That if they are lost it must be either conditionally or unconditionally." Do you intend that as an answer to, or an evasion of, the proposition? You must be conscious that the subject of discussion is whether or not the heathen can be saved without the gospel. Your reply can only be pertinent upon the supposition that you hold that they cannot be lost without the gospel. That I assume to be your position. For you say, "he cannot be lost unconditionally" that would be Calvinism from which you pray "to be delivered." You then ask, "If they are lost conditionally, then what is the condition and where is it lodged?" The argument is, that if they cannot be lost conditionally or unconditionally they cannot be lost at all. And if they can not be lost they are necessarily saved. That is very clear.—What is the consequence? Why, that the entire heathen world must of necessity be saved unless we send the gospel to them, and that the only way to secure their damnation is to send them the gospel: and the church greatly "sins in not" sending it to them. We see still, that the Son of God who came into the world to save sinners has commanded the gospel to be preached to every one of them that God may have a pretext for damning them. I ask: Is that like God?

I take up your next position. You say: "But there is another way by which the benefits of the Atonement may reach the soul besides that of preaching." We can have no controversy upon that point. God may employ angels to bear the message or he may make a direct revelation of the whole plan of salvation to each individual sinner, and thus supercede the preaching of the gospel—or he may in a thousand other ways of which we have no conception, make known the gospel. But that is nothing to the matter under consideration. The question is not what God may do, but what he has revealed he does do. You have been usually bold in your assertions, but in this instance you are sufficiently modest. You add: "Cornelius felt its touch and was a devout man before he sent to the Tanner's house for a preacher; and if he had died before Peter took his text, he would have been sure of heaven." What touch of "another way" "another way?" I suppose of "its." You say, if Cornelius had died before Peter took his text he would have been sure of heaven. By what authority do you make that assertion? The Bible does not say so. He was "a devout man and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always." And yet God saw that it was necessary for him to hear the gospel preached, and sent an angel to tell him to send for Peter to preach to him. Now, for what purpose must the gospel be preached to him? That Peter might tell him what more he "ought to do," what more in addition to being devout, fearing God, giving alms and praying always. And what did he tell him to do? To believe in Christ. "That through his name, whoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Now, if this man was fit for heaven, and would have been sure to have gone there had he died before Peter took his text, then when God required him to do something more, viz: to believe in Christ, then God required of him to do more than was necessary. Nor is this all. When God commanded him to send for Peter to preach the gospel to him, he commanded an unnecessary thing to be done. Cornelius did not need it. He was already fit for heaven without it. And while Peter was preaching God sent the Holy Spirit upon Cornelius and those who were with him. And Peter asked: "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" It will not relieve your case to assume that it was not the regenerating influence of the Holy Ghost, but its miraculous gifts that Cornelius received; for it was this receiving of the Holy Ghost which rendered him a fit subject for baptism. Otherwise there could have been no pertinency in Peter's question, nor force in the reason he assigns why they should be baptized. "And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord." Now, if baptism be the initiatory ordinance into the church, and Cornelius was a fit subject to receive this ordinance because he had received the Holy Ghost then before he received the Holy Ghost he was not a fit subject to receive baptism. But he did not receive the Holy Ghost until he heard Peter preach. Now, if he was fit for heaven and would have been sure of it had he died before Peter took his text, then he was fit for heaven before he was fit for membership in the Church on earth, or even fit to receive the ordinance of baptism.—Can you reconcile that with sound theology? I think, if he was to go to heaven in that other way than that which Peter told him—(with which faith in Christ) that he needed to feel another touch or two of it before he would have gotten there.

But admit all that you claim, Cornelius, it will not relieve your case in the least. Cornelius was not a heathen. He was a worshiper of the true God. "He was a devout man, &c., one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always." He was "of good report among all the nation of the Jews." From which we infer he was a proselyte to Judaism. Now, contrast that with the description of the heathen as given in the word of unerring Truth. "Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful: but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise they became fools, and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds and four footed beasts and creeping things." See Paul's Epistle to the Romans, 1st Chap. 21th 32nd verses inclusive.

That is a rather dark picture to go to heaven. If idolators, murderers, fornicators, haters of God and those who are guilty of all the black catalogue of crimes here enumerated go to heaven, I ask, who are the characters who go to hell? And yet the Saviour teaches us that, "Wide is the gate and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. Because straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

I have endeavored thus far to review your article in all fairness. I have had no purpose to subserve in so doing but the cause of truth. I promise to finish my review in my next. With my highest esteem and affectionate regards, I am your friend and brother,

William Closs.

The Strictness of Right.—There is a line beyond which we may not pass, unless we wish to join hands with Satan himself; and, young man, young woman, keep on the right side of that dividing line; do not touch it, even with the hem of your garment. Remember the children of true faith are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost its savor, there is nothing wherewith to season it; it is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out, and to be trodden under-foot of men. Can we not watch one little hour? Surrounded by every blessing, can we not tread the short pathway to the grave steadily true to the faith of our fathers?—American Rural Home.

Reflections on the life of Joshua.

BY M. H. MOORE

The Old Testament is full of interesting types of man's frailty and man's strength—human happiness and human woe. It is, as it were, a sacred temple upon the walls of which are portraits of those who have gone before and whose characters reflected in the mirror of history throw light upon the present day. The pictures in this grand temple are many and glorious. The grey bearded patriarchs look calmly down from the niches they nobly fill, acknowledge the weaknesses of which they were guilty while "in the flesh" and point in trusting earnestness to God as the way. The prophets meekly stand in their white robes for the criticism of an infidel world, faithfully pointing out the corruptions of fallen man and looking to heaven for a reward for their sufferings. Among these, Joshua, the son of Nun, of the tribe of Ephraim, must always be a prominent character. Appointed to be successor to Moses he was fully qualified for that important office and learned from his great master lessons of faith and trust which were inculcated in the warm heart of the good man.

The time of his rule was one of the most eventful epochs of the whole Jewish history. When the sceptre of Moses was given him the children of Israel were almost in sight of the promised land. For forty years they and their fathers had wandered in the wilderness. For forty years they had continually rebelled against God who led them from under the yoke of Egyptain bondage, and for forty years God's mercy and loving-kindness had endured toward them. They had seen the Red Sea open at their approach, the hosts of Egypt's king buried beneath its returning waters. In all their wickedness, the manna from heaven had protected them from hunger; cooling waters at God's command had burst from the desert rock to slake their thirst; the cloud which moved before them had been a guide and now they were approaching the land which God had promised Abraham that his seed should inhabit. All who had opposed them had been defeated. They were triumphant and exultant. They had every reason to believe that God loved them and cared for them and they had seen abundant evidence of his power to protect them.

Of all the mighty host that followed Moses across the Red sea only Joshua and Caleb were to see the end of the journey. All of the rest of that mighty troop had been cut off in their sins. The first command he received was to "cross the Jordan." It was harvest time or about the month of April—a time when most rivers are low but Jordan was overflowing its banks; it was "a flood" which flood, says Dr. Clark, was caused by the melting of the snow on Mt. Lebanon in which Jordan has its source. Behold now the work which God performs through his agent! They have before them a furious river swelling in its madness and bearing down all resistance in its overwhelming tide. Behind them they see a country filled with enemies some of whom they have dispersed, but the remainder are united and determined to resist them and their God. On the other side of the river is a country which God has promised they shall inherit. It is filled with enemies who have heard of their victorious march and are ready to oppose them. Does it not seem a precarious moment? Is it not natural that they should tremble for safety? But "if God is with us who can be against us?" The God of the universe, the great Creator of all the beauties by which they were surrounded, led them thus far; would He forsake them in this trying time?

The priests are commanded to move on with the ark. The waters open, rise up in a protective wall on each side, the priests move to the middle of the stream and there rest the ark. The people joyfully rush for the opposite side. Not even the soles of their feet are permitted to be wet, and in the middle of the river they raise a lasting monument to remind rising generations of this miracle

Now, behold this great man in his victorious course! His countless enemies disappear before him like grass before the scythe of the harvester. At his voice the walls of Jericho fall, the "sun stands still upon Gibeon and the moon in the valley of Ajalon." And when all is conquered, when this goodly land is in their undisputed possession, does he not choose to himself a fine estate and rear therein a palace worthy of the ruler of a great people? No, he is an old man and it does not appear that he was ever married. He looks to a better country for his inheritance where he is sure a portion is reserved for him under the hallowed presence of the Lamb of Calvary. He reserves nothing of all his conquests. His followers give him Timnathterah, in the barren mountains of Ephraim, and even this he asked.

Behold this good old man as he leaves the stage of life. He calls together all of the various tribes. They assemble at Shecem.

Joshua appears and calls for the judges, the elders and the officers of the people. They solemnly present themselves before God. The prophet tells them that on that day he is to be gathered to his fathers. He is anxious for them and as the last work he can perform for them, solemnly reminds them of the great troubles that await the house of Israel in case they disobey the laws of God He reminds them of what God has done for them—how that He had fulfilled all his promises to them since He had taken Abraham from his father Terah, brought him to the land of Canaan "multiplied his seed and gave him Isaac." Joshua regards the people with an affection peculiarly touching. He beseeches them to obey the God who has shown them so many kindnesses and furthermore warns them, (Josh. 23 16,) "When ye have transgressed the covenant of the Lord your God which he commanded you and have gone and served other Gods and bowed yourselves to them; then shall the anger of the Lord be kindled against you and ye shall perish quickly from off the good land which he hath given unto you."

Were a people ever more fairly warned? Certainly no people ever profited so little by a warning. We know that they did "transgress the covenant" and in fulfillment of this prophecy, they were led into the Babylonish captivity. But this did not subdue their proud and rebellious hearts. They rejected and crucified the Saviour of the world. And, now, look! Have they not perished, and quickly, from off the good land which God had given them? Where is the proud and bigoted Jewish nation today? Their mighty armies, their conquering commanders, where are they? What is the once proud Jew to-day but the offcast of heaven? Ah! unenviable indeed is the lot of that man who refuses to see and rejects the light that sheds its unearthly effulgence around the cross of Christ.

But to return. Joshua renews the covenant with the elders of Israel and raises a stone to remind them of their vow. They choose God Almighty to be their God and promised to put away the graven images which they worshipped. The prophet with a paternal affection tells them of what God will do for them in case they prove obedient and having performed his great work, the great and good man dies at the age of one hundred and ten years.

Who can doubt that the very angels of God welcomed his spirit with the joyful notes,

"Servant of God, well done!"

For the Advocate.

Messrs. Editors: The Raleigh Christian Advocate has been coming to my address for ten or twelve months. It was forwarded from your office at the instance of Rev. J. J. Carden, who was engaged at the time on a pastoral charge in the bounds of my District. He is now a member of your Conference.

I appreciate your paper for its intrinsic value as a Christian Advocate; but aside from this consideration, it is deeply interesting to me.

My now sainted mother was born and brought up in North Carolina, and was among the first converts to Methodism in the section of country where she resided. She was very nearly, perhaps quite grown, when she first heard the gospel from a Methodist minister. If my memory is not at fault, she was won to Methodism under the ministry of the Rev. Mr. Carr, of the Holston Conference I am a North Carolinian by birth, and was baptized in infancy by Mr. Carr.

I visited my native place (my parents moved from N. C. when I was about ten years old) when I was in my fifth or sixth year, and retain only an indistinct recollection of the country. But memory holds to a few points, and I often think of the grand mountain scenery of some sections of the old "North State," with clear, cold springs gushing from the deep shade of lofty evergreens, and dashing off in pellucid streams, in striking contrast with the broad, bleak, but fertile prairies of the "great West," with muddy streams winding their sluggish way in a narrow belt of fine, sometimes stunted timber.

I have read the proceedings of your Conference with interest—with unusual interest—having made the acquaintance of your distinguished educator, Dr. Craven, also of Dr. Wilson, Dr. Burkhead, Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, Rev. W. S. Black and Rev. S. D. Adams.

To know these brethren is to love them. Success to your enterprise and the cause you advocate in your already strong, but advancing Conference.

Respectfully,

M. M. Pugh.

"Behold, how Good and how Pleasant it is for Brethren to Dwell Together in Unity"

The exceeding beauty and sweetness of the Heaven born sentiment contained in the above language, was forcibly impressed on my mind during the recent session of the North Carolina Conference, held in the city of Raleigh. Though only permitted to mingle with its members and participate in its deliberations for four short days; yet, what I saw and heard during that time, fully convinced me that this body of men realized the truth of the above words uttered by the sweet singer of Israel. To the uninitiated, those who know comparatively little of the varied interests to be looked after in an Annual Conference, involving as it does the welfare of the Church in such a large territory, the multiplicity of business which must be dispatched in so short a time, and who forget that ministers are only men, and fallible like other men, it may seem strange that there should be at any time the least friction or want of harmony. But to the initiated, to those who know that thinking men do have opinions which conflict with the opinions of others, and remember that absolute perfection is not attained or attainable in this life, a little jarring, now and then is not so strange after all; the wonder to them is that in such a large body of intelligent thoughtful ministers and laymen, numbering about two hundred and representing more than fifty thousand members of the Christian Church, there should be so much unanimity of opinion and usually among the larger numbers, such profound peace; and they magnify the grace of that God, who "giveth such wisdom and love to His ministers and servants. There are many causes which always tend, in a greater or less degree, to promote harmony in our Conference sessions; such as all being members of the same branch of Christ's Church, all having the same expressed objects of personal salvation and the world's conversion in view, and all professing to enjoy the love of God in the heart. But while the above harmonizing elements always exist we find men occupy different stand points, hence hold different opinions in regard to the best means by which the great ends of church organization are to be brought about. These different opinions lead to debate and debate to opposition in the Committee rooms and on the Conference floor, and then men sometimes fail in the exercise of that charity which never fails, and the final result is, personalities are indulged in, insinuations are made, and thus one step leads on to another, until in the end, we find great and good men not only opposing the opinions of others, but pulling down (it may be almost unconsciously) some of the noblest enterprizes and first men of the Conference. And why? echo answers, why! Who does not remember with sadness and pain how little differences, between leading men in our Conference, begun fifteen or it may have been twenty years ago, were nursed as I grew, and were magnified year after year, until many have had their feelings most deeply mortified and more than once have been compelled to hang their heads in shame. But let us not dwell on that which we hope is dead, not only dead, but so dead and so deeply buried that its body can never rise or the shadow of its ghost ever again be seen.

But why, I ask, was our last session characterized with so much, I may add unusual, harmony? Was it because it was held in the grand old city of Raleigh? All honor to her people for their fine culture, princely hospitality and deep piety, all of which added much to our enjoyment. May the shadow of her oaks, the loveliness of her daughters, and the noble generosity of her citizens never grow less; all, all are precious in our memory. But, when we remember the past, we must look somewhere else for the cause or causes adequate to produce such a wonderful effect. Was it the presence, apostolic preaching, wise council, deep and overflowing piety of our beloved Bishop Marvin? He certainly was all we could expect or desire, he won all hearts and did much to promote peace good-will and brotherly love. But we have had with us on other occasions, other Bishops just as faithful firm and wise as Marvin, who failed to scatter the angry clouds or quiet the troubled waters. Was it the effect of the remarkable spiritual prosperity enjoyed in all our borders during the past year? It is true that our spiritual resources were greatly developed, and thousands were added to the church; and gratitude to God for this mercy seemed to fill all hearts; all were encouraged and promised to be more faithful in the future; surely, this was enough to remove bitterness and animosity, and fill all hearts with love for God and for each other.

But whatever may or may not have been the cause or causes, there certainly was very great oneness of feeling and harmony of action; it was indeed good and pleasant to be there. Just here allow me to say that, while I appreciate the beauties of Rhetoric, the force of Logic, the importance of able and clear Analysis, independent thought and action, I love far more that "charity which suffereth long and is kind; which envieth not, which vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up; doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." But is it not possible for a minister to have the highest culture, the most complete finish of the schools, and such powers of sacred oratory as will enable him to hold vast multitudes in breathless attention, win all hearts and draw around him strangers in a strange city, and yet, be sometimes wanting in some of the elements of that charity? Is it not possible for a minister to possess the logical acumen of Aristotle, the strength of Bacon, or even the gigantic intellect of a Newton, to visit all the renowned cities of Europe, tread the soil of the Holy Land, worship at the Holy Sepulchre, and still fail in the exercise of some of the principles of the charity above described?

Oh! that from the most humble to the most exalted we may learn that without "charity we are but as sounding brass or tinkling cimbal." But I hope and believe the darkest hour has past, and we have already seen the dawning of a brighter day, that the Sun of Righteousness is shining more brightly upon us as a Conference, than ever before. And people from the mountains to the sea—board—wherever properly instructed—are one on the glorious doctrines principles and practices of our holy Christianity; and if we, their ministers, will only be true to ourselves, our solemn vow, the Church; preach experimental religion, keep our hearts humble and pure, we will yet see "the beauty of the Lord prosper" in our hands more abundantly than ever before.

Observer

Rome's Daring Raid.

Mr. Gladstone, says the Advance, is one of the ablest and most sagacious statesmen which England has produced. He is out of office just now, but not out of influence. His present position, as a common citizen, makes it proper for him to say some things which it would not have been either politic or becoming to have said last year. The manifesto which he published a fortnight ago, and which has stirred up a general blaze of discussion, was concerning "The Vatican Decrees in their Bearing on Civil Allegiance," and is styled by him "A Political Expostulation." Of the four propositions which he lays down, the one on which he particularly dwells is to the effect that no one can now become a convert to Rome "without renouncing his moral and mental freedom, and placing his civil loyalty and duty at the mercy of another;" for the Vatican decree of infallibility makes the Pope the supreme arbiter of all questions pertaining to "faith and morals;" and that is about all there is to a man's life worth speaking of. It is reserved for the Pope to determine ultimately every question of duty whatsoever. In other words, it is simply the claim for him personally to the absolute supremacy of the world. "It must be," says Mr. Gladstone, "for some political object of a very tangible kind that the risks of so daring a raid have been so deliberately run."

This assumption and the purpose to realize it puts, as Mr. Gladstone shows, the peace of Europe in constant peril. The strife going on in Germany will not end there. The same inevitable conflict comes up in Italy and in Austria and elsewhere. Had the Pope only given assurance to Europe that he would be no party to the re-establishment, by blood and violence, of the temporal power of the church, the case would be very different. As it is, many are led to the "painful and revolting conclusion that there is a fixed purpose among the secret inspirers of Roman policy to pursue by the road of force, upon the arrival of any favorable opportunity, their favorite project of re-erecting the terrestrial throne of popedom even if it can only be re-erected on the ashes of the city, and amid the whitening bones of the people."

Those are words of very serious import, coming from a man of Mr. Gladstone's character and position. And it is in view of the facts to which he refers that he, Mr. Disraeli, Archbishop Manning and the Pope himself have lately spoken so ominously of the stupendous conflict which, it is believed, is preparing to break out in Europe, and which in their opinion is likely to result in [illegible] known in history. [illegible] men are, we [illegible] are mistaken.

Miscellaneous.

O ir my love offended me, And we had words together, To show her I would master be, I'd whip her with a feather! If then she, like a naughty girl, Would tyranny declare it, I'd give my love a cross of pearl, And make her always bear it! If still she tried to sulk and sigh, And throw away my posies, I'd catch my darling on the sly, And smother her with roses! But should she clench her dimpled fist, Or contradict her betters, I'd manacle her tiny wrists With dainty golden fetters! And if she dared her lips to pout, Like many pert young misses, I'd wind my arms her waist about, And punish her with kisses.

"I think I can suit you to a hair," said a boarding-house landlady to a bachelor-applicant who had been stating his requirements. "Suit me to a hair, madame! I hope not: that's what my last landlady tried to do, and gave me three samples in the butter."

You can't tell much about the girls nowadays, they are so like a good newspaper—capitally made up. To see a girl as she really is—you must drop in on her unexpectedly. As some one has remarked, the way to find a girl out is to call when she is n't in.

A leading Paris authority in fashionable matters says there is nothing more difficult for a woman to do than to sit gracefully in a carriage. The lorette lies down at full length; the strong-minded woman crosses her legs; the bourgeoise sticks up her knee; the waiting-maid leans over the side; and the high-bred lady only holds herself as she ought to do without either carelessness or stiffness, and looking as though she had been born in a carriage.

The Dead Point of Danger.—I want to say, to those who are victims of strong drink, that while there is a point beyond which a man cannot stop, and while man cannot stop in his own strength, the Lord God, by his grace, can help him to stop at any time. Last summer I was in a room in New York, where there were many men who had been reclaimed from drunkenness. I heard their testimony, and for the first time in my life there flashed out a truth I never understood. They said: "We were victims of strong drink. We tried to give it up, but always failed; but somehow since we gave our hearts to Christ, he has taken care of us," I believe that the time will soon come when the grace of God will show its power here not only to save man's soul, but his body, and reconstruct, purify, elevate, and redeem it.—*T. Kind and judicious words spoken in season are often more precious than the most costly gifts. On the other hand harsh reproof and unjust insinuations wound a tender spirit like poisoned arrows.

In an inland town of California is an individual who claims to have a secret cure for dyspepsia. He devotes his energies. The man has lately become religious (?) At a church meeting he is reported to have made a speech as follows: "I made up my mind to give my property to the service of the Lord. Amounted to several thousand dollars in money, all of which I borrow on the church I have some fine blooded stock, especially some Black Hook horses all of which I give to the church. I have about a lot of grain and farm produce, which in like manner I bestow on the church. There is but one thing in all my possessions which I reserve for myself, and that is my celebrated medicine for dyspepsia, which I will continue to sell at Saleratus for the modest price of $2 a bottle."

The Son of a King

One fine summer evening a crowd of workmen were passing along through the streets of the city of Hamburg. As the multitude swept by, an old shoemaker was sitting under a shade before his door, busily engaged in mending a shoe. Sometimes he would stop a little from his work, and sing a verse or two of one of the old German psalms which he loved very much. A well-dressed young man, a student in the university, was passing this evening. When he heard the merry voice of the shoemaker he stopped and said to him:

'Well my friend, you seem to be happy and contented.'

'I am happy, sir,' said the old man; 'and why shouldn't I be?'

'I don't know,' said the student. 'A great many people are not happy. You seem to be very poor. I suppose you have none but yourself to work for?'

'You are mistaken, sir,' said the shoemaker: 'I have a wife and seven children to feed and support with the work of these hands. I'm a poor man, it's true, but that is no reason why I shouldn't work and be happy.

'I am very much surprised to see a poor workman like you so contout, and I don't understand what can make you so.'

'Stranger,' said the shoemaker, laying down his work, and taking hold of the young man's arm with a grave and serious look—'stranger, I am not so poor as you think. Let me tell you, I am a son of the King.'

The young man turned away, saying to himself: 'Poor fellow, he is crazy. He imagines he is well off when he is poor. This is what makes him happy. I was beginning to think that perhaps he might be able to tell me the great secret I am seeking—that of true happiness. But I was mistaken.'

A week passed by, and the young student again had occasion to pass the same street. He found the old shoemaker sitting in the same place, still busy with his work, and singing as cheerfully as before. As he drew near the young man lifted his cap in a mocking sort of way, and, making a bow to the shoemaker, said: 'Good morning, Mr. Prince.'

'Stop, my friend,' said the shoemaker, laying down his work: 'I wish to say a few words to you, if you please. You left me suddenly the other evening, as if you thought that I was crazy.'

'To tell you the truth,' said the young man, 'that is just what I did think.'

'Well, my friend,' continued the shoemaker, 'I am not crazy. What I then said I said in earnest. It is true, every word of it. I am a son of the King! Just sit down here and listen while I tell you about it.'

Now this young man was a Jew. He had been taught to read the Old Testament Scriptures when he was a child, and to believe in them. But since he had grown up he had given up his faith in the Bible, and had ceased to read it. He was like a sailor out at sea who has lost his compass. He could not tell whither he was going, or how to steer, and this made him feel very miserable. Just as a drowning man will catch at straws, so this young man was ready to catch at anything that seemed likely to help him in trying to find out how to be happy. He sat down, therefore, and listened to his humble friend.

Then the shoemaker began, and told him of the promises of the Old Testament about a glorious King, who was to be Savior and Ruler of the world. He showed him that all the things that are written in the law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, about this glorious King, had been fulfilled in Jesus Christ. He declared how he had suffered and died for our sins, how he had risen from the grave, and had gone up to take his seat in glory at the right hand of God. He told how he had sent his messengers into all the world to tell men what he had done for them; and how all who had repented of their sins and believed in him would be pardoned and made happy now, and at last be saved in heaven forever; and that Jesus was going to come back again to this world, in his own appointed time, to set up a glorious kingdom and that all who love and serve him now will share the glories of his kingdom and reign with him.

The young student sat listening with great interest to what his poor friend was saying. He had often read the promises of the Old Testament, but he had never thought of them in connection with Jesus Christ. This was all new to him. He was astonished at what he heard.

'And now, young man,' said the shoemaker, 'don't you see how truly I could say: "I am a son of the King? Don't you see what reason I have to be contented and happy? It is because I belong to Jesus. I believe in him, and I love him. The Bible tells me that all things shall work together for good to me, and that all things are mine, because I am Christ's. Isn't this enough to make one happy?'

'Where can I learn more about these things?' asked the young man.

'Love that you believe them, and this will give you peace and contentment. O how I long for them!' Then the shoemaker gave to the young man a copy of the Bible. He told him to take it home and read it carefully, and to pray over its contents. The young Jewish student read the Bible diligently, and in so doing found the secret of true peace of mind. He afterwards became a missionary to his own people, and preached to them about the peace and joy he had found in Jesus.—Early Days.

Talk with the Farmers.

Though I read a great deal about "Grangers," "middle-men," "cheap transportation," with now and then some talk of a "cotton factory," I don't remember having seen anything in reference to the necessity of establishing factories for the cheaper manufacture of fertilizers; a business in which millions of capital are now invested; and in which farmers are yearly interested to the extent of millions more, without owning much, if any, of the capital stock. As with nearly everything else upon which the Southern farmer is dependent, this enterprise is left in the hands of men who are interested no further than the farmers, if fortunate enough to have any, is often turned against them by aiding the very manufactories they ought to own. Farmers, as a general thing, are not sufficiently informed as to the manufacturing industries of the country upon which they are so directly dependent; and thus they often lose the advantage to be derived from a judicious investment, which might bring them a twofold profit as producer and consumer.

It is with a view of calling their attention to this one, manufacturing of fertilizers, that this article is written.

If there is any profit in this particular business, (a thing scarcely to be doubted from the amount of capital invested and the quantity sold,) why may not the farmers save this profit to themselves by becoming their own manufacturers? Will they continue to pay, from year to year, $50 per ton for an article they could make for $40? There is one of the leaks, and a big one, too, as the simple process of manufacture would soon prove.

The means of correct information on this point are within easy reach. The same sources of material that are open to the present manufacturers, are open to all. The great supply of Phosphates so recently discovered in South Carolina; and which are now being shipped in the crude state in large quantities, over and above what is being manufactured at home, opens up an inexhaustible source of the chief element of plant food—Phosphoric Acid. These Phosphates are used as the basis of nearly all the commercial fertilizers now made; as being the cheapest source of large quantities of Phosphoric acid.

By the simple process of treatment with the comparatively cheap solvent—Sulphuric Acid, the Phosphates, otherwise barely soluble, are partially decomposed, and the greater portion of their phosphoric acid thus rendered available as plant food. With this "Dissolved Bone," or "Acid Phosphate," as a basis, nearly all the fertilizers we use are complete by the addition of small quantities of Peruvian Guano, Cotton Seed Cake, Dried Flesh and Blood, Sulphate of Ammonia, or any substance rich in ammonia. Many companies add the Alkaline Salts; of which Potash seems almost indispensable on many soils. The farmer makes the same mixture in a more imperfect way, when he "composts" his Dissolved Bone with cotton seed, stable manure and ashes.

This Dissolved Bone cannot be too highly recommended to the use of farmers, provided they know how to save, and add to it all the waste occur ing on the farm. It contains a portion of insoluble Phosphate of Lime, (slowly and gradually available;) a large portion of Soluble Phosphate of Lime, (readily available;) and a portion of Sulphate of Lime and free Sulphuric Acid. The two latter, while not being fertilizers, serve to absorb and fix ammonia; thus enabling the farmer to arrest the escape of this valuable gas in stables and from decaying vegetable matter.

Particular attention has been called to this Dissolved Bone, as it is the first process in the manufacture of the fertilizer itself; and constitutes the greater bulk of that article, besides imparting the greatest value. The first question the farmer should ask, as to the value of any commercial fertilizer, is as to the percentage of the Soluble Phosphoric Acid. The next question might be as to the amount of Ammonia; and, lastly, as to the amount of Potash.

The writer of this article, having spent several years in one of the largest of these manufactories in the South; and having, in the same time, made many examinations and analyses, under the direction and assistance of one of the ablest chemists now engaged in this work, does not hesitate to express it as his opinion that, with proper management, the farmers of North Carolina, or even of Mecklenburg County, could manufacture for themselves as good, if not a better, (there being no object in adulteration,) article of fertilizer than they could buy, and at a lower price.

In a continuation of this subject, facts and figures will be sought in addition to information already obtained, so that all who are interested may find something more satisfactory than a mere array of words.

Modern Women.

It has been frequently upon our boasted age "fashion" that the women of our times have degenerated in health and physique until they are generally a race of invalids—pale, nervous feeble and helpless with only here and there a noble exception in the persons of what were some fashionable forms characteristic of a by-gone day. By a very large experience averaging a period of years, and embracing the treatment of many thousands of cases of the ailments peculiar to Women, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., has perfected, by the combination of certain vegetable extract, a natural specific, which he does not extol as a cure-all, but one which admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose being a most positive and reliable remedy for those weaknes and complaints that afflict the women of the present day. This natural specific compound is called Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The following are among those diseases in which this wonderful medicine has worked cures as if by magic and with a certainty never before attained by any medicines: Weak back, nervous and general debility, falling and other displacements of internal organs, resulting from debility and lack of strength in female supporting, internal fever, congestion inflammation and ulceration and very many other chronic diseases to them to women, too proper to mention here, in which the Favorite Prescription has proved entirely efficient in the majority of the cases that have been entrusted to its recovery. Sympathetic Prescription in others cures nine cases in every ten. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists, and dealers in medicines generally. Pamphlet on Diseases of Women, Address Dr. R. V. FOR THE CURE OF Hepatitis or Liver Complaint, DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint.

It is but little more than a quarter of a century since the art of mixing paint was confined almost exclusively to a few comparatively speaking. Now, however, through the ingenuity of BRADLEY, we are not only enabled to apply the paint if we desire, but can see the shades in advance, sample cans being furnished guile, with the different shades or tints, numbered. Those who have used the "Enamel Paint," speak from experience, that it is all that is claimed for it, and evidently supercede the "old style paint." As an evidence of the great worth of the Enamel Paint, we most respectfully request all our readers to carefully read the excellent testimonials of Mr. C. P. Keiser, in this paper.

Willie's Whispers.

I sit and think of Willie's home
All beautiful and bright,
And hear him whisper, "Mother come
To realms of morning light."

Thy little one's happy now,
Sitting at Jesus' feet,
Or gladly running to and fro,
Along the golden street

Don't wish me back, my mother dear,
I'm safe in Jesus' arms,
He saw 'twas best. He called me here.
You know, I'm safe from harm.

Thousands of little ones like me,
Have left their parents dear;
We're all myst[illegible] glad so few
Are sorrowing here.

Oft when you kneel beside my grave
And drop the silent tear,
Dear Willie whisper, do not grieve,
You too will soon be here.

Then when you're sitting all alone,
Still list to Willie's voice,
Come, Mother come, to my bright home
And you too shall rejoice."

"The Curse of Blood."--The Condition of Heathen Salvation.

NUMBER I.

MESSRS. EDITORS: So far, in this discussion, we have reached the conclusion that the heathen, as such, are not required, as a condition of their salvation, to exercise faith in "Christ crucified." Also that God does require the heathen, who have a revelation of Himself, to perform the condition of faith in His existence and character. And that such faith is, in nature, the same with that required of us--a faith that expresses itself in repentance and a new life. In discussing this part of the general subject, it remains only to show or indicate how a revelation of God's existence and character was or may have been made to the heathen, as a means of developing this faith.

Before doing so, however, it may not be amiss, in order to prevent misapprehension, to glance at the relation which the heathen sustain to the atonement. An intelligent orthodox divines make a distinction between what is known as the subjective and the objective effect of Christ's death. Between its propitiatory effect and its moral effect--its result as satisfying the claims of law and securing the gift of the Spirit, and its result in drawing man from sin and Satan to holiness and God. The propitiatory effect of the atonement reaches all men, in a certain sense, unconditionally. It reaches the heathen as really as it does the Christian, securing for him God's favor and the gift of the Spirit. It reaches infants and idiots in the same way, as really as it does rational adults. But its moral effect does not and cannot reach any but those who possess and can, to some extent, appreciate the gospel as given in God's written word. Let us remember, as intimated in my last number that the moral power of the written gospel is embodied in the doctrine of "Christ crucified." Let us remember, too, that the moral power of this doctrine resides in the fact that in "Christ crucified" the sinner sees God's holiness and goodness displayed--His hatred of sin and love of the sinner set forth. He sees in this fact God's estimate of the depravity and danger of sin and the value and beauty of holiness. The faith in Christ that does not take in these attributes of Deity--that does not see these two truths set forth--is practically worthless. It has no transforming power or saving effect. There is certainly no virtue or charm in the dry assent of the intellect to the abstract historical fact that Jesus Christ died for me. My intellect must assent to, and my emotional nature must embrace, the glorious concrete fact that Jesus Christ, as God, so hated sin and so loved me, as to die on the cross in order to conquer sin and save me--My intellect must see, and my emotional nature must feel, in the light and warmth of this fact, that sin is such "an evil and bitter thing," and that holiness is such a glorious and sweet thing that God suffered unto death to save me from the one and put me in possession of the other. In this view of the nature and subject-matter of faith in "Christ crucified," do we see the philosophy of God's requirement of faith in that fact, as well as its transforming power. Hence it is, doubtless, that Paul, in speaking of the "fruit of faith in Christ says, "We all . . . in open face"--affectionate confidence--"beholding as in a glass"--looking at by faith in the gospel--"the glory of the Lord"--God's holiness and love--"are changed into the same image"--are assimilated to His character--"from glory to glory"--from one degree of love and holiness to another--"even as by the Spirit of the Lord"--the transforming power of the Holy Ghost.

Now, the glory of the Lord--God's holiness and love--and man's sin and danger are set displayed to the heathen in the fact of "Christ crucified," for he knows nothing of this fact.--But may not these truths or doctrines be exhibited to him in some other fact or facts? What was the philosophy of the flood and the ark? Has not the world been just as wicked since the flood as it was before that time? If not, did not the moral effect of such a display of God's hatred of sin restrain men from such wickedness? If it has been as wicked since then, why does not God destroy it again? Is destroying the antediluvian, and saving Noah's family, did not God "declare" the "same great moral lesson that is taught in "Christ crucified?"—the truth that God is holy and good--that He hates sin and loves the sinner?--that He will punish the impenitent and bless the penitent sinner? Does not Paul teach as much when he says, "By faith Noah being warned of God of things not seen as yet"—the coming flood—"moved with fear" reverence and a filial fear of offending God--by sin "prepared an ark to the saving of his house"—thus giving practical expression to his conviction of God's truth and justice and confidence in His mercy--by the which he condemned the world"—enlightening and warning them, by thus proclaiming God's threatening and promise, making their continuance in sin inexcusable—"and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith"—secured pardon for past sins by faith in God's justice and mercy, as displayed in His threatening of a flood, and His promise of deliverance through the ark--such faith bringing into repentance and a holy life. Does not Paul teach here that faith in God's character, as revealed in the threatening of destruction by a flood and the promise of deliverance through an ark, was the condition of Noah's receiving the blessing of pardon? Was he not pardoned on condition of faith in the coming fact of a flood and ark, through which fact God's character was revealed, just as really as men in the later prophetic age were pardoned on condition of faith in the coming fact of a dying Savior, through which fact God's character was revealed to their faith?

Take another fact which existed in the days of Noah, and in which God taught him and others substantially the same moral lesson. I refer to the institution and practice of animal sacrifices. Orthodox divines generally hold that these sacrifices were instituted by the Almighty and that they had an important moral significance. It is believed that they prefigured the sacrifice of Christ. At any rate, they are understood to have indicated very clearly to man God's holiness and the demerit of sin, together with man's guilt and God's mercifulness. These sacrifices taught man more or less plainly the same truths that Christ's sacrifice teaches. They taught him that man is guilty and that God's justice demanded his death. They taught further that God is merciful and accepts the death of another in man's stead. The saving faith of Noah and his contemporaries was doubtless developed by a revelation of God's justice and mercy, made through the facts just noticed—the flood and accompaniments and the institution of sacrifices. So also was their faith in, or conviction of their guilt and need of mercy. Just as the saving faith of the Christian is developed by the fact of "Christ Crucified." Other facts connected with the earlier history of our race, through which God's character was revealed to man, might be given. Prominent among them are the deliverance of the Israelites and the overthrow of the Egyptians at the Red [illegible]. Also, the rescue of Lot and family and the destruction of the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah. But I will not dwell upon these displays of God's mercy and wrath.

Now, the question may be asked, just here: Do the heathen know anything more of these facts, in which God's character is displayed, than they do of the fact of "Christ crucified?" And, if so, how has this knowledge been imparted to them? In answer to these questions, I need do nothing more than quote from, or refer the reader to, the writings of the distinguished Richard Watson, who was confessedly one of the profoundest divines of the present century. In speaking of the heathen, he says, "the dispensation of religion under which all those nations to whom the gospel has never been sent, continued dispensation saved under [illegible] knew; and religion became so far corrupted as [illegible] extinct, as to leave no [illegible] tion to men. nothing to [illegible] faith in principle, and what remains known of the original law, [illegible] to determine, unless he [illegible] some authority from [illegible] authority is certainly not available to the conclusion that, in point of fact, the means of salvation are utterly withdrawn from heathens."

I have italicised the words in the above extract, to which I would call special attention. It will be seen that Mr. Watson holds that heathen nations are living under the patriarchal dispensation of light and mercy—the one under which Noah, Abraham and Lot lived and were saved. And more than intimates his belief that the means necessary to develop or "call forth true faith in principle"—faith like ours, in [illegible] among heathen. He [illegible] authority for the opinion that the means of salvation have been utterly withdrawn from heathens." In another passage, which I have not space to quote, Mr. Watson shows that the leading facts and doctrines of the patriarchal revelation and religion are to be found in the mythology of different heathen nations. Such are the creation; the fall and corruption of man, the existence and work of Satan, the flood; the repeopling of the world by the sons of Noah; the expectation of its final destruction by fire, and the promise of a great and Divine deliverance.

If I had the time and space, I think I might easily show how the heathen received or may have received these doctrines and facts, as well as the important moral lessons connected with or growing out of them. Take, for instance, the flood and its moral lessons. These were well known to Noah's sons, and all the heathen have descended from them. It is not difficult to see how the knowledge of this fact and its moral significance might have been handed down through the channel of tradition, from one generation to another, until the present time. The "rainbow," as "the token" of God's "covenant" of mercy with Noah and his descendants, may have been designed by the Almighty to be a constant memorial of the flood, and the sign of God's existence, justice and mercy, as well as of man's guilt, the danger of sin, and the necessity of holiness. And the Dead Sea may have been intended as a monument to proclaim to all preceding generations, whether heathen or Christian, the same solemn and important truths. The sacred writer tells us in so many words that God's design in dealing with Pharoah and the Jews, in Egypt and at the Red Sea, was to display His "power" and "declare" His "name" or character—"wrath" and "mercy"—"throughout the earth," among the heathen. And it is an acknowledged fact that the practice of animal sacrifices may be traced into all heathen nations; their moral significance being, doubtless, more or less clearly understood.

I need not refer to the frequent dispersions of the Jews among the Gentile nations, as means of diffusing important religious knowledge. Streams of spiritual light doubtless flowed out to all heathen nations, from the fountain of Jerusalem, through the channel of these dispersions. But, Messrs. Editors, my article is already too long, and I will not enlarge on this point. Besides, I write very hurriedly, and the press of other engagements would not allow my extending this number if it were expedient to do so.

I hope to conclude this review next week by endeavoring to show, in answer to Bro. Robey's question, why we should send the gospel to the heathen, notwithstanding the fact that their salvation is possible without the Bible.

Family Blood Degeneracy Intemperance.

An observing physician, after many year's practice, has learned to dread an encounter with disease in some family connections, much more than in others. The question naturally arises, why is this? To give a full answer would lead to the discussion of topics not suitable for a family journal. But we may venture upon a recital of some of the prominent causes without encroaching upon grounds too delicate for the general public eye to gaze upon.

It is a well established fact, recognized and acted upon, by all sensible practitioners of medicine, that many diseases have a tendency to repeat themselves in a family through succeeding generations. The longer the disease runs in the connection the less the power of resistance becomes, until finally the family becomes extinct. Sometimes a disease will skip one generation to break forth with renewed violence in the next.

The beginning of these diseases in a family is probably in every instance traceable to some bad conduct in the ancestry. It is often traceable from the child to the parent, or grand parent, and where the family record is well known, it may often be traced back several generations.

Sometimes a disease proves fatal to the entire generation in which it seemed to originate; but there is, in such cases, to be suspected taint in the blood, latent, and only waiting a favorable opportunity of development.

Prominently among the diseases which contribute so much to corrupt and vitiate blood and sink the chances of life to small numbers of years, we would place Alcoholism. This is now properly classed with diseases, upon the most scientific principles. It has the same tendency to repeat itself, as has become so patent, that life insurance companies instruct their medical examiners to give special attention to the subject in every case examined. Any person may begin the habit. The habit grows into an uncontrollable disease, and every child produced, after the disease is fixed in the system, becomes a participant of the consequences of the father's crime. So that the father, in such a case, is not only every day lessening his own ability to escape from the curse, but brings his children within the reach of temptation, and lessens their power of resistance. If the child at maturity has not more than herculean moral strength, he will succumb to the cravings of this appetite. The disease takes a stronger hold on the family blood, and the next generation is brought still nearer into the grasp of the tempter, and with still less power of resistance. Thus generation after generation is plunged deeper and deeper in the gulf of disease, until God in mercy denies them offspring and the family is blotted out. This is a fearful picture, but not more fearful than true. If fathers would not desist for their own sakes, a consideration of the children's welfare should find some tender cord in their bosoms, and induce them to fight the tempter with all the power that human strength, sustained by grace, could bring to bear.

Doctor Wey, of Elmira N. Y., in a recent, able communication to the Medical Record, says, "If the habit of alcoholic indulgence comes by inheritance, a careful analysis of the causes of death in the family for two or three generations will assuredly set forth the fact, that the tendency to 'repeat itself' is as prominently stamped on its brierty as on insanity, cancer, or other well known transmitted disorders." When once the disease breaks forth in a family in its most violent form, there is an inherited and perpetual craving, that drags its victims on to ruin, with a violence that nothing but the Omnipotent hand can arrest. One very melancholy feature of this disease is, that, like all inherited diseases, it often selects in a family some particular period of life to develope itself. I knew a family in which cancer developed itself in each member at the age of forty-five, and one by one they all went down by this taint, inherited from the mother. Apoplexy in some families develops itself at one age, and in other families at another age. So also does tubercular diseases. And so also does alcoholism.

A member of a family, where inebriety has become a transmitted evil, sets out in life with the purest motives to do right, trained perhaps by a good mother, who rejoices at the pious turn of her son, and he does well for a season. But unfortunately that son has inherited the disease of an intemperate father, and when the time of life arrives for the disease to break forth, the mother's hopes are blasted, and community is shocked, by seeing this hopeful man turn suddenly from all his first principles and plunge, irretrievably, in the whirlpool of vice, where he is soon lost, to all sense of shame, and becomes and ends an ignoble career in the madhouse, or dungeon, or goes out of life in some secret place where he has been concealed from public scorn. It may be set forth as an unexceptionable truth, that, he who indulges habitual intoxication, not only perpetrates repeated assaults upon his own life, but equally assaults the life of his posterity. He becomes guilty, not only of suicide, but of murder: not the murderer of one but of many, unless a kind Providence should deny him posterity.

All transmitted diseases may be palliated and sometimes driven back, by proper medical treatment, and caution on the part of the victim. Where the disease is not too deeply fixed it may be eradicated by introducing better blood from families without the fatal taint, and caution, and prudence, with high morality, may, after many generations, drive the last symptom out of sight. But such experiments are always with great danger to the better blood.

The better this subject is understood the more cautious will people become on the subject of intermarriage with diseased family blood. And I know of no disease that man or woman should shun with more abhorence than hereditary Alcoholism.

Preachers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DEAR BRETHREN:—As you are aware, Conference season has nearly passed, and we have the returns of the missionary collections from the Treasurers of the Annual Conference boards. These, when compared with the appropriations made last spring at the annual meeting of the Board of Missions, will show that we will not have on hand after the drafts of the last year shall all have been paid, more than money enough to meet the drafts for the first quarter of the current year. Now, the question is, What shall be done? We must have means to meet the second quarter's drafts, or the missionaries will suffer, and the work will have to be suspended. There never has been a time since the organization of our Church when there has been so great a demand upon us for men and means, and there never has been so much to encourage us in our work—especially in the foreign department. In the great West the fields are white unto the harvest. The work among the Indian tribes, and our opportunity for doing missionary work in China, is becoming more and more interesting; and the work in Mexico, as you will see from our Church-publications, is almost miraculous.

And now, on the one hand, we see the "effectual door" that God opens before us: on the other, an empty treasury. The Great Head of the Church tests our faith and love in this providential appeal which he makes to our gratitude and liberality. Let us show our appreciation of the gospel that has saved us, by enlarged contribution to the glorious work of converting those who are still sitting in the valley and shadow of death.

According to the new plan of conducting our missionary enterprise, the collections for the Board at Nashville are to be kept separate from those made for Domestic Missions in the various Annual Conferences. Now, we suggest and urge that brethren go to work early and raise their assessment for Foreign Missions, and remit the amount collected to the Treasurer or Secretaries at once, and a receipt will be sent in return, which will be a voucher at the meeting of the Annual Conferences for the amount forwarded to Nashville.

Now, brethren, please to heed this call, for unless collections are made and forwarded, it will be impossible to meet the drafts already drawn for our work in foreign fields.

And we appeal also to individual members and friends of our Church, and the friends of Missions, and ask them to send to us what they are willing to give to sustain the cause for which Jesus gave his life. Oye lovers of the Saviour, come to our help: and while Christ opens the door, let us step in and do the Master's work. We must let no man take our crown! Who will respond?

Brethren in the ministry, we beseech you, be prompt, and do not suffer the cause to fail for want of the amount you can raise in your respective charges.

We repeat what we have already said in another connection: "The amounts assessed to the Annual Conferences must be raised. It is a simple necessity. There is no margin for failure. If we fail, our plans will be thwarted, and our missionaries afflicted. If we fail, enlargement becomes impossible. If we fail, contraction is inevitable—and farther contraction will be death. The amounts named in these assessments do not represent our conception of the duty of the Church, but our estimate of the very least amount with which we can, for the current year, conduct the Mission work committed to us. It should be a point of sacred honor with each pastoral charge in our Connection, not to fall below its assessment, and sacred ambition to go beyond it."

The knowledge of God is gained as a knowledge of man is gained—by living much with him. If we only come across a man occasionally and in public, and see nothing of him in his private and domestic life, we cannot be said to know him.

In the ruins of Pompeii there was found a petrified woman who, instead of trying to fly from the destroyed city, had spent her time in trying to gather up her jewels. There are multitudes making the same mistake. In trying to get earth and heaven they lose both. "We cannot serve God and mammon." Be one thing or the other.

A GENTLEMAN travelling on a steamer, one day at dinner was making way with a large pudding close by, when he was told by a servant that it was dessert "It matters not to me," said he; "I would eat it if it were a wilderness."

A Sister's Love.

There is something inexpressibly touching in a sister's love. Her heart is a realm of pure and earthly affection, and happy should that brother be to whom she clings through the changing scenes of the blighting world. She has been his companion in childhood, she watched the development of his mind and person, she has admonished him when wrong, and smiled upon his triumphs, she has peopled his mind with the treasures of her own, she has taught him those virtues which will render him a useful member of society, prepare him for death, and embalm his memory when he has passed away. Sooner can you bind the free wind thus seal up the springs of such mysterious affections. They will flow on, and the desert and cave cannot forget their progress. And as sorrow and misfortune strip from life its charms and dreams there is one recollection that will come like music to a brother's heart—that will thrill upon its darkened and troubled depths with a strange yet sweet melody, and bring up scenes of home and childhood long unremembered. It is the recollection of a sister's love

MEMORIES.

Addressed to R. H. W., Esq., Durham, N. C.

I am thinking, brother, thinking
Of our childhood days of glee;
And in sweetest memories linking
You, the other THREE, and me.

Those old scenes, don't you remember
Merry friends and music played;
Christmas joys in bright December?
O, some happy times we had!

To our home, God's heralds often
With their beauteous message came;
And our infant hearts did soften
At the sound of Jesus' name.

Recollections of our neighbors
And the churches where we met,
Tho' some long have ceased their labors
Linger in my memory yet.

Things have changed and we are parted
School-days, rapidly they sped;
And our parents, loving hearted,
Both are sleeping with the dead.

Purple lilacs in the grave-yard—
Oft I sought their silent shade;
Set me down upon the green sward
Near where the beloved are laid.

Life's arena now we've entered;
May God bless my brothers, dear,
Choicest love on Him be centered,
Onward, upward, their career!

Sisters, "love at home's" protection,
They are worth their weight in gold;
Heart brim full of pure affection
For the loved ones, all, I hold.

Brother, there's a "Blest Forever,"
"Friends and flowers and music too;
God's too good to always sever
Those who HERE are pure and true.

The old earth must be remodeled,
Ere the great "Millennium" dawn,
And for our freed souls new bodies,
Bright, immortal, shall be born.

And we'll meet and know each other,
That we knew and loved while here;
In those glorious mansions, brother,
God will wipe away each tear.

Then we'll see the Great Redeemer!
And our bliss will perfect be;
For I'll be no idle dreamer
When from DEATH He rescues me.

The Physical Forces are Modes of Ether Pressure.—Professor Challis, of Cambridge University, after long and exhaustive researches upon galvanic and magnecic action, concludes that the hydrodynamical theory of action is alone correct. The theoretical explanation of galvanic and magnetic phenomena is to be sought by means of mathematical deductions. The author believes that the science of theoretical physics, laid down in Newton's "Principia," is by no means confined to physical astronomy, but comprehends the principles of all departments of natural philosophy which have relation to physical force. His conclusions on galvanic and magnetic action have been reached in conformity with Newton's rules and principles. The author's main conclusions, relative to the modus operandi of the physical forces, to which this system of phylosophy seems to point, are. That they are all modes of pressure of the ether; that the forces concerned in light, heat, molecular attraction and repulsion, and gravity are dynamical results of vibrations of the ether; and that electricity and galvanic and magnetic forces are due to its pressure in steady motions.

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.—A missionary in India says that he regards the conversion of one woman as equal to the conversion of twenty men, so far as their influence in the propagation of Christianity in that country is concerned.

Reports are current in Church circles that the Vatican consistory will shortly nominate a successor to Pope Pius IX, and further stated that there is a growing probability that Archbishop Manning will be chosen and recognized as successor to the Pontifical robe during his stay in Rome.

THOSE who are the loudest in their threats are always the weakest in the execution of them.

THE MINISTRY OF SORROW.

Why are we Made to Mourn?

BY REV. S. P. LINN,

WHAT is the ministry of grief? What purpose does God design all this suffering and sorrow to effect? This is a question which sooner or later must force itself upon every thoughtful mind, and happy is he who has been enabled to rightly solve it by the logic of his own experience. To the Christian this question admits of a ready answer. It is that we may become prostrate at the feet of Jesus. It is to convince us of our need of a Saviour. It is to win us away from the perishing things of earth, and to make us meet for heaven. This world is not our home, and we are not to make its transient joys our supreme delight. We must be weaned from the world and made to rest our hopes upon something better, higher, more satisfying and enduring than anything this world can afford. It is the love of Christ in which we are to find our supremest good. A love that never wavers, notwithstanding our wanderings and ingratitude; a love that stoops to gracious ministeries, that pardons, purifies, comforts, love that makes itself known by its helpful sympathies its sacrifices and sufferings for others, its communications to them of the joy of its own life. It is in this love that the weary, sin-sick heart is to find its joy and rest, or it will remain forever unsatisfied, and we should welcome every trial, every cross, that leads us more earnestly to embrace this love.

Pain seems to be one of God's most efficient agents, and sorrow, strange as it may appear, is the mirror in which man sees most deeply into truth and duty. Trial and emotion exalt and strengthen. There are sufferings which are nobler, more elevating, than the sweetest enjoyments. They free us. They give us wings. We fly upward in the night, guided by its stars, refreshed by its dews. The darkest night that ever fell upon the world, never hid the stars; never put out their light. It only made the star more visible; more keenly, kindly glaneing, as if in protest against the darkness.

"Religion is gloomy," cries the world; but it is a slander upon religion to say or to insinuate that it deprives men of the comfort and joy of life. Satan, to discourage men from the ways of God, puts a frightful mask on the beautiful face of religion; but the mask is a disfigurement, a lie. Christianity forbids no enjoyment not succeeded by sorrow; no pleasure that does not end in pain. The Christian has joy as other men have in the common mercies of life. God made joy to be the

and all things in heaven and on earth are working together for good, for the happiness of those who love God and are called according to His purpose. God has meant us to be happy. He has placed sources of enjoyment above us, around us, beneath us. He has garnished the heavens with beauty, and flooded the world with light and heat. He has sweetened the air with fragrance, and scattered in boundless profusion resources of comfort and wealth. He covers the hills with a livery of green and robes the fields with verdure and bloom. He opens His hand and satisfies the desires of every living thing. And He has sent Jesus into the world bringing joy, bestowing His Gospel as a gift of joy, and sending His disciples to preach glad tidings of great joy to all people.

Oh! does this look like an angry, unreconciled God, who delights in the misery of His creatures? On the contrary, is there not abundant evidence that "God is good, and that His mercy endureth forever? And is there not enough of joy in this world, with all its misery, to prove that we are now in a state of discipline and probation, and not of retribution?

We shrink back from the sorrow of the future as from the cold and damp of the grave. Like a timid child, we dread to go forward alone into the darkness; and if the shadows that fall along our pathway here were not met and dispersed by the auroral light of the love of Jesus, then would we be of all men most miserable; but when we look upon Jesus the sufferings of the present are for when we are weak, then in Him are we strong. He gives us pardon for past sins, strength for present weakness, hope against future struggles and despair, and thus we boldly place our feet upon the past and stretch out our hands towards the future, knowing that it will not be long till we shall see His face, and shall be forever happy in His love.

The Christian may at times be sorrowful. Indeed, while man is born unto sorrow, it seems that the child of God is ordained to sorrow; but heaven is around him in sorrow, [illegible]'s greatness flows around his incompleteness.

Round his restlessness his rest,"

and his grief is but the back-ground on the canvas, where divine love shines out in increasing splendor. All true strength is sorrow-born. From the grave of dead hope we rise to newness of life. From a disappointed ambition we work out a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. There is no strength like the strength of him who has breasted his disappointments and overcome them, whose feet are planted upon the wreck of his own plans, and who by God's grace, can bear up under his trials as the Alps bear up under the snow and the ice.

If we have believed in Christ, the tribulations of earth are all the hell we will ever have. Welcome then pain and sorrow. They cannot always last. The people of God will not always be darkened by sin and embittered by grief. The followers of Jesus cannot always remain saddened by guilt and tormented by remorse. The sorrows of earth are working for good, and must soon give place to the glories of heaven. No pain, no palm; no thorn, no throne; no cross, no crown; no gall, no glory.

[Christian at Work.]

What Rome Would Do if She Dared.

The meaning which Romanists attach to the teaching of their church concerning the supremacy of the Pope, as augmented by the decree of infallibility, has been betrayed by a writer in a recent number of the Dublin Review, a journal which, as our readers know, is a representative Roman Catholic organ, and is not wont to speak ignorantly on any subject connected with the hierarchy or its claims. In the course of an article a writer in the Review said: "The Pope, in virtue of his ecclesiastical office, has the power of deposing any sovereign whose government he may consider injurious to the spiritual welfare of that country." This is the whole of the case in a nutshell. Nothing that the bitterest opponent of Rome could say by way of characterization of the presumptuous pretensions of the Pope could be more to the point or more condemnatory. It amounts to just this: Any government that he—i. e., the Pope—may consider injurious to the spiritual welfare of a country may be deposed by him and another substituted. What, then, let Americans ask themselves, would become of the government of every Protestant country—of England or of the United States, for instance—if this asserted power to overturn governments and override their constitutional forms resided in the heads of the Pope? The publication of such an [illegible]cription of power to the Pope, by leading Romish periodical, indicates the undercurrent of Roman Catholic opinion, and betrays its secret wishes and intentions. Every man must feel that the reservation to himself by the Pope of such a power, to be asserted whensoever a propitious occasion arises, constitutes him the public enemy of mankind—the universal foe of civil government, of the allegiance of peoples, of patriotism, and of law and order.

What Rome would do to all nations, if she dared and saw her way clear, is exemplified by what her representatives are in fact now doing in a country where the civil arm is weak, the people ignorant and unstable, and superstition rife. We refer to the republic of Chili, in South America.—In that country three of the principal dignitaries of the Romish Church have publicly excommunicated the President of the republic, the ministry, the Council of State and the Chamber of Deputies, the object being to coerce these officials and all others who refuse to subordinate the constitution and laws of the land to the demands of the church. Three bishops have issued a pastoral, which is an echo of the time in Europe when Rome dominated the world and assumed to hold it in bondage. It is also a warning of the policy that she would again pursue everywhere if she could bring the nations to her feet. By the terms of this pastoral, whoever refuses obedience to the mandates of the church, whatever may be his rank or station, is condemned to "eternal perdition," and especially those, as declared by the Pope himself, "who dictate laws or decrees against the liberty or rights of the church."

Romish bishops have not yet presumed for any reason to condemn to "eternal perdition" the President of the United States and his cabinet, the Senate and the House of Representatives; and if they should have the audacity to doso, their sentence would be the merest brutum fulmen in the present condition of the country and state of public opinion among our people.—But if the case were different—if the United States were weak or rent by dissensions, its people dominated by Romish superstition, and Rome had us "on the hip," as she has Chili—who could doubt but that her imprudent ecclesiastics would apply the lash to us, just as they are now doing in Chili, at the risk of revolution and anarchy.—Christian Intelligencer.

Suggestions to Stewards and Church Members.

The ministers of Christ are God's workmen. They are his chosen instruments in the propagation of the gospel and for the spread of Scriptural holiness among men. They are divinely called—called of God and commissioned by him to "preach the word." They do not take up this sacred office, or thrust themselves into the field through choice or for worldly gain. Sometimes men, it may be, enter the ministerial ranks from improper motives, but generally they soon discover their mistake and retire in shame and disgrace. The sacrifices are too great, labors too abundant, and the pecuniary resources too meager for any but those who are moved by the Holy Ghost to take upon themselves the office of the Christian ministry.

But we set out to make a plea, short but pointed, in behalf of our preachers. They have just reached their new fields of labor. A kind word, a pleasant smile and a hearty welcome cost but little, but they make a flood of sunshine for the preacher and his family. Having taken leave of their former charges—parted with dear friends—those who had learned to anticipate every want and to sympathize with them in their troubles—they are now, upon their first introduction into your midst, entitled to some special demonstrations of kindness and tender regard. It will gladden their hearts and better fit them for their work. Send them a few pounds of butter, a ham or chickens, a barrel of flour, sugar and coffee, and thus give them a practical demonstration of your esteem and appreciation of their office and work. To some this may appear insignificant and out of place, but we know whereof we speak. Try the experiment and God will bring it to pass in your own experience that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

There is no period when your pastor feels more keenly the need of money than at the commencement of his ecclesiastical year. He may have received the entire assessment from his charge last year—exercised the greatest economy in every department of his domestic arrangements, and yet he owes you, it may be, without a dollar left to buy even the necessaries of life. He does not like to call upon the stewards for such an early payment. This would be embarrassing to him. He does not wish to endure the mortification of being regarded as hasty in his calls for money, as is sometimes the case with men of narrow, contracted views of the duty of the people to their pastors. The way to meet this difficulty and to relieve the embarrassment is for the stewards and others, who have the love of the church at heart, to pay something at the beginning of the year. Do not wait until the first quarterly meeting, or until the assessment is made, and your preacher has made a round on his circuit. By so doing you may subject him to the humiliation of asking credit of a stranger—of a member of some other church than his own; or perchance of one not a member of any church. Such a state of things ought not to be allowed, and will not be where the people are fully alive to the best interests of the church. Pay something now. Do not put it off to the close of the present month, quarter or to the end of the year. It will be worth more to your preacher now than at any other time.

As the weather has been so very inclement, and the preachers have had but little opportunity to mingle with the people for the past ten or fifteen days, we have concluded to extend the time of cutting off delinquents one week longer so as to give all a chance to renew.

A goodly number to whom bills were sent last week have responded promptly to the call. Renewals as well as new subscriptions are coming in daily and the outlook for 1875 is most promising.

Rev. T. P. Bernard writes from Albemarle that he met with a glorious reception from the people of his new charge. His letter breathes a complacent, peaceful and spiritual spirit that is truly refreshing.

Any person sending a club of ten subscribers to the Advocate for one year, with the cash, will receive a copy twelve months free of charge.

Organization

At the beginning of the year, all classes of men lay their plans and gather up strength for carrying them into execution. Individuals and corporations take an account of their positions in the past, strike balances, measure their resources, increase their capital, if they can, put vim into old agencies and supply new ones for an active campaign for the year. Generals count their forces and perfect the organization of corps, brigades and regiments to meet the movements which they know will be made as soon as the spring sun brings the enemy from his quarters and glances on his bayonets. Good organization is many strides to success and old campaigners know its utility in winning victories.

Like everything else, the church must organize if it would be successful. Its agencies, corrected as they are, must be made to aid and support one another. Rank and file must know their places, understand each other and move in an unbroken line against the enemy. It will not do for the church to lose its organization and go into winter quarters. The enemy is one who has no tents to pitch and is not stopped in his march by swollen rivers, muddy roads and cumbrous impedimenta. He is ever on the march—"going up and down in the earth," "roaming about" not listlessly but with a wary eye and set purpose. And to meet his attacks, or make aggressive movements, the church must be "wise as a serpent" and have its available forces in working order and under good control.

Is the Sunday school active and prosperous? its officers zealous and vigilant and its members interested and diligent? In every family in the church represented in the school—the training ground of the church—and do the parents lend the influence of their presence and aid in the work of the school? No church can well advance that does not attend with care to the instruction of the young. A band of children growing up in the church, acquiring a knowledge of and love for its usages, is a sure pledge of the interest and fidelity of the parents. When Napoleon said "Give me the children of France and I'll rule it," besides meaning that he would train them to his service, he meant that the hearts of doting parents would bend in fealty to him who held their offspring as hostages. So, the young placed in the care and following of Christ, will not only wax in love and efficiency for the service, but by the tender cords of nature will draw the hearts of parents with them.

Are the prayer, church and class-meetings well attended, or do only small and feeble companies gather to give encouragement to the pastor and mutual aid and comfort to one another? These meetings should not be omitted for they are of scarcely less importance than those for the preaching of the word by the ministers. If well attended and conducted, the church-meetings promote activity, interest and zeal among the members, and perfect the organization that is so much needed in the Church. Let the minister put praying bands to work, holding meetings at the homes of church members and non-communicants. Mr. Wesley found them effective in furthering his great work of reform and their efficiency has not ceased in these later days of Methodist conquest.

Suggestive.

People who attend church should give their undivided attention to the preacher. Look him in the face and do not sit with your heads down or assume the attitude of listless auditors.

It is a good index to the character of people "at home," to see the gates upon the premises either broken down or all the while left standing open.

The habit of visiting from house to house on the Lord's day for mere social pleasure, or for the transaction of business, is an evil which should have no place among those professing Christianity.

Persons who have most to say of what they contribute to benevolent objects, are usually less liberal than those who never parade their acts of benevolence before the public.

A strictly selfish person is a fruitful source of trouble in a family and in a community.

We invite attention to the announcement of the spring session of Trinity College. This is our Conference college, and we trust our people will give it the preference over any and all others in or out of the State. It ranks with the best institutions of our church. Bro. Sharpe, the agent of Trinity, is fully competent for the position, and we commend him to our people as an earnest, faithful Methodist preacher, and a high toned Christian gentleman. The readers of the Advocate may expect to hear from him soon on the duty of giving to the cause of education.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate is the adopted organ of the N. C. Conference, and every Methodist in the State ought to subscribe for it and use all available means to give it a still more extended circulation. Terms $2.20 per annum, postage prepaid at this office.

The memory of the just is blessed; but the name of the wicked shall rot.

Dark Pictures

Every man is, in a sense, an artist, painting pictures of everything he sees around him and at a distance. He follows upon the canvas of his thought and memory a copy of surrounding objects, passing events and coming scenes, varying in distinctness according to the strength of his perception and retentiveness, and tinged with the colors that his feelings supply. If he is gay and buoyant, the canvas will glow with a golden tinge and extravagant colors: if he is morose, gloomy and fretful, the distorted objects will grope in darkness unrelieved by a touch of light; but if he is calm, sensible and christianly, the picture he draws will realize the perfection of the art and display the beauty and grace of commingled light and shade—the sky being flecked with occasional clouds and the forest relieved of its gloom by slanting glances of the sun as it filters its light through the leafy branches and works its beautiful mosaic on the sward below.

Some men are constitutionally gloomy and will not see objects except with a jaundiced eye. Although there is light everywhere they raise screens before it and prefer to remain in the sombre reading their dark pictures of life and the future. If an object has a dark spot they will turn it around and look until the spot is discovered and photographed on their memory. They search out defects and ignore the points of perfection. Amid upon the canvas of memory and hold them in the foreground to the exclusion of all beauties. In their associations with fellow men, they keep prominent the faults and blemishes of character, and place in the background the traits whose loveliness would make us what is fault and bad. When compelled by circumstances to say something in praise of a person, they qualify it with a saving clause in which some objectionable quality is suggested and endorse a compliment in such a grudging way as to [illegible] pleasure it was intended to give.

We have known sisters of dark pictures and [illegible] with suspicion and hatred. Their whole words and [illegible] are out of order. We pity—those whose hearts are full of the coloring of envy and jealousy we regard as exciting an opportunity to [illegible] former need quiet and [illegible] the continued [illegible] of religion.

Rare Poetry.

The Rev. Chas. F. Smith, writing from Washington, D. C. to the London Methodist Recorder, closes thus: "On my way home of our journey we [illegible] of the pioneer work of the Methodist preachers. There is scarcely a village or [illegible] they did not introduce the gospel. One of these worthy men, who chiefly labored in Illinois, has recently gone to his reward in the early years of his ministry he not only had to contend with heathenism and worldliness, but also had many a strong fight with his neighbors, the Baptists, on the water question. These lively polemics offered but little quarter to each other. In one of Mr. Sinclair's circuits the Baptists issued the following manifesto:

> Go, read the third of Mathew:
> Go, read the chapter through;
> And let John the Baptist teach
> What Christians ought to do.

One brotherly brother accepted the challenge without hesitation, and announcing to his people that others besides Baptists could make poetry, treated them to the following reply:

> I have read the third of Mathew—
> I have read the chapter through,
> And find that John the Baptist
> Was nothing but a Jew.

This answer was regarded by the congregation as settling the whole question.

Rev. J. P. Moore, Presiding Elder of the Raleigh District, spent last week in the city, holding quarterly meetings at Edenton Street Church on the 9th and 10th inst., and at Person Street on the 16th and 17th inst.

The Methodist Church at Durham is soon to have a new organ to cost $275. Methodism, we are glad to learn, is growing with the growth of the town.

Address, F. L. Reid,
Louisburg, N. C.

1st, January 1875

Watch Night, Annville.

We met in our Church, at ten o'clock at night. Scripture lessons were read. Several prayers were offered. The beautiful Watch-night Hymns were sung. We had exhortations. The Lord blessed us. At the midnight hour we were led in prayer by Rev. J. S. Kendall, M. D. who is over 80 years old. We thus renewed our covenant. 'Twas good to be there. The Lord did greatly bless us.

The Roman Catholic authorities affect great opposition to secret societies. Why do they not denounce the Order of the Jesuits?

Rev. Henry Boehm.

The oldest Methodist minister in America, Henry Boehm, lives in New Jersey and will be one hundred years old next May. He was one of the twenty five clergymen who attended the first General Conference of American Methodists, was a traveling companion and cherished friend of Bishop Asbury, enjoys good health and clear mind, and read the entire book of Revelations on last Christmas Day. In a book recently published, he gives an account of the great revival of 1800, and makes the following reference to its effect in Maryland:

"There is not a preacher living, who was at the General Conference of 1800. Of all the interested observers of that body and its doings I only remain. A great revival of religion prevailed in Baltimore during this General Conference. The revival began on Cecil circuit, Eastern Shore of Maryland, where Dr. Chandler was the preacher in charge. He was a great revivalist. He was very powerful, in his appeals, and a mighty instrument in promoting the work of God. He was wise in planning, and judicious, skillful, and effective in executing, so that the revival movement was under the most able management. A great deal depends upon the arrangement of matters in revivals, and Chandler was a general. The work spread through the whole peninsula. Over many counties it rushed like fire. Everywhere there was intense excitement. Chandler, as the master spirit, went to and fro, preaching and guiding the movement. The meetings at numerous places were held daily. People frequently fall as if pierced through the head by a bullet. I was an actor in this remarkable revival, and I have seen strong men in attempting to go out of the meeting fall as if slain in battle. From Cecil Circuit, where the work began, it spread to Baltimore. It was introduced into Baltimore by friends from that city attending a quarterly meeting held on Cecil Circuit. When they returned they carried the fire with them. Then the General Conference began its sessions in the city, and gave an impetus to the movement. The members of the Conference entered heartily into the work. The Divine influence fell upon the congregations and overwhelmed them. Some would fall to the floor, others to their knees, while all would feel more or less the effect of the power. So pervasive and mighty was the work that persons would sometimes fall prostrate while walking on the street. At times the excitement threatened to break up the business of the Conference. It swept over the whole city."

Religion and Ratios.

Bro. Lafferty, of the Richmond Advocate, is as spriglidly and quaint with his pen as Rev. Dr. Talmage ever dared to be, and in the last issue of the Advocate in an article on "Friendliness and Feeling," sparkling with wit and good humor, has the following paragraph on the relation of rations to religion:

"There was a fitness of things in gathering the successors of the apostles near the seashore. The 'pillars' of the sacred College were partners in a fishery. The fish is a Christian symbol. The initial letters of the sacred title of the Saviour form the Greek word for fish—ichthus. The Christian tombs in the Catacombs were often designated only by a carved fish on the stone. So it happened that preachers are partial to fish. Of course the Conference at Elizabeth City was smooth. There is nothing that harmonizes men like good feeding. The English are right. They start every enterprise of consequence by a big dinner, and reinforce it now and then by others of like extent. The alliterative sentiment that joins "peace and plenty" is sound philosophy.—Political theorists may prate about statesmanship, but revolutions come when the rations run out. People change their rulers when poverty prevents them from changing their plates. Religion is rational. A good dinner is means of grace. The scriptural figure which places the seat of compassion in the digestive functions—"bowels of mercies"—has a deep psychological significance. Isaiah describes the invaders of Israel as fierce "as evening wolves." The wolf fasts all day and in the evening is in search of his prey. It is an image of vicious hunger. One of the figures of heaven is a tree with twelve manner of fruits. Abraham knew the wise diplomacy of hearty hospitality. He began by dining the angel. When Achilles sat mad and sullen in his tent, Homer tells how the effort to get the "Swift-footed" in good humour again was inaugurated by a big banquet.—Judge Moore, of Kentucky, when a Confederate Congressman, told this writer of a rare example of the power of the commissary on Christianity. The Judge was present in his Legislature when the member from Big Sandy—an unlettered delegate—made a speech on the relation of rations to religion. The question was: whether the premium paid for killing wolves and foxes should be abolished. The member nodded to the Chair and said: "Mr. Speaker, is this House going to take away the consolations of religion from Big Sandy? Sir, no Episcopal parson preaches there, for nobody has read enough to scotch for him. The Presbyterians, the properest preachers in the world, won't come, because we can't always hold in and behave ourselves. The Baptists have dried all the streams about there with a pole and none of the creeks are deep enough, and they are skittish about takin' 'em into Big Sandy, for that ain't a place to tussle in if you can't swim. They were afraid to undertake Big Sandy, so they quit.—The Methodists are our only chance. If Kentucky don't keep on paying people for killing wild varmints the foxes and wolves will catch all the chickens, and then you may say farewell to the Circuit-riders." The House didn't take away the "consolations of religion" from Big Sandy, but paid for killing the "varmints."

Who knows but the daily banquets of a certain Methodist matron in Elizabeth City was the cause that two Elders were so tractable and genial as "Juno's Swans!" Mayhaps, the Cabinet was touched with the gentle influence of crabs and custards, and like a sacred oil, it lubricated the machinery of the Council. Such dinners could "run" a Conference without a screak.

Didn't the cuisine of the city cause the concord of the Conference?"

Messrs Editors: I see that Bro. Robey again appears in the Advocate with a 4½ column article in continuation of his paper on "The Curse of Blood," and as a rejoinder to the strictures of Bro Yates and myself.—Bro. R. is not very complimentary to his reviewers, but I am not surprised at the character of his rejoinder. Nor am I at all angered by it. When I first read it, I was forcibly reminded of the tactics usually adopted by men who are engaged in the defence of a weak cause: that is, to charge their opponents with "misrepresentation," ignorance of the question at issue, "strategy," "mere talk," etc. My mind was also involuntarily directed to the habit of the cuttle-fish, when pursued by an enemy. And somehow or other I could not help thinking of the usual resort of the determined Calvinist, when pressed by his Arminian opponent with the baldness of his doctrine of unconditional reprobation. It really looked to me that Bro. Robey was changing his base, and that he raised the cry of 'misapprehension,' 'misrepresentation,' 'strategy,' etc., on our part, to divert attention from his 'strategy,' and to cover his retreat and hide the breach that had been made in his line of defence. But, since giving his article a second reading, I am persuaded that Bro. R. really believes that we 'have never studied' the subject, that our 'opinions' concerning the heathen are 'crude,' and that we 'utterly misapprehend the whole subject.' He seems really to believe that we misunderstood his position entirely. Possibly we did. But I am not yet quite prepared to appreciate his reference to our 'strategy.' He evidently more than intimates that we, unlike himself, are 'striving for victory' instead of 'seeking for truth.' As for myself, I may unconsciously be a 'mere talker and mystifier of truth,' but I am sure that I am not in the habit of constructing 'men of straw' and knocking them down for the sake of an apparent triumph over an opponent. And I am perfectly willing for your intelligent and unprejudiced readers to decide whether I have done so in this case. But, Messrs. Editors, when I remember the weakness of Bro. Robey's cause and the strength of my own, I am ready to forgive his uncharitable fling, and to forego the pleasure and wrong of retaliating.

Bro. Robey says we misunderstood his position. Well, while I may regret it, I have this consolation, that we were not alone in our "misapprehension." He says substantially that he does not believe that the heathen are 'punished' because they never heard the gospel—that God damns them for not believing on Christ.—Well, I certainly so understood him to teach in his first article, and so did others. He says that the heathen are damned because they are sinners. That is, because they have transgressed the moral law, and not because they fail to comply with the law of faith. Well, I think I understand his position now. And, although I "have never studied" the subject, I will venture the "crude opinion" that his present position is as unscriptural and untenable as the one I at first thought he occupied. As a "mystifier of truth," I can not see that Bro. Robey has gained anything by his apparent change of position. All this I hope to make fully appear in due time. The printer has had the fourth number of my review of Bro Robey's paper more than two weeks. I think that if Bro. R. had waited to see my fifth and closing number, he would have been saved the trouble of writing much of his last article touching the importance of human agency and the gospel in reaching and saving men, both here and in heathendom. More anon.

Educational.

From fifteen to twenty of the Middle Class in Yale Seminary are expected to spend the summer vacation of 1875 four months, in preaching on the frontier, probably in Kansas.

The Lutheran Seminary at Gettysburg, Pa, has forty-one students, twelve of whom are in the Senior class, and who will be ready next summer to enter the field. Nearly all college graduates.

The mission of the Reformed Church at Yokohama has bought the ground formerly held by the United States for a marine hospital, with the intention of erecting a girls' school upon it.

Soon after Gen. R. E. Lee became President of the Washington University, Gerritt Smith contributed $2.000 to the University, the first aid given to it after Gen. Lee assumed the presidency.

Last week a number of friends met by invitation, at the house of Thomas Branch, Esq., President of the Board of Trustees of Randolph Macon College, to consider the best method for raising funds for the proposed buildings and endowments. Speeches were made by Rev. Dr. Duncan, Rev. A. G. Brown, Sec., and others. The result was a subscription of $3,000 from those present.

A Letter from Lincolnton.

Messrs. Editors: With your permission, I will say a few things through the Advocate, but will be brief—I must not to consume too much of your time and space.

Allow me first to take an affectionate leave of my former noble little charge, South Guilford. The brethren there ontdid themselves in the way of liberality and marked kindness to me, which I shall ever remember with due gratitude. God bless and prosper them!

The distance from Lexington, my former home, to this place is 70 miles; via Charlotte, on Rail, 90 miles. There is no finer section in the State than that stretching from Lexington to Lincolnton, abounding as it does in fertile lands, numerous water powers, vast quantities of timber, iron ore, mineral springs and the like; it is the very county for wealth, health and happiness.

The good people of Lincolnton know how to do clever things for their preacher. We arrived here last week, weary, worn and sleepy with night travel. But our excellent Bro. Jenkins met us at the Depot with a carriage and conveyed us to the Parsonage, where we found some of the ladies of the church ready to receive us. The day was cold, but those kind sisters had good fires to warm us and a sumptuous dinner to feed us. They made guests of us for the time being and took it upon themselves to serve us. Preacher and family forgot the hardships of the way, and felt that they were amongst friends who cared for them.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate is popular in this region. Your request to get up "renewals" shall be attended to. We are ice bound at present; you must await the coming of a thaw. Then we hope renewals will flow into your office as in streams. The preachers and people and schools and colleges all need the paper. The church would be better off to spend more money in that direction. Who can estimate the amount of good accomplished by a good religious newspaper?

Yours, &c., R. G. Barrett.

South Fork Circuit.

Messrs Editors: We arrived at the Parsonage on yesterday evening after spending about six days on the way. Leaving Warsaw on Wednesday morning before day, we reached Wilmington about day break and made our way to Carolina Central R. R. where we found a good coach about ready to leave for Charlotte under the conductorship of our well known and beloved brother, Capt. J. E. Leggett. He is the same christian gentleman at home, at Conference, and upon the road, and makes you feel at home every where with him. We had a pleasant ride to Charlotte where we found ourselves quartered about 8 o'clock P. M. in the Central Hotel under the proprietorship of H. C. Eccles. This is decidedly the best Hotel I ever visited, either in, or out of the State. If you want a good night's rest, you can get it here. If you want a good meal you can get it here, of the best of the world. If you want good attention you can get the very best here, at the shortest notice.

We spent two nights and a day very pleasantly here, and find Charlotte a live place. We visited Bro. P. J. Carraway and found him very comfortably situated in his new Parsonage which reflects credit both upon the gifted pastor and the congregation. He is quite popular. Preach with his people twice. On Friday morning, the opening of a new year, we set out in sleet, sleet, and rain for Lincolnton. We found a pleasant young man as Conductor on this road, and arrived at Lincolnton about noon. The weather being very rough we failed to see much of the place but think it would be a very pleasant place, at least it more agreeable weather. We hired a conveyance and reached Bro. Sunny's in the bounds of my circuit, where we spent the time very agreeably until yesterday morning when we started for the Parsonage. It is quite a comfortable house among the hills and the brethren seem to understand how to make a preacher feel at home. More anon.

"Thereof" 9 Times.

The Children, who read the Advocate, are requested to look up a verse in the Bible in which the word "thereof" is found 9 times.

I hope the Advocate will give the name of the first child who sends the answer. A. D. B.

Who says angels must be all young and splendid? The result of the sale of pews last week in Plymouth church, Brooklyn, is said to have been very gratifying to Mr. Beecher and his congregation. The premiums on the pews amounted to $58,322, and those chairs to $810. The rentals on pews and chairs sold aggregate $6,033, making the total sum paid for seats in the church $71,165, which is an increase of nearly $13,000 over the amount yielded last year. In addition to the seats sold there are 500 free seats.

Kalakaua's History.

In the year 1821, the whale ship Independence, Ford, Mass., foundered in the Pacific Ocean, and all on board perished, with the exception of four sailors, who made their escape in a boat, which after tossing many days on the boundless deep, at last reached the Sandwich Islands then in a state of semi barbarism, that being about the time of the first appearance of Christian missionaries there. One of these was a fine looking, stalwart young man from Barnstable, and in the strange land upon whichhe was cast up from the wasted of waters at once engaged in such pursuits as a vivacious disposition and true Yankee ingenuity discovered, both for employment and livelihood.

He soon succeeded, and in a year or tow after making his settlement among the Kanakas had the extraordinary fortune of marrying the daughter and sole princess of the monarch then on the throne of the Islands. This royal damsel had fallen in love with the wrecked mariner, proposed wedlock in right queenly style, which the young New Englander accepted, for the reason that the King ordered him to do so, or have his head chopped off. Being son-in-law, and recognized as a member of the dynasty, one so adapted himself to the dignity of prince consort, and from this remarkable union the present King of the Sandwich Islands, the only surviving son of the Massachusetts man, out of a large family. The name of Kalakaua denotes the origin of the sovreign, and translated, means "safe journey" or "good speed," referring to the escape of his immediate ancestor from the perils the wave, as related above.—Lake Tribune.

The Little Boy's Watch

Dear little Dick curled up by the fire,
Sat wat hing the shadows come and go,
As the dancing flames leaped higher and higher
Flooding the room with a mellow glow.

His clubby hand on his side was pressed
And he turned for a moment a listening ear;
"Brother," cried he, "I've got a watch!"
I can feel it ticking right under here!"

"Yes, Dick; 'tis a watch that God has made
To mark your hours as they fly away;
He holds the key in his mighty hand,
And keeps it in order night and day.

"Should he put aside the mystic key,
Or lay his hand on the fiery spring,
The wheels would stop and your watch run down,
And lie in your bosom a lifeless thing.'

He crept to my side, and whispered soft
While his baby voice had an awestruck sound
'I wish you would ask him, mother dear,
To be sure and remember to keep it wound!'

APPLES OF GOLD.

I'M A TEMPERANCE BOY.—Charles B. is a boy of fifteen, living in a Western town. He made his first journey to New York, and visits his relatives, many of whom he had never seen. In the house of one of his uncles he set at a Sunday dinner where wine was drank by all—the parents, children and visitors. When it was presented to Charlie he said:

"No, I thank you.'

"What,' said his uncle, "won't you drink wine with your Cousin Nellie, who is so soon to leave us for a home of her own.'

"No, sir,' said Charlie; "I'm a temperance boy.'

That was true bravery. Charlie was among those he had been accustomed to respect, and the temptation would have been very great to many boys. His mother heard it, and said: "Charlie, I am proud of you.'

Which of you would have done as Charlie did? You must learn to say no to everything that would lead you into harm. Better to say no to those who ask you to drink even wine, for drinking wine gives a taste for strong er drink, and then a boy runs rapidly to ruin.

See that noble looking young man, handsome, educated, gentlemanly, the son of good Christian parents, with a good business, and everything to make him respectable, beloved and useful. What is the matter with him? His face is red and bloated, and he totters as he walks. Ah! he did not learn to say no when tempted, and he has fallen a victim to the great voice of the day.—Christian Guardian.

No use of any longer taking the large, repulsive, griping drastic and nauseous pills composed of crude and bulky ingredients and putting in cheap wood or pasteboard boxes, when we can, by a careful application of chemical science, extract all the cathartic and other medicinal properties from the most valuable roots and herbs, and concentrate them into a minute Granule, scarcely larger than a mustard seed, that may be readily swallowed by those of the most sensitive stomachs and fastidious tastes. Each of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets represents in a most concentrated form, as much cathartic power as can be contained in one of the large pills found for sale in the drug stores. From their wonderful cubical le power, in proportion to their size, people who have not tried them are apt to suppose that they are harsh or drastic in effect, but such is not at all the case, the different active medicinal principles of which they are composed being so harmonized, one by one others as to produce a most searching and thorough, yet gentle and kindly opening cathartic. They are sold by dealers in medicines.

Farm, Garden & household.

An Excellent Fertilizer

The Journal of Chemistry says that one of the very best fertilizers used upon the farm for all the cereal grains and root crops may be made in the following manner:

Take one barrel of pure finely ground bone, and mix it with a barrel of good wash ashes, during the mixture add gradually about three pailsful of water. The heap may be made upon the floor of an out building or upon the barn floor; and by the use of a hoe the bone and ashes must be thoroughly blended together. The water added is just sufficient to liberate the caustic alkalies, potash and soda, and these act upon the gelatine of the bone, dissolving the little atoms, forming a kind of soap and fitting it for a kind of plant aliment. In this way the most valuable constituents of the bone can be made immediately available, and the addition of potash and soda aids in the formation of a fertilizer of inestimable value. A gill of this mixture, placed in a hill of corn, will work wonders. It is excellent for garden vegetables and for all kinds of roots. It will be ready for use in a week after it is made.

TRAVELING OR THE FARM.—Did any of your readers, says a correspondent of the American Rural Home, ever think of the amount of travel it takes to raise a crop of corn? I never saw an illustration in print, and I thought I could give you one. I have a twenty-acre field, forty by eighty rods. To break this up would take one hundred and sixty-six miles. Harrowing it, about forty miles. Furrowing out, ninety miles. Planting, forty-five miles, if with a planter; and if chopped and then covered, ninety miles. And for each plowing of two furrows is a row, ninety miles, or five plowings, four hundred and fifty miles. Thus you will see it takes about eight or nine hundred miles of travel to raise twenty acres of corn, not counting going to and returning from the field. Besides, there is some replanting, thinning rolling, etc.

GREENHOUSE CLIMBER.—When this rose was introduced, several years ago, commendations were unanimous and oftentimes extravagant. Its bud is really one of the most lovely that ever graced a rose, and we observed that the Scottish Farmer gives to it the credit of being "the grandest tea-scented rose ever introduced." We also quote other remarks of the Farmer concerning it.

"It is a giant in respect of its size and fullness of flower, and it is a giant too in growth. It won't live on the Manetti stock. It makes an effort when in a young state; but it is so gross a feeder that the supplies which the Manetti send up are quite insufficient to keep up the system of the scion. It does much better on the brier. There the nourishment is less stinted, and it accommodated itself to the foreign stock. Whenever it gets a chance, however, away it goes on its own account, sending forth roots at the junction, and reveling in good loamy soil wherever it is placed within root reach. We saw a remarkable instant of this in the British Botanic Gardens. A plant had been budded on briar and was planted in a conservatory, in a tub full of good soil. The Marechal grew and grew, until it quite astonished the curator, who found that it had run right away from the stock and was living principally upon its own resources. The upshot was that in May there where over two hundred blossoms fully expanded at one time—a glorious sight in flora. It was quite a wonder, covering many yards of the roof of the house with its great, full, fine yellow blossoms."

Reliable Testimony.

It cannot be reasonably supposed that when a person test fies to the efficacy of a remedy where none but he has experienced, within 1 solicitation, that he does so for the purpose of misleading the public, or from any other motive than that of great kindness. It is still more unreasonable to suppose that envious prejudice would corroborate the evidence thus given unless they were persuaded of its truth. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has repeatedly been given, it would be absurd to question the intrinsic virtues of the Bitters. Skepticism upon this point was long ago disarmed, and thousands as much prejudiced against patent medicines as known than many of the old-fashioned remedies which for are now ignominiously in the pharmacopœia. These are adversely recognized to be the supreme remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, liver complaint, general debility, disorders of the bowels and nervousness, as well as a means of rebuilding the system of debilitations following and those which operate injuriously upon the sensibilities or mind. Whether or not as a remedy for actual disease as is meant or indirectly by broken down purposes, or of impending consequence, they are never cried in vain, and few of us restore complete health when by overplus of nervous energy have vitiated its recovery.

EAST INDIA HEMP.
And What We Know About It

Instead of devoting a column to the merits of this strange and wonderful plant, we refer our readers to the following letters, but first we will say that we have ourself used it upon ourself, and also upon others, and we know that it possesses wonderful properties, we know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in seventy-four hours.

ST. MARY'S HOUSE, Allegheny City P.... NA 16 —1871

The East India Hemp has been taken by Rev. Matthias Bapt. D. D., S. B., and Rev. Jonathan Arnold, L. L. D., both ascetic pastors of this convent, and so far has given relief to both. They suffered from affections of the lungs and bronchial organs. We have recommended, through charity to sufferers, the Opium Gum Indian to diff rent persons, and continue the same in good cases since, knowing the effects by experience. Please find enclosed check for twelve bottles of syrup pill and ointment. We shall inform you in due time what further success the medicine shall meet with.

Yours truly,
REV. FERDINAND WOLF, O. S. B.,
87 Washington Street.

CHINA GROVE, Rowan Co., N. C., Oct. 21, 1874.

——Send one dozen Ointment and one of Cannabis Indica. When Mr. J. W. Fisher brought his wife to me for examination, I found her in the incipient stage of tuberculous consumption. Then it was I concluded to make a fair trial of India Hemp, and now there is a general demand for those remedies. The Ointment excels everything and anything of its kind I ever saw or tried; in many cases it acts like a charm.

Fraternally yours,
P. A. SIFFORD, M. D.

RIDGEVILLE, Caswell, N. C., Sept. 12, 1871.

Inclosed is $10 for more of the Indian Hemp. I can truly say that this medicine has done me more good than all the doctors, and I had several of the best in the country. My cough is a great deal better, and my chills and night sweats are gone. You may look for several orders soon, as many have seen the effect of this medicine on me.

W. A. FULLER.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct 30 1871

Your treatment for consumption has so improved my condition, that the inquiry comes every day from my friends, what are you taking? Several are talking of sending for some of your medicine, and I am half-desirous myself to order for him $9 worth of the Hemp.

WM. HUNT, North High Street.

P. S.—It is my opinion that an agent at this place would sell considerable for you.

W. H.

DECATUR, Franklin, Tenn., Sept. 12, 1871.

The Heavenly Secret

Then he believed—believed in Christ He accepted the atoning efficacy. He renounced his own righteousness, of which he had been proud, and felt himself naked and empty, and took Christ, His righteousness and death, for all. Then came the inward sense of salvation, the heavenly peace. "I felt my heart strangely warmed."—Then came the witness of the Spirit. Then came the power over sin, the inward righteousness as well as the outward. From being a servant of God he had come to be a son. He was now consciously clothed and swallowed up in God.

But Wesley was not the first in modern times who had deep experience of the things of God. No. But he was God's chosen instrument. He had just the intellectual and personal traits for the great work to germinate in; and so God made his conversion the starting point of the great revival of the eighteenth century.

The office of Methodism, then, is to bring into the highest expression the spirit of Pentecost, and to give it the greatest possible force.

That is the true Methodist preaching that sets the simple truths of the gospel in the clearest light. That is the really Methodist pastorate that maintains the most efficient Godly discipline. The best preaching will fail that is not followed by faithful discipline.

Let us see to it that we do not let Methodism die of polished sermons and a loose discipline.

E. M. MARVIN.

St Louis, Jan. 11, 1875.

For the Advocate.

THE CURE OF BLOOD NO. 4.

By Gen. W. S. Rosecrans.

But it is objected that this view of the case places the whole heathen world at the mercy of the church—that she only has to turn her back upon them in order to consign them indiscriminately to perdition,—and that God is too merciful to commit the eternal destiny of a soul to hands so feeble and treacherous—that the Almighty is not so dependent upon man—that he has not thus shut himself up to one plan, tied his own hands, and limited his own mercy.

Again, we have regarded the objector of the argument, which has lead to these conclusions, as a church he has not answered. No objection, however plausible, can overthrow a conclusion logically drawn. No difficulties however formidable can offset truth. Granted we cannot reconcile such an act with the divine wisdom and goodness, we have only answered that by pointing out. We have only urged an objection, but not refuted the argument. But the objection assumes what cannot be proved, and what we have confidently denied: that God is, somehow responsible for the benighted condition of the heathen, and that the whole work of human salvation can proceed without the co-operation of instrumentality; that God is able to convert and save the heathen, by gospel means or no means, in no possible time, in any conceivable way; that the Almighty could have adopted just any other plan; that which he has actually chooses, that he cannot, by the exertion of his power and that if power is but one way of saving men, it is arbitrarily ordained that there should be but one way—that if his mercy is limited by conditions, it is because he has chosen to limit it. Now we maintain that the plan of salvation is not arbitrary; its conditions are determined not merely by the will of God, but by his attributes and the nature of man. God cannot save man in any conceivable way, at any conceivable time. The work of salvation is exclusively a work of power. Omnipotent power done could create a world or destroy a universe; but omnipotent power done could not save or destroy one sinner. The gospel is a moral effect to be produced, and it must be wrought in harmony with the nature of man. A moral change must take place, and yet man must be employed, means must be employed adapted to this nature. Now we do not maintain that no other plan could have been devised or other means employed to accomplish the same result; but only that any other plan or means adapted to accomplish the same result—the salvation of man would have been open to the same objection. Whatever the plan or means employed, the conditions of salvation must, from the very nature of the case, have involved precisely the same difficulties. To suppose anything else would be to impeach infinite wisdom, infinite goodness. It is to arraign the whole view of the subject that our heathen world, in a certain sense, at the mercy of the living church which is the "body of Christ" precisely in accordance with the declaration of God himself. "How shall they call on him in whom they not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" There is force "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." "When I say, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die, if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity." He is a messenger. He is the mercy of the God he does not save him; he will require his blood at the watchman's hand. But it is objected that this view of the case places the whole heathen world at the mercy of the church—that she only has to turn her back upon them in order to consign them indiscriminately to perdition,—and that God is too merciful to commit the eternal destiny of a soul to hands so feeble and treacherous—that the Almighty is not so dependent upon man—that he has not thus shut himself up to one plan, tied his own hands, and limited his own mercy.

But why stagger at the idea that the heathen, as to their hope of salvation, are at "the mercy of the church." Is it a new thing in the providence of God for one to be at the mercy of another? Is not man constantly at the mercy of man? Is not the child at the mercy of the parent? Suppose the mother fail to feed and clothe her babe, or leave it exposed to the storm, will it not perish? Will God work a miracle to supplement her neglect?—If she leaves it in the snow, does she believe that God will find another means of warming and nourishing it than that which he has provided in her? But is not the child likewise at the mercy of the parent morally and spiritually? Cannot the parent neglect his moral culture to his eternal ruin? Is not every man, to a greater or less extent, at the mercy of the church in precisely the same sense, though not to the same degree? Why then wince at the case of the heathen?

It is further objected that according to our theory God deals with the heathen without discrimination; that they do not all stand upon the same platform: that they are not all equally vicious:—that some of them are very moral and very sincere, and not less so all virtue. Indeed, some of them are quite as good as, if not better than, some Christians, living more nearly up to the light they have than those who have been enlightened by the gospel; and yet according to this theory God makes no account of all this, but damns them all indiscriminately.

One consideration is sufficient to refute this objection. Are the heathen all actual, personal sinners? If so, then they are all in a lost condition. They are beyond the great gulf which is impassable till it is bridged over by the gospel. They may not be as bad as they can be. They may not be as bad as some sinners in Christian lands, but they are sinners. Men are not lost because they are great sinners, but because they are sinners.

The best sinner in the world is a sinner, guilty, condemned, lost. The worst sinner in a Christian land may be saved, because to him the remedy is accessible. The best sinner in a heathen land must be lost, because to him the remedy is inaccessible. Men are not saved because they are virtuous, or moral, or sincere; but because they trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. In him, the worst of sinners has hope. Out of him, the best has none. Besides, the assumption that God deals with the heathen indiscriminately is a groundless one. The question is one of salvation and not of retribution. In the matter of salvation there is no reason for discrimination. All the heathen occupy the same platform. They all sustain precisely the same relation to God. They are all strangers to Him and His grace in Christ. To all the tree of life is inaccessible. In point of retribution there is ground for discrimination. While all deserve to be punished, because all have sinned, some deserve greater punishment, because they have sinned more grievously. But by what authority is it assumed that God does not thus discriminate? Does it follow that because all the heathen are lost, they are all equally lost?—that is, that they are all equally punished? Then where is the force of the objection?—The virtuous man receives his reward, whether he be a heathen or christian? But does it follow that he is saved? Then where is the force of the objection?

Finally. It is objected that this theory is in conflict with the word of God, and this leads us to consider briefly a few of the most plausible and popular notions upon this subject:

First, it is maintained that "God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted of him." The case of Cornelius is cited as a conclusive instance, who, it is contended, was a heathen, but nevertheless gave alms and prayed unto God and was accepted.

True, God is no respecter of persons in the sense that the gospel was intended, not only for the Jews, but also for the Gentiles, which is the sense that St. Peter meant. But the text itself declares that God is a respecter of persons in the sense that only those "who fear God and work righteousness are accepted of him." But this limitation excludes the unenlightened heathen, who neither "fear God nor work righteousness." We marvel that any thinking man should ever have so blundered as to quote this passage to prove that the unenlightened heathen are saved. But the reference to Cornelius is even more absurd. Although nationally he was a Roman and not a Jew, yet the account which we have of him shows us that he was not a heathen. Think of a heathen giving alms and worshiping the true God! But suppose we grant for the sake of the argument that he was a heathen, then the sequel shows that he was directed to, and availed himself of, the preached gospel as the means of salvation. If he was not a heathen, then his case avails nothing in the argument. If he was a heathen, then the whole force of it lies against our adversaries.

Secondly, The epistle to the Hebrews is quoted: "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

Here it is noted that the text makes no mention of Christ, and this is construed into an intimation that there is a way of being saved by coming directly to God, or by simply "believing that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." That is, there is a way of being saved without a Mediator, although the Son of God declares, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me:" and it is maintained that the heathen are saved by this immediate access to the Father without the trouble of believing in Christ. (See Rev. J. R. Brooks.) This we might very justly characterize as Deism of the most approved type, but as we have no need of the argumentum ad populum, we prefer to meet the issue on its own merits. It is assumed that "coming to God" and "believing that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him," are one and the same things:—that is, "coming to God" means salvation, or being saved, and "believing that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" means "coming to God," therefore to believe that God (not Christ) is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him," is to be saved. At least that will do for a heathen, and this is what the Apostle meant by making no reference to Christ (!) Nothing can evince the weakness of a cause more clearly than such theorizing as this. In addition to the declaration of our Lord, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me," a moment's consideration shows us that the Apostle does not represent the faith which he here describes as the act of coming to God, but as a prerequisite to that act. The Apostle does not teach that a man who has the faith here described is necessarily saved, or that such a faith is sufficient to save him, even though he be so near the kingdom of heaven as the benighted heathen are. But what he does teach is, that a man cannot come to God at all, not even through Christ, unless he first believe that God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. This faith in God is the necessary foundation on which faith in Christ, which alone is saving faith, rests, and without which it can not exist.

There is a consequence involved in this new and singular exegesis, which is so absurd that we hesitate to bring it out. It is admitted that the faith here described is of a lower order than "Gospel faith," a sort of second class faith which is accepted in lieu of the first class article to meet the exigencies of the "poor heathen." A lower order of faith gains access to God the Father, than to God the Son. "God does not require of the heathen faith in Christ as a condition of their salvation." "If his faith embrace and have reference (only) to God's existence and character, especially his merciful disposition toward him and it move him to confide in and seek God, he will reward him with the blessing of pardon and salvation." (Brooks.)

God the Son has undertaken the work of human salvation, but his terms are too hard for a part of mankind, and God the Father steps in with easier terms. God the Father is more merciful, or, at least, more accommodating than God the Son. Is this according to the "standards," Watson, Wesley, Clarke? Is this the "Scripture exposition?" Or perhaps this beautiful "standard" theory runs thus: "Some men have heard of God the Son and they are required to believe in God the Son. Others have only heard of God the Father and they are only required to believe in God the Father." Perhaps this last means something that way: "There is none other name under heaven given whereby men must be saved" (than that of Jesus). Very well then. Those who have heard of God the Son are saved by believing in God the Son. Those who have heard only of God the Father, are saved by believing in God the Father. Now let us drive the matter to a close.—Those who have heard of neither are saved how? Or another view:—The heathen cannot be saved by faith in Christ because they have never heard of Christ. Therefore they must be saved by faith in God. (See Brooks). Some heathen cannot be saved by faith in God, because they have never heard of God. Therefore, they must be saved by faith in ——— something else (?) which they have heard of. Is this according to the "standards?"

Thirdly: Great stress has been laid on a few passages in the Epistle to the Romans. It is singular enough that in the very epistle, and even in the very chapter in which the Apostle is laboring to show that there is "no difference between the Jew and the Gentile" as regards the gospel that "all have sinned," that all are guilty and condemned, that it is "one God which shall justify the circumcision (or Jew) by faith, and the uncircumcision (or Gentile) through faith" that in this very chapter, men who profess to be independent thinkers should have imagined that they had found proof of the contrary. But such is the result when we adopt a theory and determine to prove it to be true. The enquiry is no longer "What do the scriptures teach?" but "How can they be made to favor my views?" "For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law. And as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." . . . "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves; which shew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts, the mean while, accusing or else excusing one another." Rom 2. 12. 14. 15.

It is amusing with what gravity the advocates of the "standard theory" quote these passages, as though they really thought that they prove something to the point. So far as the logician is concerned we could well afford to let them pass: for he sees at once that they prove nothing. But many intelligent readers are not logicians, and are really deceived by an appearance of argument.

Let it be noted, in the first place, that the term "law" in the first passage means written or revealed law. In the second passage "a law unto themselves" and "the law written in their hearts" do not refer to the written or revealed law.

Let it be noted, in the second place, that "their thoughts accusing or else excusing," only refers to their state of mind as comfortable or otherwise, according as they judge themselves to have acted right or wrong. That is, like other men, the heathen have a moral sense.

Let it be noted, in the third place, that the expression, "When the heathen, which have not the (written) law, do by nature the things contained in the (written) law," does not mean that any Gentile or heathen ever did by nature all that the written law requires, but only that they do some things which are contained in the law, naturally judging them to be right, thereby proving that they have a "law written in their hearts."

Now with these points carefully noted, what do these passages prove? Simply that the heathen are under moral law according to the conditions of which they are to be judged, and rewarded or punished, like other men, according as they obey that law or disobey it. The Apostle goes on to show that the same heathen who are thus a law to themselves, have violated that law—every one without exception, and, therefore accordingly to their own law are condemned—"under sin,"—and cannot be justified or saved by the deeds of the law any more than the Jew must be justified "through faith," if justified at all. But the first passage does prove something to the point, but it is fatal to the "standard theory." "For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." The term, law in this place, it is agreed by all parties, means "written law." The Apostle teaches, then, that "as many as have sinned without law"—our adversaries say this means the heathen—"shall also perish without law," but as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged (not perish) by the law." The heathen, then, according to the Apostle, are to perish. The Jew or Christian who has the written law is not necessarily to perish but to be judged. He may perish or he may not. That is determined by conditions which do not complicate the case of the heathen. And the time of this judgment of the one, and perdition of the other, as fixed by the Apostle is, "the day when God shall judge (the same word) the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel," ver. 16. In that day then, the heathen, who have sinned without the written law, are to perish (apolountai), without the written law, while the Jew or Christian, who has sinned in the written law, is to be "judged (krithesontai) by the law, and Paul declares this doctrine to be "according to my gospel." The words used in the original are different and not interchangeable as some of our reviewers have dared to make them. For this reason we have put them down, and we respectfully ask the defenders of the "standard theory' to come to the point and defend, if they can, their favorite fortress.

In the Apostle's view the gospel is inseparably connected with the exercise of conscience. The written law is God revealing Himself, and God revealed is Christ. Hence the written law is declared to be our school-master to lead us to Christ, and Christ is declared to be the end of the law to them that believe. The heathen, not having the written law, have no Christ, and having no Christ they have no salvation. Without the means of salvation they perish as naturally as a man dies without food. This is their condition without the written law, because the gospel which is the only means of salvation is inseparably joined with the written law.

Christ is the only manifestation of God to the world. "No man hath seen God at any time. The only begotten of the Father, He hath declared him." To talk of the heathen having a knowledge of God without knowing Christ is idle. No man ever had any such knowledge. "The world by wisdom knew not God," and never would have known him but for Christ. Equally or even more idle is it to talk of a heathen having such moral affections as are implied in salvation from sin, without any knowledge of that Being and of those attributes which alone can excite those affections. When will men unlerstand that the work of salvation is not preliminary but moral—not dependent upon omnipotent power, or arbitrary will, but upon human consent—that a man to be saved must have certain moral affections, and where these are wanting there is no power in Heaven or earth that can save him:—and where he is so situated that these moral affections cannot be produced his salvation is as naturally impossible as the resuscitation of a suffocated man without the agency of pure air. The gospel as reaching Christ, and in Christ God, is the heaven-appointed means, and so far as we know, or have any reason to believe, the only means, of exciting these affections; and where it is not preached man is naturally and inevitably lost.

No other hypothesis can account for the awful sanction with which the Apostle seals his own ministry "Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel." No other can account for the Apostolic zeal to preach the Gospel to the whole world, nor for the zeal of every true and faithful minister "to endure hardness as a good soldier," and preach on till death. And never will the church of God be fully roused to do her duty to the heathen world till she accepts, and owns and feels the awful truth, that she holds in trust the heathen's only hope of salvation, and that her apathy is virtually damning countless millions for whom Christ died, and whose blood a just God demands at her hands.

"What Father Takes."—There is food for thought in the story that is told of a young lad who, for the first time, accompanied his father to a public dinner. The waiter asked him: "What will you take to drink?" Hesitating for a moment, he replied: "I'll take what father takes." The answer reached his father's ear, and instantly the full responsibilty of his position flashed upon him. Quicker than lightning various thoughts passed through his mind, and in a moment his decision was made; and in tones tremulous with emotion, and to the astonishment of those who were acquainted with him, he said: "Waiter, I'll take water."

Present and Future.

This earthly life is full of trial. A thousand outward circumstances combine to perplex and grieve, while inwardly the man who resolves to right living finds elements to disorder, weakness and wrong propensities, and a personal spiritual foe whose opposition is malignant, untiring and powerful. We all know the heart sinking which longs to escape from the strife; and David's is not the only tired spirit that has cried, "O, that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest." Heaven is the resting-place; and it is upward, to its realm of peace the finger of our Saviour points, as he says, "Let not your heart be troubled." But what degree of rest may we now have? How much of heaven may be enjoyed on earth? Let us not expect too much. Foes, thorns, roughness, may be looked for to the last step of life's pathway. Sorrows will wound, weakness distress, and the great soul-hunger and thirst be in large measure unsatisfied, till we pass "through the gate into the city." And many a man's craving for holiness and rest fails of satisfaction because it embraces too much.

We shall never be right till we get to heaven! But what of the present? Let us open the Bible and ask. Is a heaven on earth a poetic fancy, or an actual possibility? Heaven is love. We may be filled with that on earth. "Herein is our love made perfect." Heaven is purity; and here the blessedness of "the pure in heart" may be ours. Heaven is fellowship—communion with Deity. "They shall see his face." And the believer's joy is now that "truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." Is heaven rest, and joy, and light? "We which have believed do enter into rest;" here we may "rejoice evermore," and walk in the light of the Lord. To gather up all, will Christ be our heaven? Rutherford would go through ten deaths and ten hells to reach him, he said: M'Cheyne, that a smile of his was worth a thousand worlds, and Charles Wesley:

O could I catch a smile from thee,
And drop into eternity!

Blessed be God, we have Jesus now. To us who believe he is precious, not simply as having loved us and died for us, and opened the kingdom of heaven, but as here with us now, in our hearts, a living, loving, personal Saviour. "I call the world's Redeemer mine!" Thousands of to-day testify that in the possession of Jesus in his love, his presence, his fellowship, they anticipate on earth the happiness of heaven.

Our life in Christ tends upward. "Set our affections on things above." Here the shadows are lengthening, and chill night creeps upon us as the sun sets; the day will soon be over! There the light is the light of the morning, which grows into eternal day. No limit to the progress of heaven! More love, more enlargement, more rest, more fellowship, more fulness of joy, pleasure forevermore. Shall we now rest satisfied with the purity and love which will make us meet for the inheritance which remains? Shall we not go up and possess the goodly land which even here is provided for us?

Making the Church too Large.

There is a great tendency in our day to liberalize the church, so as to embrace everybody. Discipline must be elastic; generous indulgence must be allowed to gratifications of taste and appetite; excuses must be received for weakness of temper, lapse of self-restraint, omissions of religious duties, and a great body of intelligent good-hearted, amiable, moral, and very humane and liberal persons will be pleased to unite in church fellowship, as long as the singing and preaching meet the requisitions of their standard of judgment. Such large bodies of church-members create an agreeable social circle. They can secure every appliance for comfortable worship. They can command any form of talent in the ministry. They will support enterprises of charity and piety. They make the house of God popular to young people. Such a church is an attractive church. But what is this church-fellowship doing for its members? How many are inspired to any form of self-denial? How many are personally seeking the evangelization of their fellowmen? How long would it take such churches to bring in the millennium? It is not by broadening the base of the church that the world is to be saved. "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way." The church of the Lord Jesus was not a popular one in the usual acceptation of the word, although it was indeed a church for the people. His requisitions were stringent. His sword of discipline ruptured family ties, called for sacrifices of property, cut off right hands, cut out right eyes, required even that life should not be dearer than his service. The ancient discipline of the church was severe, many were cut off: but the church lost no moral power in this excision. The limited extent of the church is not its weakness in its proposed work of human evangelization. If it were smaller and purer it would be stronger.—Zion's Herald.

Mr. Talmage and the Theaters.

Mr. Talmage's strictures upon the modern theater have had for an answer a threat of personal violence. The bludgeon and the pistol are the high wayman's arguments, and confessions of a bad cause. Without having heard the sermons of the eloquent Tabernacle preacher, we would infer from the form of the reply that he has told only the plain truth. Men never in such a case threaten violence, unless they are deeply convicted, but not converted.

Putting aside the general question of the morality of theater-going, can the managers justify the plays which they are presenting to the public in these days? Are not semi-erotic, equivocal situations, and still more equivocal language, considered indispensable to success? Are not the majority of our theaters to-day schools of licentiousness? Do they not continually sow the seed from which is to be reaped hereafter a plentiful harvest of domestic infidelity and misery? When an impure piece has been enacted, and the lights are put out, and the theater is closed, the play is over, but all is not over. The sober realities are yet to appear. Pure minds have been stained with foul images, good principles have been undermined, the results will be years in working themselves out. Some of the final consequences will be seen in the records of criminal courts, and the woes wrought in households by loose living.

The usual defense set up, that representations are given which not even the sternest moralist can condemn, does not meet the case. The fact still remains, that taken altogether, the theater of the time is incurably bad. It is ran to pay, and as it is supposed that vice pays best, vicious plays are supplied till the city is surfeited with them. Dr. Talmage deserves the thanks of all men for his courage in grappling with this great evil. So long as the partisans of the play-house talk of shooting, they demonstrate that the worst said of them is not beyond the truth.—Methodist.

The Envy of Bigotry

In the reign of Abdallah the Third, there was a great drought at Bagdad. The Mohammedan doctors issued a decree that the prayers of the faithful should be offered up for rain; the drought continued. The Jews were then permitted to add their prayers to those of the true believers. The supplications of both were ineffectual: as famine stared them in the face, those dogs, the Christians, were at length enjoined also to pray. It so happened that torrents of rain immediately followed. The whole conclave, with the Mufti at their head, were now as indignant at the cessation of the drought as they were before alarmed at its continuance. Some explanation was necessary to the people, and holy convocation was held: the members of it came to this unanimous declaration: that the God of their Prophet was highly gratified by the prayers of the faithful; that they were as incense and as sweet smelling savors unto him: and that he refused their requests that he might prolong the pleasure of listening to their sup plications; but that the prayers of those Christian infidels were an abomination to the Deity, and that he granted their petitions the sooner to get rid of their loathsome importunities.—*C. Chinese Method of Raising Money for Furnishing Churches.

Mr. W. Simpson, in a paper on "Chinese Architecture," read before one of the English societies, describes as follows the Chinese method of raising money for the building or repairing of temples: "In the streets of Peking I one day found a man in a sort of wooden sentry-box; large nails had been driven into it, so that their points projected through. This prevented the man from leaning against the sides, and the only rest he had was from sitting on a board within. He was a monk, and never seemed to sleep, for he had a string with which he night and day sounded a large, sonorous bell every few minutes, as a sort of advertisement of his purpose. This was that the benevolent should come forward with money; each nail represented a sum. When any one paid that sum, his name was stuck up on a bit of paper, and the nail was pulled out, making it more comfortable for the hermit within. All the nails represented the necessary amount for the repair of a pemble which was close behind. This is a common proceeding for raising the wind for such purposes. I was told that this monk had been two years shut up, and that he would likely be another year before he got out of his cocoon of nails."

The Value of Observation.—I never saw anybody do anything that I did not watch him and see how he did it; for there was no telling but that some time I might have to do it myself. I was going across a prairie once; my horse began to limp. Luckily, I came across a blacksmith's shop, but the smith was not at home. I asked the woman of the house if she would allow me to start a fire and make the shoe. She said I might if I knew how. So I started a fire, and heated the shoe red-hot, and turned it to fit my horse's foot, and pared the hoof, and turned the points of the nails out cunningly, as I had seen the blacksmith do, so that, in driving into the hoof, they should not go into the quack, and I shod the horse. At the next place I went to I went straight to a smith and told him to put the shoe on properly. He looked at the horse's foot, and paid me the greatest compliment I ever received in my life. He told me if I put on that I had better follow blacksmithing all my life. Now, I never should have known how to do that if I had not looked on and seen others do it.—Beecher.

Temptation.

Never count a temptation so triumphed over, so beaten off, that it will never assault you any more. Satan has been called Beelzebub, or the god of flies, some tell us, because he will not take a repulse; because he comes back again and again; because it is impossible so to drive him away that he will not return. Consider the Lord of glory himself. When the tempter, thrice encountered and thrice defeated in the wilderness, left Him, it was only as we are expressly told, "for a season." There were other hours and powers of darkness still to come, when the prince of this world should make further proof in the garden whether there was not something which he could yet claim for his own even in that Lord, who had so foiled and baffled him in the desert. And shall we think that when he departs from us it is more than for a season? Never, so long as you bear about these sinful bodies, count any corruption to be so dead in you that you are perfectly safe from it henceforth, that it can never stir or trouble you again. How much that seems lead, by a sad experience, will be shown to have been only sleeping; like snakes, which, frozen in winter, lose, for a while, their power to harm, appear as though there were no life in them, but, brought to the warmth, can hiss and sting again. How many an old corruption is, perhaps, at this moment thus torpid and inactive in us, which yet only awaits the returning warmth of a suitable temptation to revive in all its malignant strength anew.—Trench.

The Pews Licensed.

Laymen in this day, through intelligence, have formed their ideas as to how preaching ought to be done. They think they can beat those of us who are ministers, and we have no donbt that some of them could. Let them come and try. Let them prepare themselves for religious meetings, and show us how to be pointed and brief. We suppose that half way between the way ministers do it and the way laymen do it would be the right way. Ministers are too formal and laymen are too loose in their religious addresses. Let us meet each other half way. That will make us all both intelligent and warm-hearted talkers. The trouble with many laymen is that they think they can speak effectively for Christ without preparation. Although it took only a little while to adapt the earth for man's residence, God was getting together the material for this world during millions of years. Even the creation was not extemporized. It is right to make preparation for any important work that you have to do. In this age of concordances and Bible-dictionaries and maps of Palestine and succinct commentaries, there is no excense for the prayer-meeting twaddle and balderdash with which many Churches are afflicted. We who preach confess we do not know how: let the laymen show us.—Christian at Work.

The Two Newsboys.

While passing along Washington Street one evening, my attention was arrested by a little news-boy who said to his companion:

"Say, Charlie, how much money have you made to-day?"

"Twenty-five cents."

"Jolly, is that so? Don't tell your mother how much you have made; keep part of it yourself.

The little fellow straightened up, and with great earnestness exclaimed.

"Do you think I would tell my mother a lie?"

Turning to the little fellow with an approving smile, I said, "That is right, my boy, always tell the truth."

Noble little fellow! if he abides by that principle of truth, he may rise from his humble position to one of usefulness and honor.

Honest boys make honest men, and honest men make happy homes, good citizens, fair dealers, true Christians, and just legislators: while dishonesty fills the land with suffering and wickedness, and peoples jails and prisons with both young and old. Could granite walls and iron bars speak to us, they would tell us the sad fate of thousands who began their downward career by deceiving and lying. This is a wicked and perverse generation, and honest men are hard to find. Children, if you wish to shun the downward road to ruin, if you wish to be successful and respected, if you wish to make glad the heart of your parents; and above all, if you wish to please your heavenly Father, tell the truth, for "Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord; but they that deal truly are His delight".—Watchman and Reflector.

A Sermon on Push.

When cousin Will was at home in vacation, the boys always expected plenty of fun. The last frolic before he went back to his studies, was a long tramp after hazelnuts. As they were hurrying along in high glee, they came upon a discouraged-looking man and a discouraged-looking cart. The man was trying to pull it up hill to his own house. The boys did not wait to be invited, but ran to help with a good will. "Push! push!" was the cry.

The man brightened up; the cart trundled along as fast as rheumatism would let it, and in five minutes they all stood panting at the top of the hill.

"Oblige! to you," said the man; "you just wait a minute;" and he hurried into the house, while two or three pink-aproned children peeped out of the door.

"Now, boys," said cousin Will, "this is a small thing; but I wish we could all take a motto out of it, and keep it for life. 'Push!' it is just the word for a grand, clear morning.

"If any body is in trouble and you see it, don't stand back: push!

"If there's any thing good doing in any place where you happen to be, push!

"Whenever there's a kind thing, a Christian thing, a happy thing, a pleasant thing, whether it is your own or not: whether it is at home or in town; at church or a school, just help with all your might; push!"

At that moment the farmer came out with a dish of his wife's best doughnuts, and a dish of his own best apples; and that was the end of the little sermon.

The Blessings of a Pious Home.

We cannot too highly estimate the value of piety at home. Who does not love the sweet and sacred influences of a religious family? What a legacy to the young! It is far better than worldly distinction and more to be desired than great riches. The associations of childhood should ever be kept in lively remembrance. They will help in the great struggle of life, help to overcome difficulties and to resist, successfully, every temptation. The young are embarked upon the perilous sea of life—they are called upon to brave its storms. They have entered upon paths which must lead them away from the charms of the home circle. They are without the guidance of a father's counsel, and the comfort of a mother's love. To such we wish to speak a few words.

And first of all cherish an affectionate remembrance of your absent mother. Form no habits, form no associations, engage in no business or worldly pleasure or amusements which in themselves are hurtful to good morals, or which, if made known to your mother, would crush her heart and darken the dear old home circle. We have read somewhere of an aged man, with a form bending with the weight of years and snowy locks, who when a college boy, ran away from home—went on board one of his father's ships—crossed the ocean and spent several months in Paris. The only thing, he said, that kept him from vice and ruin in that great and lofty capitol was the thought—"What would my mother say if she saw me here?" Thus restrained, he was kept from moral degradation and ruin and providentially returned home to tell his mother where he had been, and what he had done, with penitence for having grieved her by his absence, and with joy for having remembered the holy example and tender love of a mother in a distant and wicked city.—It is a good thing to cherish the associations of early days—to keep fade less and green the tender memories of childhood. Greatly to be pitied is that young man who would scorn and ridicule the simplicity of childhood, and of youth, when entering upon the former and more dignified duties of life—when passing from the sacred influences of a pious home. What a blush of shame should crimson his cheek!

It is said of George Canning, one of England's most brilliant parliamentary orators and prime ministers, that in the height of his fame and power, he would leave the great metropolis of London, steal away to a quiet provincial town where his mother lived in the same humble apartments which she occupied when toiling and denying herself to eke out her own living, and pay the expenses of her son's education. For days he would remain with her, and sit by her side and say and do everything to please her just as he did when a child. There came to see him cabinet ministers, members of Parliament, lords, dukes and even on business of State. They paid their addresses to the brilliant son in the presence of the mother who, by her privations had helped him to win his position of distinction.—George Canning, like all other men, doubtless, had his failings, but his devotion to his humble mother in her old age, makes him distinguished among men, and an illustrious example for the young.

Who can estimate the priceless value of a mother's influences,—of the sacred associations of a pious home? That home is humble, perhaps—built of rough boards, small and incomplete far from being a splendid mansion with frescoed walls. No damask curtains, guilded cornices, brussels carpets and elegant furniture,—nevertheless, it is the sweetest home in the world to the true and noble boy. The church where your father and mother worshiped was not built after the pattern of Solomon's temple, nor of the magnificent city church—it is a rough log building with an old fashioned Methodistic pulpit.—But you love that church above all others. It is the church of your youth—the church of your parents, and you love it and fondly cherish its hallowed associations.

[illegible] young men, when they [illegible] long their hands in [illegible] leave the church of their [illegible] the church building [illegible] regard as some [illegible] and dollar dup[illegible] for [illegible] in youth, without merit of his own, [illegible] dazzling and in most cases [illegible]. We have heard of but few prizes gained in lotteries that have not carried a curse and calamity to their possessors. A recent calamity familiar to the public, occurring in our State and bringing a blight upon a character and darkness to a home, might, without silly superstition or strained linking together of cause and effect, be traced to the winning of a prize in a gambling lottery. Heaven in its wise economy has appointed certain means by which wealth and position may be obtained, and if men blaze out new paths of their own, a kind of justice, not poetic but divine, will overtake them in the entanglements of the wilderness.

In our State, there are at present, two or three lottery schemes to which the patronage of our people has been invited. Some of our best and most distinguished citizens, above reproach in their private and public life, are connected with them, and give them the influence of their names and characters. Moreover, the ends proposed are good and praiseworthy. Except incidentally, the managers, perhaps, will not be benefited—the funds obtained are to be applied to charitable and benevolent purposes. These facts, however, should not induce our people to patronize what is in itself wrong. No ends however good and noble can sanctify the improper means used to attain them. We may not do evil that good may come. We must stand aloof from practices, which to the conscience of a Jesuit, appear right and proper, but are opposed to the principles of the christian religion.

Cheering Words.

A lady subscriber, writing for the continuance of her paper, says: "I like it paper too well for it to stop."

Another says: "I can't do without it."

Another writes: "Please send my paper on. It is a part of my inheritance. I will always pay my pastor the first time he comes to our church. It is worth more to a Methodist in North Carolina than any other paper published."

Rev. J. M Campbell, writing from Tennessee, says: "I see you stop my paper. I hasten to renew. I prize your paper very much, notwithstanding I owe so far off. I can't see how so many Methodists in the "Old North State" can be contented without it. I wish you much success. I like your papers and yours is worth all the rest."

Bro. Cunninggim, the very efficient agent for Greensboro Female College, makes an important announcement in this paper. We trust all who have given their obligation to the College will be able to meet them promptly. The necessities of the College are urgent. There is no interest in our Conference which appeals more eloquently and earnestly to the Methodists of North Carolina for united effort and great liberality than Greensboro Female College. Those who have sought to put it in a better channel for usefulness or invest it where it will yield larger results for the church and the cause of education.

BRO BETTS AND THE CHILDREN.

In reply to Bro. Betts' inquiry for the verse of the Bible containing the word "thereof" nine times, we have received several letters from young friends giving the desired information. We are glad that interest was manifested by the young persons in seeking the information, and cheerfully give a place to their letters:

Miss Nannie a Woodburn, of Madison, writes: "By reference to the eleventh verse of the 43d chap. of Ezekiel, you will find "thereof" nine times. My mother's paper came last night and I hasten to answer the question."

Miss Mattie J. E. Farrar, of Jonesboro', writes: "Thereof is found nine times in Ezekiel, 43d chap. 11th verse. No one ought to fail in finding it."

Miss Nannie W. Collins, of Warrenton, writes that "the word thereof is found nine times in 11th verse, 43d chap. of Ezekiel."

Miss Jennie Fitzgerald, of Wilson writes: "I see a request in this week's Advocate from A. D. B. to the children who read the Advocate, to search out a verse in the Bible in which the word thereof is found nine times—It is to be found in the 11th verse 43rd chap. of Ezekiel."

Miss Lula V. Bibb writes the following sweet little letter:

"I was reading the Advocate this morning and came across a piece which I think Uncle Betts wrote, and I love him so much. He wishes to know what little girl could give him a verse in the Bible with the word 'thereof' in it nine times. I find it in the 43d chapter and 11th verse of Ezekiel and I think it is a very sweet verse. I am a little girl, as Uncle Betts knows, and will be nine years old the 18th of next May. And my pa is the Rev. R. P. Bibb of the North Carolina Conference. But he has gone to his new circuit now, where I hope he will be happy if I can't see him soon. Please let me know if I am right in the selected verse."

Miss Nannie Webb, of Kinston, also answers the question by quoting the verse entire.

We have also received like answers from Willie N. Sherwood, McLeansville, Bobbie Roberts, (11 years old) Company Shops; Miss Sallie A. Ricaud, Albemarle; Charlie Abernethy, Happy Home; and Miss Pattie Jordan, Cedar Grove; W. T. Watts, Kinston.

An article from Rev. E. A. Yates in reply to Dr Closs on the "Curse of Blood," has been in hand for several days. It will appear in our next.

Dr. Closs and the Heathen.

MESSRS EDITORS: In your issue of 13th inst., Dr. Closs, in reviewing the series of articles written by the Rev. E. A. Yates upon the moral state of the heathen, devotes a very courteous paragraph to my special instruction and interest. Of course, I submit to the Rev. Dr., as my superior in knowledge, science, theology, literature, experience, * * and I assure you that I feel no inclination whatever to enter the arena with him. * * *

The good old Dr. approaches his opponent very timidly and courteously, as if fearing the temper and keenness of the blade he is about to invite upon his pate; and then with a back-handed blow of his ponderous sabre he makes a vigorous lick at myself, hoping and believing, no doubt, that he now will have no trouble from the rear, because all have been slain.

I accept this back-handed attack of the Dr. upon the presumption that he acted the part of the Irishman, who passing over the field after the battle, very bravely drew his sword and cut off a dead man's foot. Upon being questioned by his [illegible]n as to what part he had taken in the fight, replied: "Faith, and I cut off an enemy's foot." "But why not his head, Pat?" replied the Captain. "May it please yer honor," said Pat, "and his hid was already off."

I presume the Dr. thought my head was already off; hence the nature of the blow.

I have never attempted to controvert this subject. I published my views some time since in the Advocate, and asked in an humble Christian spirit, to be corrected by my brethren, if I was in an error. What followed, the readers of the Advocate know only in part. Whether my simple views in that article "ignore the Bible," remains yet to be proved; and it will be a long time before my dear old Doctor will be able to do it.

I candidly do not, and cannot, believe in the assumption that all heathens who die without a knowledge of the Bible are lost. I conceive it to be an unscriptural and illogical assumption—a monstrous absurdity, arising from the childish efforts of judging the poor heathen from the standpoints of Christendom—But, then, I may be much mistaken; for a man who does not understand the "Second Law of the Decalogue," is not competent to enlighten the public mind upon this complex subject. I will, however, give the Doctor a few simple syllogisms, which I humbly ask him to resolve into their proper elements and show the incorrectness of their conclusions.

If the heathens are lost, they must be lost because they are sinners.

Will the Doctor deny this?

All sinners are such because they commit sins.

Will the Doctor deny this?

Sin arises only from the refusal of an intelligent being to meet moral obligation. But there can be no moral obligation upon any intelligent being without a knowledge of the law which imposes it; for in the very logic of facts, we see that the obligation must keep pace with the knowledge of the law creating the obligation.

Will our Doctor attempt to deny this?

But the heathen have no knowledge of the law in question, (the Bible,) nor have they at anytime had any means of knowing that law. It must, therefore, inevitably follow that they are not under moral obligation, at least such as we are under. And, if they are not under moral obligations imposed by the Bible, they cannot be sinners because they do not meet such moral obligation; for in fact, no such obligations exist for them. And, if they are not sinners like ourselves, it must follow that they are not lost as sinners in Christendom are lost, who die impenitent.

It is no relief to the Doctor's position to say that they must be sinners because in Adam all fell; for in Christ all have been redeemed from original sin; and, if they have been redeemed from that sin and have no Bible law to impose Bible-obligations upon them, they cannot now be Bible sinners, nor can they be lost if they do not hear the Bible truths.

I admit their depravity; but depravity is not necessarily sin.

Nor do I affirm that all heathens will be saved.

But, if the Editor will give me but one more hearing, I will show how they are saved—saved in Christ—no "new way," and then I will say no more upon the subject.

R. L. ABERNETHY.

The readers of the Advocate will be greatly edified and instructed by the article from Bishop Marvin, which appears on our first page. We trust the Bishop will soon favor us with others from his gifted pen. The labors of his Episcopal office are great, but his heart is in the work, and he will not suffer himself to be idle, nor an opportunity for doing good to pass unimproved.

It is gratifying to be able to state that a large per cent. of subscribers whose terms have expired are renewing, and that we are receiving many new subscriptions.

We wish an active agent in every town, village and community in the Conference to assist the preachers in circulating the Advocate.

Rev. J. S. Nelson requests the Districts Stewards of the Charlotte District to meet at Monroe on Feb. 10th, 1875, at 11 o'clock, a. m.

An Explanation

For the information of Bros. Andrews and Black, please allow me to make the following explanation of my report as Treasurer of the General Conference Delegates:

At Louisville, Bro. Black handed me a package of money, $7.50; less express charges, 50 cents; balance, $7.00, which I credited upon my memorandum book, "Everettsville circuit (?) (Jno. N. A.)" In copying the entries from my book and arranging my report by districts, I found there was no Everettsville ct. Not knowing certainly what circuit took the place of it, I reported it thus: "——— By Rev. W. S. Black $7.00." This is the lost money for which the brethren are looking. Let them just fill the blank in my report, with Mt. Olive circuit and put it into the New Berne District, change the additions of the figures in the Wilmington and New Berne Districts, and no harm, I trust, will be done to any body.

Yours truly,
N. H. D. WILSON.

A Letter

The following letter was written by Rev. Dr. McFerrin to Rev. F. L. Reid, acknowledging the receipt of a copy of "The Life, Sermons and Speeches of Rev. Dr. Reid," and is here published at the request of Dr. McFerrin:

REV. F. L REID—My Dear Brother: I thank you for the beautiful copy of the "Life, Sermons and Speeches of Rev. Numa F. Reid, D. D.," your honored father and my special friend. I have read the work with pleasure and hope it will meet an extensive circulation, especially in North Carolina, where Dr. Reid so long lived and preached and gave the influence of a spotless life. Your family seems to be greatly honored by Christ in putting so many of its sons in the ministry. May the sweet spirit of James Reid ever abide with his posterity—may the fidelity of George R. Edwards be illustrated in his children's children and the sanctified eloquence of Numa F. Reid inspire his son to preach as he did and die as he died in the Lord!

The Religious World.

Pope Pius is again reported ill by a telegram from Rome, Jan. 19, and there is serious alarm felt as to his condition.

A Parsee priest who tried to disturb a Methodist preacher at Bombay, was lately brought before the magistrate and compelled to apologize for his conduct.

The seventy millions of people who live in Russia, and all who obey the Greek Church elsewhere, celebrated Christmas, January 6, twelve days after the 25th of December.

Over 145,000 copies of the Baptist Hymn Book have been issued, and it is now in use in more than 2,000 of the Baptist churches.

Rev. Dr. Miller, of New York, recently stated that it would require nearly $500,000 to pay off the debts of the Baptist churches in that city and vicinity.

The work of the Reformed Episcopal Church goes on steadily in Newark, N. Y.—The church is increasing, and now numbers about 150.

An encouraging movement is taking place in Wheeling, W. Va, for the formation of a new congregation under the auspices of the Reformed Episcopal Church.

Dr. Reed preached the missionary sermon at St. Paul's church, New York, January 11, after which the handsome sum of $10,449,08 was collected. He also addressed the Preachers' meeting, on the subject of missions.

The New York Methodist, Jan. 16, notices a large number of revivals in the North and East. Many are being converted and joining the Church.

Several ministers of the New England Conference are members of the Massachusetts Legislature, among them are E. D. Winslow and F. G. Morris.

The Rev. R. S Stubbs, City Missionary of St. Louis, has purchased a house, nearly new, and removed it to a lot in St Louis, donated for the purpose by an Episcopalian lady.

The Fair in aid of the Home for the Aged and Infirm of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, has proved a grand success.—The net gain will be about $16,000.

The will of Samuel Stevens, of Baltimore, bequeaths $40,000 to the theological department of the University of Boston, and $10,000 to various missionary and benevolent institutions in Baltimore.

Nelson & Phillips have issued a book of sermons preached at the Round Lake Camp-meeting last summer.—Among them are sermons by Bishops Doggett and Kavanaugh and Drs. Lee and McFerrin. The sermons were taken down by a stenographer at the time of delivery.

The phrase "Primitive Church" is much used to designate the Christian Church in apostolic times. By a statute of the British Parliament in the time of Edward VI. the word 'primitive' in such connection, was defined to mean "the space of five hundred years and more, after Christ's ascension."

Bishop Keener, in a private letter to Dr. Summers, says of the late Dr Hamilton:

"Our precious brother and friend is looking curiously about in heaven on this New-Years' day He deserves it all, as he will see it all. I knew him for forty four years—away back when but a boy, I saw him in his noble, early manhood: he was then a licensed preacher under Dr. Fisk. What a model of a pastor and a preacher he was!"

The Man Who Stops His Paper.

Philip Gilbert Hamilton, in his admirable papers on "Intellectual Life," thus talks to the man who "stopped his paper:" "Newspapers are to the civilized world what the daily house-talk is to the members of household; they keep our daily interest in each other, they save us from the evils of isolation. To live as a member of the great white race of men, the race that has filled Europe and America, and colonized or conquered whatever other territory it has been pleased to occupy, to share from day to day its cares, its thoughts and inspirations, it is necessary that every man should read his paper. Why are the French peasants so bewildered at sea? It is because they never read a newspaper. And why are the inhabitants of the United States, though scattered over a territory fourteen times the area of France, so much more capable of concerted action, so much more alive and modern, so much more interested in new discoveries of all kinds, and capable of selecting and utilizing the best of them? It is because the newspapers penetrate everywhere; and even the lonely dweller on the prairie or in the forest is not intellectually isolated from the great currents of public life, which flow through the telegraph and press."

Death of Jos. W Holden, Esq.

JOS. W. HOLDEN, Esq., Mayor of the City of Raleigh, died at the residence of his father, ex-Gov. W. W Holden, on the morning of the 21st inst., in the 31st year of his age. He was educated partially at the Military Institute at Charlotte, and afterwards at Chapel Hill, entered the army when quite young and distinguished himself by gallant conduct at Roanoke Island in 1862. After the war he conducted the STANDARD, a political paper of great influence, in this city, and acquired reputation as a writer of ability. In 1868, he was elected to the Legislature, and though perhaps the youngest member of the House, was elected speaker of that Body and presided with grace and a thorough knowledge of parliamentary usages. He was elected Mayor of Raleigh in May 1871 which office he retained until his death. We learn that for several months he had apprehensions of an early death and a few hours before dying, expressed his willingness to pass away feeling that his sins had been forgiven.

He was a young man of more than ordinary talent, with an active, discriminating mind, fertile and poetic imagination, cultivated taste, warm, generous nature, courteous and kind to friend and foe, and but for his early entrance into political life, with the temptations and associations that belonged to it, might have risen to eminence in the State or in the world of letters. With all his faults he had many redeeming traits and charity requires that we remember the last and forget the former. His funeral was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Pritchard at the Baptist Church and was attended by one of the largest congregations ever gathered in this city to pay respect to the dead.

Water Power of North Carolina
From the Raleigh News.

Broad statements are frequently made in regard to the manufacturing capacity of the State. Those who take an interest in the matter will be glad to have some definite facts and figures. The following statements, the result of a great many measurements and calculations, give a reasonable approximation to the truth of the matter:

First Theoretical Estimate.—The sum of all the river lengths in the State is about 3,000 miles; the sum of their falls is 30,000 feet, or an average of 10 feet to the mile. Allowing 100 horse powers to the foot of fall as an average for an average river, (as for Haw River, for instance,) the aggregate result for the rivers alone, (taking no account of hundreds of creeks, and many very large ones) is 3,000,000 horse power. Adding 15 per cent for the creeks, the aggregate is 3,450,000.

Second, Theoretical Estimate.—The average elevation of the State above sea level is 637 feet. It has been estimated at 550 feet; but a careful computation will give the former figure as much nearer the truth. The average rain fall in this State is 45 inches. If we suppose 70 per cent of this amount to escape by evaporation, which is a reasonable estimate, certainly not too small, there remains 13½ inches to be carried off by drainage. This gives 16,000,000,000 tons, which will develope 5,300 horse powers per foot of fall, making a total of 3,369,675 horse powers, which is just equal to the entire power of all the steam engines of England, both stationary and locomotive. The correspondence of these independent estimates is very notable, and is confirmatory of the estimate always given for the average elevation of the State.

We have here therefore an amount of force which would require for its artificial development and annual consumption of nearly 4,000,000 tons of coal. It would of course be an endless task to gauge all the streams of the State and so get the aggregate of their united force, but the measurements of a few of the larger rivers are given as having perhaps an interest of their own. The Roanoke, measured at Hawkins' Ferry, at lowest stage of water, gives approximately 335 horse powers per foot of fall. Taking this as an average for the whole distance from Danville to Weldon, between which place the fall is 355 feet, the total horse powers is in round numbers about 120,000. The Yadkin River measured near the Railroad Bridge, at Brown's Ferry, gives 315 horse powers per foot, or 165,000 for 525 feet of fall to the State line, taking in account of the numerous large affluents which enter it between those points, carrying the estimate from the State line up the mouth of the Elkin River, in Yadkin county, at the Fords Factory (formerly Gwynn's) we get 285,000 horse powers.

The power of Haw River and Deep River was taken only a few days ago, and while they were somewhat swollen by recent rains, so that the figures for these streams, 200 and 125 respectively, are subject to a considerable reduction, especially the former, Haw River, at the figures given, aggregates a force of about 180,000 horse powers, in a fall of 573 feet from the Piedmont Railroad bridge to its confluence with Deep River at Haywood. Adding the above figures for the Cape Fear, we have 325 horse powers, or about the same amount of forces as that of the Yadkin; and the fall of 1,400 feet to Fayetteville gives 92,700 horse powers. Deep River, in its descent of 596 feet from the North Carolina Railroad bridge near Jamestown, develops a force of about 60,000 horse powers. The sum of the powers of the Cape Fear and its two principal tributaries will somewhat exceed 175,000 horse powers. This is sufficient to turn 7,000,000 spindles and more in fact on this system of waters more cotton factories than anywhere else in the State, their number being about ten; and their aggregate of spindles is probably not more than 10,000, and of horse less than 100; so that even on this best improved of our water courses, not more than one seven-hundredth part of the available force is utilized. And to make the case still stronger, the Cape Fear and the lower part of Deep River have been improved at the expense of the State, in the slack water navagation works constructed before the war; of which most of the dams are still standing, at least in part, (and about half of them have been recently repaired by private enterprises) the force rendered available at these dams amounting to about 40,000 horse powers, or enough to turn 1,600,000 spindles, which is more than half the number found in all the factories of Massachusetts.

These facts are sufficient, although, let it be repeated, these figures are only approximate, to give definiteness to our ideas, both of our immense manufacturing power and the fact that we have not even begun to improve it.

W. C. Kerr,
State Geologist.

Reliable Testimony.

It must be reasonably supposed that when a person testifies to the efficacy of a remedy whose bene fits he has experienced, without solicitation, that he does so for the purpose of enlightening the public, or some very other motive than that of gratitude. It is still more reasonable to suppose that eminent physicians would corroborate the evidence thus given if they were persuaded of its truth. The people generally are persuaded of the truth of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are constantly in receipt of voluntary testimonials acknowledging the curative and preventive potency of this beneficent and corrective, emanating not only from those who have felt its influence, but also from well known members of the medical profession, both here and abroad, who have witnessed its effects, and prescribed it in their private practice. In the face of evidence of this character, which the boldest publicity would be given, it would be absurd to question the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. Skepticism could not long have disarmed, and the public would no longer consent to be cheated by worthless nostrums, which, as such, a means of fortifying the system against disease, and those which, if not positively injurious upon the sensitive organs of the body, are to say the least, of a questionable character. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, on the contrary, are never resorted to except in cases of actual necessity, and when taken according to the directions contained in the pamphlet accompanying each bottle, they never fail to restore health when the constitution can be restored.

A MAN OF A THOUSAND
A Consumptive Cured

Many deaths are hourly reported from Consumption. Scarcely a month passes by but we are informed by letter or otherwise of the death of some one of our friends, or acquaintances, from this insidious disease. Hundreds of others are lingering out a few months or years of misery, and are fully conscious that they are surely approaching their graves. Many of these unfortunate victims are aware that Consumption is hereditary in their families, and that they have inherited the disease, but they are not aware that it can be cured. Others, again, are conscious that they have contracted the disease by exposure, neglect, or badly treated colds, and they are ignorant of the fact that Consumption is curable. To all such we would say, that Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry has cured thousands, even after the disease had made such inroads upon the system as to induce the attending physicians to pronounce their cases hopeless, and to tell their friends that medicine could do no more for them. Many of these same cases, after having been given up by the doctors, have been cured by the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Sold by druggists everywhere. Price $1. Bleeding From Lungs, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Consumption. A Wonderful Cure.

ROCHESTER N Y. Jan. 13th, 1874.
Dear Sir. I had suffered from Catarrh in an aggravated form for about twelve years and for several years from Bronchial trouble. Tried many doctors and things with no lasting benefit. In May, '72, becoming nearly worn out with excessive Editorial labors on a paper in New York City, I was attacked with Bronchitis in a severe form, suffering almost a total loss of voice. I returned home here, but had been home only two weeks when I was completely prostrated with Hemorrhage from the Lungs, having four severe bleeding spells within two weeks and first three inside of nine days. In the September following, I improved sufficiently to be able to go about, though in a very feeble state. My Bronchial trouble remained and the Catarrh was tenfold worse than before. Every effort for relief seemed fruitless. I seemed to be losing ground daily. I continued in this feeble state, raising blood almost daily until about the first of March '73 when I became so bad as to be entirely confined to the house. A friend suggested your remedies. But I was ex remely skeptical that they would do me good, as I had lost all heart in remedies, and began to look upon med icine and doctors with disgust. However I obtained one of your circulars, and read it carefully, from which I came to the conclusion that you understood your business, at least. I finally obtained a quantity of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, your Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets, and commenced their V gorous use according to directions. To my surprise, I soon began to improve. The Discovery and Pellets, in a short time brought on a severe eruption, which continued for several weeks. I felt much better in my appetite improved and I gained in strength and flesh. In three months every vestige of the Catarrh was gone the Bronchial had ceased to disappear, and no cough whatever and I had entirely ceased to raise blood, and contrary to the expectation of some of my friends, the cure has remained permanent. I have had no more hemorrhages from the Lungs, and am entirely free from Catarrh, from which I had suffered so much and so long. The debt of gratitude I owe for the blessing I have received at your hand, knows no bounds. I am thoroughly satisfied, from my experience that your medicines who is the best remedies for the cure of those diseases which they are recommended for. I have recommended them to very many and shall ever speak in their praise. Gratefully yours.

DR. C. M'LANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS,

Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, has cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is sensible that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he has most every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the liver to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

Dr. C. M'Lane's Liver Pills, in cases of Ague and Fever, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are troubled with Fever and Ague to give them a fair trial.

Also, for Bilious Fever, in all of its forms, they are the best remedy known to the world.

Communicated.

REV. Wm. CLOSS, D. D.

one of the first requisites to prevent error, as to terms. Now, my whole argument rested upon what I regarded as a proper definition of the term, 'knowledge of the gospel,' as you use it, and remember that I [illegible] necessarily used in this discussion, must be synonymous with "salvation. "plan of salvation," "Atonement of Christ," etc.: the love, power and wisdom of God furnish a guarantee to every son of Adam, whether he be on an island of the Sea or in North Carolina, that he shall have a fair trial for his life, not "in the name of Christ," but through Christ's Atonement and if he will be saved by walking in the light he has, not being [illegible]

Now, we are prepared for another remarkable statement. You say, "I, the Bible teaches what you (I) assume it does, surely one text at least, in all the Bible can be found in proof of your position. And yet you do not give us one text to sustain your assertion." Now charity [illegible] me to suppose that you overlooked it, but I regret, and upon which my whole argument was grounded. Supposing this to be the case, I will repeat it, to wit:

"If we, when we Calvinists, which have not the law, living before the things [illegible] having not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves; which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their consciences also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another." Rom. ii. 14-15. Mr Watson comments upon this passage as follows: "If all have knowledge of the law and work, and [illegible] of the Holy Spirit and the degrees of faith, have passed away from the heathen, through the fault of their ancestors, 'not liking to retain God in their knowledge,' and adopting the present [illegible] having been [illegible] difficult and almost impossible [illegible] they would appear [illegible] being neither [illegible] nor under grace."

But we do not believe the doctrine of Scripture that account was so possible to God as to [illegible] the whole world [illegible] the darkest of ages are found [illegible] the ancient city of evil, and [illegible] there were [illegible] of God with some few exceptions been in the path of God with some few exceptions the doctrine of St Paul records. Now can take strong grounds as the [illegible] danger and corrupt state of [illegible] than the [illegible] Divine Law has [illegible] and [illegible] them. [illegible] argument [illegible] received no [illegible] contemporary now, the equity of [illegible] their conscience attested: and [illegible] that though they had not the written law, yet [illegible] they were capable of doing all the things contained in the law, life affirms, too, that all such Gentiles as were thus dealt, or should be, justified in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ; according to our Gospel." Wat. Ins. Vol. II. pp. 115 116. I quote this lengthily for the public purpose. 1st. Because it is the setting forth of truth, and 2. To give you a specimen of how Watson commentates." And so it seems that the paper endorsed by the N. C. Conference is not the only vehicle where "sentiments, which you understand are opposed to God's word" are promulgated. The truth is, Paul's doctrine furnishes the text for all these great Arminian Divines who have demonstrated and established as a doctrine of the church that God means no man unconditionally, nor because another fails to discharge his duty.

Let us again examin the argument. The following propositions, I think, are Scripturally and logically true: If the heathen are lost, they must be actual personal sinners. They can only be actual, personal sinners by disobeying (wilfully some way made known to them or rejecting the light given them. "Sin is the transgression of the law." 1 Jno. 3-4 "For where no law is, there is no transgression." Rom. IV—15. This accords with the character of God given us in the Bible. He will send no soul to perdition for not obeying a law which that soul never heard of. Therefore, if any of the heathen are lost, we maintain it some of them are, it must be because they disobey law, in some way made known to them: not a law issued in Jupiter or Neptune, of which they can know nothing, but a "law written on their hearts," or by what Mr. Watson calls the "gracious influence of the Holy Spirit." This is the principle that underlies universal Atonement.—This is the theme of the Methodist pulpit from Wesley to the present day, and this the burden of the prayer, and the inspiration of the song, that swells from Methodist altars to the glory of God. But let us draw out the logical results a little farther. If God has in some way given the heathen a law, or light sufficient to leave them without excuse, (as we have seen He must,) then this law must have been given by God for a purpose. That purpose must have been, either to furnish the heathen with a rule of thought and action sufficient to save them upon their compliance with its terms, or not. If it was sufficient to save them, of course the heathen may be, and some of them will be saved, by the law written upon their hearts." But if it was not sufficient to save them, by their obeying it, thus the Almighty is put in the position of giving the heathen just enough light to tantalize them and furnish Him an excuse for damning them! Now Doctor, will you be kind enough to answer this argument, without carefully attempting to dodge off "on a tangent," or "evading" the point.

Again: You say, "I will not do the justice to your mind to suppose you did not see that the whole drift of my argument was to show that the positive side of the question you were discussing as Calvinist or not, has nothing to do with the question itself." Well, I am sorry to be compelled to damage our good opinion of my intellect by re affirming with emphasis, that it has a great deal to do with it! and for this reason among others, your theory damages the whole train of argument by which the advocates of a Universal Atonement demonstrate that great truth of the Bible. Mr. Watson says: Those, indeed, if there be any such, who, believing in the universal redemption of mankind, should allow this—that is, that the heathen are all lost—would be most inconsistent with themselves, and give up many of those principles on which they successfully contend against the doctrine of absolute reprobation!' So it seems, my dear brother, that Mr. Watson's intellect, though it be high or on the scale, is nevertheless in the same category with mine: but I can stand it, if he can! Moreover, are you not aware that your ground is pretty much that upon which all Calvinists stand, viz, the conclusion of "Calvinism has nothing to do with the question itself." "The conclusion with all its tremendous consequences must be accepted, if the premises drive you there." "Lahnt," says Calvin, "that the decree is horrible, but Scripture teaches it!" What! not stop appalled when premises lead to a conclusion that maligns the goodness of God and invests with a demon like cruelty His eternal justice! "Whether it be Calvinism or not, has nothing to do with the question itself." Indeed! why, reason and religion dictate that when we construct a syllogism upon any doctrine, and find that the conclusion is contrary to the known character of God, we should go back and rectify our premises, and humbly examine to see if our reasoning is not faulty. Kepler, before he honestly himself from the doctrine of epicycles obtained some well ascertained facts from Tycho Brahe. His own doctrine could not be true and at the same time harmonize with those facts. Instead therefore of driving on upon his own premises, he took these well ascertained facts and rectified his reasoning. And behold, he found his premises faulty, and discovered just the opposite of what he held, that the planets revolved in elliptical orbits, which accorded with the facts, as he was clear. So we have the well-ascertained fact that God is both good and just. And it is a maxim of Arminian theology that no link in the chain of Calvinists can hold in the direction of this fact. Hence, when I fairly reject your theory to the system of Calvinism, where you must have it alone belongs, I was under the impression that, to the minds of Methodists and all Arminians, I had reduced your theory to an absurdity. And so I think still.

Again: You say that you "conceive it easy to show that your doctrine, that the heathen are all lost who die before a preacher gets to them, is neither Calvinistic nor Arminian, "but like most other great truths of the gospel, held in common by both systems. Now, it seems to me, that anything so important to your theory as that, so strange and so unique, and withal so "easy to be shown," ought to have seemed a little effort on your part to show it! I await with curiosity.

And now, my dear brother, I come to the most strange paragraph in your criticism. The point is in my reply to the author of the "curse of blood," where I turn his proposition upon him, with the other face out, so as to show the "horrible decree" doctrine of damning the heathen unconditionally, or, what amounts to the same thing, because the church fails to send them a preacher. I will not do your heart "the injustice to suppose" that you quoted only so much of my argument as would subserve a weak cause for it may be you are sincere when you sum up my argument thus: "The argument is that if they cannot be lost conditionally or unconditionally, they cannot be lost at all." And then the nonsense which grows out of such misrepresentation is, of course, attributed to me. Very well: if that subserves the cause of truth, let it go. I am content to leave the intelligent reader to judge if my argument was not this, to wit: The author of the "curse of blood" proposed that "the heathen must be saved either conditionally or unconditionally," and then argued to show that the condition was in the gospel, which the heathen could not get unless the church sent a preacher. I replied, substantially, that the loss as well as the salvation of a soul must be conditioned upon the same general principles. That "if the heathen are lost is

Prof. Trawick, in charge of Shelby Seminary, writes us that the spring session of his school is opening quite favorably.

Remember that the price of the Christian Advocate is $2.20, postage prepaid at this office. It is the cheapest paper published in the Southern Methodist Church.

Dr. Closs sends us article No. 2 in reply to Bro. Yates on the relation of the heathen to the church, which will appear in our next. It was left on hand for a week or more, but could not appear in this issue. Our want of room.

DEATH OF A PRESIDENT.—We are pained to learn that, on the 16th of January, Rev. W. H. Channinggim met with an accident in which one of his legs and the ankle of his other leg were broken. We tender our sincere sympathies to him and his family.

It will save us very great trouble and prevent errors on our books, if persons sending subscriptions to the Advocate will be careful to write names distinctly, post office, county and State. This is sometimes neglected by persons in ordering the paper.

During the last week two members of Edenton St. Methodist church passed from their sufferings on earth to their reward in Heaven. Bryant H. Norris died on the 27th, from the effects of a fall which he had two months before. Mrs. Mildred J. Lee, after a patient suffering, died on last Friday.

We have received a postal card ordering the Advocate sent, for one year, to Mrs. N. S. Norton. The writer omits no money and fails to sign his name. Of course we cannot send the paper until we know who ordered it. Will the writer be kind enough to give his name?

The discussion on "the curse of Ham" is widening to an extent not anticipated at first. We trust it will result in good and lead our readers to a Scriptural understanding of this great question. Brethren must pardon us, however, for suggesting that the articles are too long for the general reader and leaves but little room for other matter. We must ask of them to condense and abbreviate as much as possible.

We have received from Rev. B. N. Long an appropriate notice of the death of Sister Moyler, wife of Rev. S. V. Moyle, of our Conference. She died in great peace at the Methodist parsonage in Warrenton on Thursday the 21st ult. The notice will appear in our next issue. We extend to Bro. Moyle our heartfelt sympathy in this his hour of sad bereavement.

The junior editor of this paper, R. T. Gray, Esq., was happily married to Miss Cara Lilley of Fayetteville, N. C., on Wednesday evening the 27th ult. The happy couple passed through Raleigh on Thursday morning on a Northern tour, to be absent several weeks. We, in common with our readers, extend to the junior and his beautiful bride our hearty congratulations. May their lives be precious in the sight of God, and long life and great prosperity and happiness attend them.

MINUTES OF THE VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.—We are indebted to the Editor, Rev. P. A. Peterson, for a copy of the minutes of the eighty-th session of the Virginia Conference. Price, 25 cents per copy. As usual, they are gotten up in the very best style, and contain, in addition to the Conference proceedings, very much valuable statistical information. But what is better still, they contain the able and eloquent sermon preached by Bishop Marvin before the Virginia Conference at its late session. Subject, "the law and the gospel." The sermon itself is worth vastly more than the cost of the pamphlet. Address Rev. P. A. Peterson, Norfolk, Va.

As a very large proportion of our readers will not likely be able to procure a copy of the minutes, we propose at an early date to publish the Bishop's sermon in the Advocate, so as to give all an opportunity of reading and of profiting by the gospel truths which it so ably and correctly discusses.

We are requested to say that the present address of Rev. James Mann is New Port, N. C.

HOW SHALL WE KNOW THEM?

There is recognized in the sacred Scriptures a clear, definite and marked distinction between the believer and the unbeliever, but many totally ignore the teachings of the Bible upon this subject. Some have gone so far as to assail the authenticity and inspiration of the holy Scriptures—denied the Divinity of Christ—the reality of an experimental change of heart, the being born again, the power of the holy Ghost to change, and the doctrine of an instantaneous conversion has been derided as quixotic and visionary. But all their efforts to overturn the authority of God's word have been in vain. The testimony of the Bible still stands attested and unequivocal that God does thus work in the hearts of the children of men. To the regenerate man there is no difficulty at this point. He knows there is a radical difference between what he is now and what he was once. It may not so much affect his outward life, but it is deep and thorough in the soul and clearly defined in the sight of God.

It is true that men do not like to have the line of demarcation distinctly drawn between righteousness and sin. They know that if God is strict to mark iniquity and judgment against them according to the state of the heart, their chances for heaven are very small indeed. In their reflective moments they realize their unfitness for the dwelling place of the holy.—But somehow they imagine or suppose that God is going to pass it all by, and reward them for their selfishness and disobedience by taking them to heaven at last.

The word of God clearly teaches the doctrine of repentance and faith. This doctrine is urged and enforced by Christ. He entreats all to receive him by faith, with the promise that there shall come an instant inward quickening, and a revelation of Christ himself to the soul. In conformity with this is the experience of many.—They declare to us, that all burdened with sin, and conscious of their need, they humbled themselves before Jesus and poured out the soul in prayer, asking for forgiveness and the revelation of Christ's nearness and preciousness. He answered their cry, and there came into the soul the influence of a divine presence, breathing sweet peace, and the burden was gone. Men may scoff at such an experience, but it is real. It cannot be set aside. A blind man may deny that there are flowers in the field in summer time; but he who walks among them in the gardens and the meadows, beholding their beauty and inhaling their fragrance, could not for a moment doubt their existence or be convinced that their perfume was the "sweetness of the grasses!" So a man may deny that there is such a thing as an instantaneous change in the soul in conversion, but if he has never felt it—has no experimental knowledge of it in his own soul, he knows nothing about it. It only comes through faith in Christ—he has not believed—is ignorant of it, and that ignorance defines his state. Here then lies the distinction between the believer and the unbeliever—knowing and not knowing—believing and not believing. This is the line Christ has drawn, and by which the soul's destiny for eternity will be decided. It is important for every one to see, to feel, and to acknowledge this distinction. Many are inclined to deny it altogether. Others obscure it by the improper use of terms, and by false reasoning and sophistry. They pervert the plain import of Scripture to build up doctrines more congenial to their pride and morality. But such cavilling does not affect in the least the great truth of the gospel that God ever makes a clear distinction between the righteous and the wicked, and he will put every one on the one side or the other in the final day.—The lives of many Christians also tend to obscure this line of difference between those who serve God and those who serve him not. It is very much to be regretted that the Christianity of the present day has so lost its distinctive character. The holiness of Christian lives, the exalted consistency of their character and their devout faith in God, were once a living sermon burning deep into the consciences of men. But to many the fervency of this early love has been lost, and the business of this world has blotted out many of the distinctions that used to be discerned between those who lived for Christ and those who rejected him. Many are ready to assert that the difference between the church and the world is a mere question of names and creeds, and is not a distinctive principle, which has been ordained of God, and which bears directly on the eternal future. But after all, in all these things, the foundation of God's revealed truth stands sure and steadfast, having this seal, "The Lord knoweth them that are his," and "by their fruits ye shall know them."

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation from the Principal of the Raleigh Female Seminary to attend the Semi-Annual Concert given by the young ladies of that institution on the evening of the 28th of January. We regret that our engagements prevented us from being present.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate is the adopted organ of the N. C. Conference and every Methodist in the State ought to subscribe for it and do all available means to give it a still more extended circulation. Terms $2.20 per annum postage prepaid at this office.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

The question of ministerial support is one of paramount importance to the church. The taking proper care of the minister is closely allied to the success and prosperity of the church in his pastoral charge. No pastor can do the full work of a faithful evangelical servant of God when he is struggling under the depressing effects of financial embarrassment. His mind must be at ease on this whole question in order that he may accomplish the greatest good for the church. The gospel is the greatest blessing any country can enjoy, and yet if it is to be estimated in proportion to what is annually contributed for its support, in comparison with other and even useless expenditures, it would appear that it is held by the people of this boasted enlightened age, in low esteem.

An able article in the Southern Presbyterian Review, on "The Law of the Tithe and of the Free-Will Offering," says:

"The government statistics for 1871 may well cause every honorable man to hang his head with shame, and may well fill every patriot's heart with alarm.—They are as follows. Let them be pondered by every lover of his country:

Salaries of all Ministers of the Gospel	$ 6,000,000
Cost of Dogs	10,000,000
Support of Criminals	12,000,000
Fees of Litigation	35,000,000
Cost of Tobacco and Cigars	610,000,000
Importation of Liquor	50,000,000
Support of Grogshops	1,000,000,000
Whole Cost of Liquor	2,250,000,000

And these are the facts in this enlightened nineteenth century and in these United States! One might infer from them that we are fast becoming, if not already, a nation of drunkards. And then consider this country's estimate of the Gospel ministry, the ministry of all denominations, costing a sum less by millions than the very dogs of the land!"

1. [illegible] in North Carolina pay the collection above figures.—Our subscription lists do not look and write enough upon this subject.

MORE OF BRO. BOOTH AND HIS CAMPAIGN.—Bro. Booth has excited very great interest among the children by the question propounded to them in a former issue of this paper. Since our last we have received a number of sweet little letters from them, all giving the 43d chapter of Isaiah, 2d verse, which is a correct answer to the question. We would like to publish them all but to do so would occupy very much of our space, to the exclusion of other matter. The following are the names of the dear little girls and boys who have responded, in addition to those which were given last week: Rosa Lee Jordan, Ida Bell Pinnix, Celia Duncan, Willie H. Nelson, Beat Lee Birkhead, Alice P. B. A. L. King, R. L. W. Bailey, E. E. Jurney, Rebecca E. Cooper, Lizzie H. Jenkins, Amelia J. Shepherd, James M. Durham, Sidney B. H. Goode, Ella Sawyer, Julian Gibson, Lelia A. Wade, Willie G. Daily, Maude B. Fleming, N. S. McGhee, Bettie Brown.

Master E. E. Jurney gives the verse which contains "thereof" 9 times," and adds:

"I propose to the young readers of the Advocate, like myself, to find the only verse in the Bible that has in it the word "Eternity," and when it is found and the answer given in the Advocate, I propose to give them another."

Little Bell Pennix answers "A. D. B.'s" question and writes: "Now, will A. D. B. please tell me in the Advocate where to find these words—'And he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one,' and tell me what is the meaning of it—what was the object of buying the sword, or what was to be done with it? As I am just as many years old as thereof is used in the verse, and don't understand what is meant by selling the garment and buying the sword, I hope A. D. B. will find it, and explain it in the Advocate for me."

Personal.

Rev. T. A. Boon has been spending a few days in Raleigh. He preached at Edenton Street Methodist Church on Sabbath evening last. His discourse was an earnest and practical presentation of the plain pointed teachings of God's word.

—We were pleased to welcome into our office the past week Rev. I. W. Avent. He is in charge of Cumberland circuit, and represents the church as being in a healthy condition.

—We had the pleasure of a call the past week from Rev. Dr. Wilson, Presiding Elder of Greensboro District. We are glad to know that his health, which has been feeble for several weeks past, is improving. He informs us that the spring session of Greensboro Female College has opened well and the prospect for an increase of pupils is encouraging.

—Rev. J. A. Cunninggim, agent for Greensboro Female College, passed through the city last week en route for Franklinton. He made us a short visit and we had a hurried talk about the College and its interests. He is fully enlisted in the work of his agency, and is meeting with good success. We have no doubt but that the preachers and our people generally will give him a hearty help in his work. The cause he represents commends itself to the whole church.

Greensboro Female College,

Will the friends of Greensboro Female College consider prayerfully the following facts and suggestions?

Every one seems to rejoice that the College has been re-built and has entered again upon her grand mission. Thus far the burden has rested upon a few noble men, whose spirit of sacrifice should call forth the gratitude and hearty co-operation of the whole church.

The indebtedness has not increased during the past year, as the receipts from the agency and College operations have more than paid expenses and balanced against the interest on the borrowed money. Now as the financial condition of the State is growing better we can and must pay the principal. We believe that God has a grand purpose to accomplish through this agency of his church, and that his providence and grace will secure its freedom from debt. As a practical question, none need doubt the ability of the church to secure this end. Consider the following estimate:

Suppose 100	person	give $100	each,	$10,000
200	"	" 50	"	10,000
400	"	" 25	"	10,000
1000	"	" 10	"	10,000
2000	"	" 5	"	10,000
10000	"	" 1	"	10,000
Making				$60,000

Thus thirteen thousand and seven hundred persons can pay the whole debt and no one be seriously burdened. And we have confidence in the willingness, as well as the ability, of the church to come to the rescue.

We would appeal especially,

1st. To the preachers of the North Carolina Conference. You, my brethren, are to be the beneficiaries. In laboring to raise this amount you are working for your own families and those of your co-laborers. When the Conference shall have secured the above amount, $3,000 will be given annually in board and tuition to the preachers' daughters. With this incentive, and the great good the College will secure to humanity, we expect your hearty co-operation,

2nd. To the former pupils of the College.—What has the College done for you, intellectually, socially and spiritually? And through you what a blessing it has been to the whole church—exerting an elevating influence upon those around you! Will you not manifest your gratitude and appreciation by earnest, practical effort in raising funds and increasing the patronage of the College? Plead as woman alone can plead, that this burden may be removed from your beloved Alma Mater. We believe you will. We confide in you.

We propose to keep a record of the names of all the donors and the amounts, that future generations may know to whom they are indebted for such large blessings.

Send all amounts to.

J. A. CUNNINGGIM.
Greensboro, N. C.

Rev. A. G. Brown, Secretary of Randolph Macon College, writes to the Baltimore Methodist of a liberal donation made to that Institution. Mr. Pace belongs to a family in Virginia noted for the energy, enterprise and liberality of its members. He is closely related to the Pace Brothers (Edward and Robert) of Danville, Va. whose go-aheadativeness and generosity are well known to all who have ever visited Danville, or the Northwestern section of this State. The letter says:

"You will be pleased to hear that since your editorial was written, we have received the largest donation ever made to Randolph Macon by any one person, at one time, in all the history. It is a donation of $10,000, with the promise of $5,000 more on certain conditions, from our esteemed friend and brother, James B. Pace, of Richmond, Va. Bro. Pace, though comparatively a young man, is one of the most enterprising and prosperous business men in all the South, and he has donated this amount to the cause of Christian Education from a sincere desire to use his growing wealth to the glory of God and the good of his fellow men. The son of our venerable brother in Christ, Green T. Pace, of Danville, Va., who has recently erected in that prosperous town (mainly at his own expense) the handsome Church and Parsonage on Lynn street, we cannot be surprised that he should exhibit a similar spirit of noble Christian beneficence.—May the Divine blessing descend upon son and sire, now and evermore!"

The Southern Christian Advocate says Bishop Pierce and Dr. Lovick Pierce spent Sunday the 17th inst. in Macon. The Bishop occupied the pulpit of First Street Church, morning and night; and his venerable father, preached at Mulberry Street in the morning, and at the College at night. The day was unfavorable, and the congregations though good were, by no means so large as they would otherwise have been. We heard the Doctor with great pleasure while for nearly an hour he presented a clear and forcible exposition of part of the 14th of Romans. On Monday night he suffered a severe attack of his troublesome asthmatic ailment, which however yielded promptly to remedies, and he was able to return, Tuesday morning, to his Sunshine home. The Bishop is in fine health, and though his spirits sink a little under the embarrassment to his work of the long season of bad weather, he is cheerful in the hope of brighter days to be crowded with abundant labors. Our readers will be gratified to know that he promises an early renewal of the letters which always give such interest to the Advocate.

The True Home.

As a means of happiness the real, true home has no equal. Nowhere else can there be found the content, the peace, the solid and enduring joy that spring in continual streams of freshness and purity over that family whose members are bound together in the ties of affection. The interest of each becomes near to the hearts of others, every joy is brightened by communicating it, every sorrow is soothed by the sympathy it receives. This happiness is not confined to the family alone, but spreads like a magnetic influence. The cheerful feeling of the inmates is diffused over all who come in contact with them, and the warm rays of affection that animates them shed a reviving influence upon many a weary and lovely heart.

To the many such homes to which the Advocate pays its weekly visits, we wish peace and prosperity, and above all that every home in to which it finds its way may be made such by its refined tone and influence.

Around the influences of homes like these memory loves to linger. How often when gazing at the multitude of some crowded and busy street has the memory of my mother in a far off home, stolen gently into my heart and filled my eyes with tears To how many has the memory of a father's hopes and a mother's love been the rock which has supported them through innumerable difficulties? How many can look back to the home of their youth as the starting point from which they have pursued, with integrity, a life of usefulness and honor? How many have been rescued from sin and sorrow by the ever welcoming arms of home once forsaken, but now prized as the only refuge of the wanderer? Let nothing then tempt us for a moment to deteriorate or spurn this most momentous influence. Let no rude touch render less sacred the homes of our youth or the fireides of riper years. Let us rather band all our efforts to cherish, purify and build up true homes.

TOM PACE.

Jan. 25th 1875.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please announce that the Mount Pleasant circuit, Charlotte District, was assessed $10 for expenses of Delegates to our late General Conference; and paid $12 for which I have a receipt from Rev. Dr. Craven. The fact was stated to Rev. Dr. Wilson, and reiterated to Rev. Dr. Craven at the late session of our Conference, but is omitted from the report as published in your paper of the 23rd ultimo.

Yours truly,

J. P. SIMPSON.

Snow Hill, N. C., Jan. 1875.

Will the Board of Missions and the Board of Finance let us know the amounts to be raised the present year for Missions, Bishops and Conference Fund?

The District Stewards are now holding their annual meetings. They are to distribute the amounts among the various pastoral charges, but can not do their work unless they are furnished with the amounts expected from each District. Please brethren let us have the amount or some confusion may follow.

Carthage, N. C. S. D. ADAMS.
January 28, 1875.

TO THE PREACHERS AND LAY MEMBERS OF THE N. C. CONFERENCE—My Dear Brethren: I appeal to you, for you are all interested. I am on the Onslow circuit this year by the appointment of the Bishop,—am out of house and home; and hence I have commenced to build a small one, but though small it will be convenient and comfortable, and not expensive, for we expect to do the most of the work ourselves, but shall need some money to finish off the work. I give some facts in the case which will be a good reason why I appeal to you for help. 1st. I find the most of the brethren on this circuit are poor men, but seem to be pious, and have a disposition to work. 2nd. Their pastor is without a home, and it is a hard matter for him to find a suitable one in a suitable place. 3d. Two of the most wealthy appointments, viz, Richland and Haw Branch, have been detached from the circuit and added to the Kenansville circuit. 4th. We do not expect to build an expensive house, hence our requests will be small, and will be extremely obliged to any one for, even, a small favor, for any amount from 5 dollars to 50 cents.

Now, brethren, send me a small donation, and direct your letters to W. C. Gannon, Newberne, N. C., who is our agent, or to me at Swansboro, N. C., or to my Presiding Elder, Bro. Black, of the Wilmington District.—Brethren, you help me and when you begin to build, I will help you. "God loveth a cheerful giver."

L. W. PIGOTT.

Swansboro, N. C., Jan. 27th, 1875.

Bishop Keener, says the Baltimore Methodist, organized the Southern German Mission Conference for Texas and Louisiana in Houston, Texas, a short time since. Two were admitted on trial, and the young Conference surpassed its American sister in its missionary collection. The new Conference numbers fifteen, all of whom voted for the proposed rule on temperance.

In a Massachusetts village there are three churches, the minister of each bearing the name of Wright. One lives on the upper part of the town, one in the lower, and the third at the mills; so the people have denominated their spiritual guides as "Upright," "Down right," and "Midright."

The post office of Rev. L. L. Nash is Washington, N. C.

Religious Brevities

Rev. R. N. Sledd, of the Virginia Conference, is lying quite sick at his residence in Petersburg.

The first sermon by a Methodist resident missionary (Rev. G. M. Pelree) in Salt Lake City was delivered, May 15, 1870. Now there are three Methodist centers in the city. The Central Church, Rev. C. C. Stratton, pastor, has a membership of one hundred and twelve and a Sabbath school numbering two hundred and fifty.

THE Wesleyan Methodist Connectional Record and Year-Book gives the number of Methodist members throughout the world at 3,692,768, those on trial not included, nor the large number of hearers, Sunday school scholars and communicants, who are not members. The number of ministers is given at 23,514.

Archbishop Alemany, of San Francisco, can boast of what is perhaps the largest wedding fee ever received by a clergyman in this country. Mr Sharon, the wealthy mine owner of that city, having given him a check for $5,000 at the conclusion of the recent marriage ceremony of his daughter.

The Indian Evangelical Review, after collecting statistics, says the actual number of converts made from the heathen in India, during 1873, is about 6,000, not including Burmah and Ceylon. The average increase during the eleven years, ending with 1861, was 983 annually, and during the next ten years, 2,781 annually.

The Secretary of War has sent a communication to Congress in relation to the claim of the Roman Catholic mission of St. James to the whole military reservation of Fort Vancouver, which is valued at one million dollars. The claim is based on an act of Congress of 1848, and has been before the War Department for many years. The department resist the claim on the ground that this religious establishment is not a mission according to the act of 1848. The Secretary suggests that the matter be submitted to a court and jury for determination.

The National Baptist states the statistics of the Baptist Church in Philadelphia to be as follows: Number of churches, 51; number of mission chapels and stations, 13; total membership, 16,507; number of Sunday schools, 64, with 1,497 teachers, and 16,395 scholars. The money raised during the present year for religious purposes amounted to $403,-554.

The French pilgrimage to the tomb of Saint Martin of Tours, which Mgr. Freuchland, the Archbishop of Tours, was arranging at the time of his death, commenced November 10, and continued eight days. Fifty thousand pilgrims are stated to have visited Tours. The Archbishops of Paris and Bourges, and a number of bishops, took part in the religious ceremonies.

Rev George D Gillespie, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, has been elected Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Weslin, and Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter, of Grace church, New York, having been elected to the bishopric of Iowa, and telegraphed his declinature of the office, Rev. Dr. Huntingdon, of Worcester, Massachusetts, was chosen.

American Methodism began in New York 198 years ago with five members under Philip Embury. There are now, in round numbers, 3,200,000 Methodist in the United States and Canada: 700,000 added to the above figures will give the number of Methodist communicants throughout the world, 3,900,000. The Christian Guardian, the organ of the Methodist Church in Canada, asks: "Would not a Pan-Methodist Conference, composed of representatives of all the branches of the great Methodist families throughout Christendom, be a grand yet perfectly feasible object? It could meet at London or New York, and would doubtless draw still closer together, and possibly, in cases territorial contiguity; lead to the organic union of some of these now separate bodies.

Centenary church, Chicago, is crowded, and some one suggests that 1,300 members are too many for any one man to look after and care for.

A CHURCH BURNT.—Siloam Church, on Surry circuit, was destroyed by fire last week. When the accident occured the church was being used as a school house. This is another evidence against using the house of God for any other purpose than divine worship. Siloam was sacred to me. Within its sacred walls I first connected myself with the Methodist church. My sainted mother—grandmother,—grandfather, and a host of departed loved ones, worshiped in this church. I hope another will be built over its sacred ashes.

NAT.

In his sermon last Sunday, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, speaking to New York people, said:

"There are in this cluster of cities—I mean New York, Jersey City, and Brooklyn—there are 600,000 people jammed together in tenement-houses, with no opportunity for seclusion or decency; and do you wonder that so many of them forget the covenants of their God? Forty and fifty families sometimes crowded under one roof. One hundred and seventy thousand families living in 27,000 houses. This tenement-house outrage is more terrible than anything to be found in all Christendom, putting out of sight almost the London stories of St. Giles and Whitechapel. Those tenement-houses are the hopper for the mill that is grinding up the bodies and souls of men and women and little children.

An Epi[scopal] Journey.

Bishop Pierce returned to his home in Georgia recently from an official visit to the Pacific Coast. He tells the story of his trip thus briefly:

On my return [I] eschewed the sleeping cars, (I do not like them,) and came through without lying down; and yet at the end felt fresh and strong—no weariness, no fatigue. My wife says I was made for traveling; she thinks it my lot, and that I was prepared for it. Well, I do stand it wonderfully as compared with others. In eighty-two days I traveled nine In eighty-two thousand three hundred and twenty six miles, held forty-conferences, preached thirty six sermons, made eight speeches, raised nine thousand dollars for Church purposes, and dedicated four houses of worship; and yet some I wot of complain of a lack of episcopal service.

EAST BALTIMORE STATION.—The Baltimore Methodist says: We are glad to announce a delightful work of grace which has been in progress for some weeks on Fell's Point. Our valued friend, endeared by the fondest recollections of many long years, Rev Geo. Hildt, has been laboring in this revival with all the vigor of youth. About 150 conversions are the result thus far.—This was our first field, and endeared more. Precious memories cluster around it. We preached on Sunday night at the Bro[adway] church, now a separate and important charge—an offshoot of East Baltimore—of which the Rev. Robert M[illigan] Bacr is pastor.

BISHOP MARVIN.—The Nashville Advocate says:—

St. Louis on Friday night, in time, as was thought, to reach Nashville on Saturday; but a disabling wheel of the locomotive broke, and he did not reach Louisville in time for the connection. But it is an ill-wind that blows no good; so the Bishop preached in Chesnut street church on Sunday morning, and in Broadway at night. He reports the prospect in Louisville as quite encouraging. Several joined the Church in the morning."

The Legislature.

The bill for taxing dogs, now pending before the Legislature, is creating considerable interest among the farmers of the State, especially those who pay attention to sheep-raising. We regard this a very important bill—one which should be passed without a dissenting voice.—Gentlemen who are engaged in sheep-raising, tell us that the dogs destroy them in large numbers every year, and many of our best farmers have abandoned all effort in sheep growing" for the same reason.

A bill passed the Senate creating a new county out of New Hanover. It is to be called Pender county, in honor of the late Genl. W. D. Pender of Edgecomb.

Mr. LeGrand offered a resolution empowering Joint Select committe to cancel, burn or destroy certain coupons and bonds in Treasurer's office. Adopted.

A MOVE IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.—Senator Morehead has introduced a bill to authorize the county commissioners of Guilford and Rockingham to employ a number of the surplus convicts now in the penitentiary to drain a large tract of country through which run Reedy Fork, and Haw River and their tributaries. If the objects of the bill is carried out, it will bring into cultivation a large area of very fertile land and improve the health of the country.—SENTINEL.

STATE AND LOCAL.

TO HOUSE-KEEPERS.—We have just secured one of McDonald's improved baking pans. Among the thousands of inventions of the present day, this is unsurpassed by any of them. Every family should have one of these pans. No one can conceive the difference in the richness and improved quality of meats and poultry, baked in these pans, and those cooked in the ordinary way. We advise all our patrons who can do so, to supply themselves, by all means, with one of these pans. They are cheap—costing from $2.50 to $4.50. The price is regulated in proportion to the size of the pan. They are for sale by Mr. A. J. Luttrell, at the hardware store of Julius Lewis & Co. of this city.

The Knights of Pythias, of Centre Lodge of this city, gave a banquet to the Grand Lodge of that order, at the National Hotel on Wednesday evening. Josiah Turner, Col. J. J. Young, W. F. Campbell, Jno. Nichols, Maj. S. Gales, Dr. Grissom, E. W. Kerr, C. M. Busbee, N. B. Broughton, Rev. Dr. Atkinson, and Rev. Dr. Pritchard. NOTICE OF A NEW BOOK. IMPORTANT TO EDITORS.—The editor of this paper has a collection embracing twenty-three thousand different specimens of Salutatories, Valedictories and "Personals," which he designs publishing in the early Spring. When the collection is completed the book will be the most valuable one ever offered to the profession. We would thank our exchanges for any suggestions that will likely aid us in this work.—STATESVILLE LANDMARK.

The Concord Sun says: Special Deputies David Murr and Robert Denton arrested Bob Morehead, on Wednesday last, on the plantation of P. M. Morris. Bob had sworn to burn the barn of Mr. Morris, and had made the attempt. Fire and kindling were found in the barn, but had gone out. Bob, on seeing the officers, attempted to save himself by flight, but was stopped with a pistol ball.

The dwelling-house, with outhouses of Mr. H. B. Williams, in Chatham, were entirely destroyed by fire at 9 o'clock Saturday forenoon. The furniture, &c., was saved. The fire, it is supposed, originated in a defective flue. Loss, $2,500; uninsured.

DEATH OF COL. JAMES W. HINTON.—The Virginia papers announce the death of Col. Hinton, which sad event occurred at his residence in Norfolk, Va., on Saturday the 23rd instant. The "Norfolk Virginian" in alluding to his sudden death, says:

"Yesterday morning Colonel Hinton was down town, and in conversation with a friend spoke of feeling unusually well. Between 12 and 1 o'clock he entered the law office of Messrs. Goode & Chaplain, his former partners, on business, and was conversing with Mr. Goode for some time, when, on attempting to leave the room, he was stricken with paralysis. Dr. Wm. Selden, his family physician, was immediately called in, who did all that was possible, and the sufferer was conveyed to his residence on York street as soon as practicable. From this attack Col. Hinton sunk gradually, until about 6 o'clock he breathed his last peacefully in the bosom of his family. He was born in Pasquotank county, North Carolina, in the 1827, and in his boyhood received only a common country school education. He was, however, studious and diligent, and at an early age acquired the confidence of those who knew him. In 1855 or 56, he was elected clerk of this naitive county, having previously taken up his residence in Elizabeth City, the county seat. This office he held to the entire satisfaction of his constituents until the breaking out of the war. During his age embraced a legacy, and entered the Methodist church, in which denomination he continued up to the time of his death. He was a member of the Granby Street M. E. Church, and was also the President of the Sabbath School Association of Norfolk, Portsmouth and Berkley, and in that peculiar department he was, as in everything else, enthusiastic and persevering exciting every effort to bring pupils to the schools under the control of the Association, and making himself almost indispensable to that body.

A New Paper

The Children's Friend will be published every Wednesday, at the Orphan Asylum, in Oxford N C. It will enter a field occupied by no other paper, representing no party in politics and no sect in religion; but helping all parties and all sects to unite in promoting the judicious education of the young, and the continuous improvement of the old. It will discuss the duties and privileges of parents and teachers, and will defend the rights and denounce the wrongs of children. It will expel all the base our University has desolate and our Colleges and Schools are poorly attended, while the Stockade is ill seems to be too small to contain the vast throngs which crowd our penitentiary. It will give special attention to poor orphans and will tell them how to escape their present degradation, how to grow up into wise and virtuous men and women, and how to secure liberal wages for honest work. The object of the paper is to help all our people to the good and do good. Price one dollar a year, always in advance. A few cash advertisements will be admitted, at ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line for each subsequent insertion. The same advertisement will not be inserted more than thirteen times, as a live paper can not afford to sing any one song forever. The first number will appear on Wednesday, the sixth of January, 1875. All friends of the young are requested to forward subscriptions at once.

Merry Workers.

Tell me what the mill doth say,
Clatter, clatter, night and day;
Oh, when asleep and when we wake,
Clatter, clatter it doth make,
Never idle, never still,
What a worker is the mill!

Hearken what the rill doth say,
As it journeys every day;
Sound we sky-lark on the wing,
Ripple, dimple, it doth sing,
Never idle, never still,
What a worker is the rill!

Listen to the honey bee,
As it dances merrily
To the little fairy's drum.
Humming, drumming, drumming drum.
Never idle, never still,
Humming, drumming, hum it will.

Like the mill, the rill, the bee,
I would never idle be.
What says rook a doodle doo?
Up—there's work enough for you.
If I work then, with a will,
It will be but playing still.
Ever merry, never weary,
It will be but playful still!

What a Little Girl Did.

A lady who thought she would try to do some good, called together some poor little girls on Saturday afternoon to teach them sewing. She got two or three to help her, and they gathered together quite a number of poor children whose parents did not attend church. There was present one little girl whose mother had died, and whose father kept a small store or shop. They were talking about the holy Sabbath, and the wrong of doing any work on the Sabbath, and the thought took hold on the little girl's mind. They did not know who she was, but she went home, and on Saturday evening she said to her father, throwing her arms around his neck, "Father, you are a good father. I love you." but," said she, "sometimes you are naughty." "Way," said he, "what makes you talk so?" "Well," said she, "sometimes you keep your store open on Sunday, and you know you never did so when mother was alive and it is naughty." "Why, said he, "what makes you talk that way? Who has put that nonsence into your head?" "Father, it is wrong. You know I love you, and she nestled up close to him. He tried to put her away, but she would have her arms around his neck. "Now, father," she continued, 'don't keep the store open any more.' On Sunday morning he was restless. He didn't go to open the store as usual, and he would wait till after breakfast. Finally he said, 'my little girl, put on your bonnet and we will go to church. I will not keep the store open to day.' And he went to church for the first time in some years, and it three or four weeks that man was converted, and all through the soft, kind entreaty of that little child.—Bishop Simpson.

Farm, Garden & Household.

Improving a Worn-Out Farm.

From the Country Gentleman.

A correspondent in Somerset County, Pa., who for three years has been endeavoring to raise wheat, and who with some barnyard manure can only get ten bushels per acre, makes the following inquiries—his farm being 300 worn out acres of high and dry land, on which he can now only raise hay and straw enough for manure for six or seven acres:

1. Will lime destroy the sorrel which often overgrows all crops, and if so, is it best applied to wheat? And how much?

2. Is lime useful to corn, and if so, how should it be applied? The sorrel grows most where the manure is applied.

3. I have fifteen acres of pretty good sod land, plowed for corn and oats next spring. Will lime improve it, should it be broadcasted, and would fifty bushels per acre be enough? As lime can be had only for very hard work or cash, I should be very sorry to throw it away.

4. I have a seventy acre corn swamp, where muck can be had by the hundred tons. Will it pay to dig and haul it? Some say 50, others 100 and 200 loads should be applied to the acre, and I am at loss. Please inform me.

5. Shall I plow sod land for wheat?

1. On some soils of peculiar characteristics lime has extirpated sorrel, but this result may be regarded as an exception and not the general rule. Sorrel, like other weeds, is to be destroyed by cultivation, and will doubtless have to be treated in this way on your land, where its growth is increased by manure. Lime is, however, generally useful to land, but it is not often that its effects are very obvious or striking, although long continued. On some land it has no visible effect. We advise you to experiment with it on a moderate scale. You will thus learn more about it than you can from any amount of advice. It often happens that 50 bushels per acre are nearly as good as twice or three times that amount. As it usually effects a moderate and long continued improvement of the land (in connection with manuring, &c.) it is not important to what crop it is applied, provided it can be evenly spread in a finely pulverized state, and intermixed with the soil by harrowing.

2. The general improvement which it usually effects is felt by corn as well as other crops.

3. The previous answers meet this question. Lime should always be applied broadcast. We would not advise you to expend a very large sum for liming, until by experimenting a year or two you learn its results. As a matter of economy in expenditure, you may apply a moderate quantity, say not over 50 bushels per acre, and as an experiment a portion of the land with half that amount, observing the comparative results.

4. Muck, applied directly to land, produces a good effect under two conditions; first, when there is little or no vegetable matter in the soil; and secondly, where there are peculiar or accidental fertilizing matters in the muck. Ordinarily, neither of these conditions exist, and for this reason we cannot generally recommend its application with a promise of any striking effects; and in all cases can only advise experiment on a moderate scale. As an absorbent muck is always useful in manure yards, provided it is not wet when used.

5. It is not advisable to plow corn land late for wheat; the generally approved practice is to plant corn on sod, to be followed by barely or peas, and then wheat. A clover sod not more than two or three years old, however, often does well for wheat.

By way of general advice to our correspondent, who can at present obtain but little manure, we would recommend him to introduce gradually, and as fast as circumstances will admit, the practice of plowing under green crops of clover as being probably the cheapest mode of enriching his worn out land. If he can procure gypsum, a bushel per acre in the spring on the young clover would doubtless prove a matter of economy, and a moderate application of lime would probably be of much use to the clover. As crops and animals increase, manure made from feeding clover will greatly assist in the improvement. Time will always be required to restore worn out farms and it must be gradual and the work of years.

Treating The Wrong Disease.

Many times women call upon their family physicians, one with dyspepsia, another with palpitation, another with trouble of the breast, another with pain here and there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy going and indifferent doctors, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when in reality they are all symptoms caused by some definite disease; and while they are thus only able perhaps to palliate for a time, they are generally ignorant of the cause, and encourage their practice until large bills are made when the suffering patients are no better in the end, but probably worse for the delay, treatment, and other complications made; and which a proper medicine directed to the cause would have entirely removed, thereby restoring health and comfort instead of prolonged misery.

From Mrs. Lorinda E. St. Clair, Shoals, Ohio.

"Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Your Favorite Prescription is working almost like a miracle on me. I am better already than I have been for over two years."

From Rev. A. Schuler, Zanesville, Ind.: "The Prescription is performing wonders in my case. I am not much through with the second bottle, and can now walk about the house without crutches. I have taken no other medicine."

From Mrs. John K. Hamlin, Dowell, Ill.: "Dr. Pierce—The Favorite Prescription has done me good, which I am very thankful for."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is sold by dealers in medicine.

A Triumph Over Humbug.

It is not difficult to claim the title, and many are powerful so. Aware of this fact, the venders of pseudo-bitters, "entirely free from alcohol," have issued a false cry against tonic preparations containing spirits, and no doubt have frightened a few sick folks into purchasing the tormented rubbish which they sell, and which is fatlessly more injurious than the vilest drams drank at tavern bars. But already a tremendous reaction has set in against these phantom concoctions, which, being devoid of the alcoholic principle which alone prevents liquid bodies or preparations from turning sour, leeds poor unfortunates among mankind to believe Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has blood and will build up bows, notwithstanding such impostures. A regular recurrence of the demand for the great alterative invigorant from those who have always been its patrons, shows that they have not swerved in their thus-considered allegiance to America's most popular remedy, and a constant influx of new orders demonstrates how little impression, after all, the bluster and denunciations of the rum & bitters men have made upon the general public. So long as Hostetter's Bitters continue to cure and prevent all manner of ills, remittent fever, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney disease, and the numerous other ailments to which they are adapted, they will continue to defy all the factious opposition of humbugs, and stand as well to-day as long as they are manufactured and sold. Be it known that all bogus warrant venders, of every degree of audacity, reckon very much that they can over-reach public favor at the expense of Hostetter's Bitters the reputation of which I foretold, is all wrong, from a rock.

EAST IND A HUMP.

And What We Know About It

Instead of devoting a column to the merits of this strange and wonderful plant, we republish an excellent article which speaks for itself. Other lips than ours (believing that those who have suffered most can better tell the story) We will here quote word for word a number recently received, simply adding our testimony to the rest in saying, from what we have used, we believe it to be a most valuable and positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in seventy-two hours.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, Allegheny City Pa., Nov. 16, 1874.

The East Indian Hemp has been taken by Rev. Matthias Binder, O. S. B., and Rev. Sebastian Arnold, O. S. B., with excellent results of this church, and so far has given relief to both. They suffered from affections of the lungs and bronchial organs. We have consumption through charity to sufferers, the Guardelis Indicus to different persons and continue the same in good conscience, knowing the effects by experience. Please find enclosed check for twelve bottles of syrup pills and ointment. We shall inform you in due time what further success the medicine shall meet with.

Yours truly,
REV. FERDINAND WOLF, O. S. B.,
87 Washington Street.

CHINA GROVE, Rowan Co., N. C., Dec. 21, 1874.

Send one dozen Ointment and one of Cannabis Indica. When Mr. J. W. Fisher brought his wife to me for examination, I found her in the incipient stage of pulmonary consumption. Then it was I concluded to make a fair trial of India Hemp, and now there is a general demand for those remedies. The Ointment excels everything and anything of its kind I ever saw or tried; in many cases it acts like a charm.

Fraternally yours,
P. A. SIFFORD, M. D.

RIDGEVILLE, Caswell, N. C., Sept. 12, 1874.

Inclosed is $10 for more of the Indian Hemp. I can truly say that this medicine has done me more good than all the doctors, and I had several of the best in the country. My cough is a green deal better, and my chills and night sweats are gone. You will please send for several orders soon, as many have seen the effect of this medicine on me.

W. A. FULLER.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct 20 1874.

Your treatment for consumption has so improved my condition, that the doubting comes every day from my friends, what are you taking? Several are talking of sending for some of your medicine, and I have their desires me to order for him $9 worth of the Hemp.

WM. HUNT, Notia High Street.

P. S.—It is my opinion that an agent at Dela place would sell considerable for you.

W. H.

DECATUR, Franklin, Texas, Sept 27, 1874.

I send three more bottles of your consumption and bronchitis cure. My son began taking the Hemp last night three weeks ago, and he is improving rapidly. The last ten days have made him look and act like another person. I have great hopes.

J. M. BEATTON

DEER RIVER, Poweshiek, Iowa, Jan. 3, 1874.

Have just seen your advertisement in my paper. I know all about the Cannabis Indica. Fifteen years ago it cured my daughter of the Asthma. She had it very bad for several years but was perfectly cured.

JACOB TROUT.

N. B.—This Remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. $2.50 per bottle, or three bottles for $6.50. Pills and Ointment $1.25 each. Sent at our risk. Address

[illegible]

Communicated.

For the Advocate.

Rev. E. A. Yates.

Rev. and Dear Brethren: In my former letter I promised your article published in the Raleigh Christian Advocate of 11th Nov. until I reached what I suppose to be your main position. I give it in your own language: "The Holy Spirit by virtue of the atonement gives the heathen in his conscience a knowledge of right and wrong, and therefore he who is without the outward preaching as a law within, which if he obeys, lives up to the light in his conscience, shall be saved."

That is a fair and candid statement of your position, and I propose reviewing it with equal fairness and candor. Your position being an affirmative one, upon you devolves the burden of proof. I ask for the proof. Where in all the Bible is one text that teaches that a fallen, guilty creature, who has violated the law of his God will be saved upon the condition that he lives up to the light he has? I do not ask you to show that it is in accordance with the tenor of Scripture, but I ask you to produce one single text that teaches such a plan of salvation. Is it not remarkable, that having given the above as the basis of your theory, you do not produce a single text of Scripture in proof of it? My first objection, then, is that there is not a particle of Scriptural proof to sustain your position. All we know of God's method of saving sinners is what he has revealed to us. He has revealed that they are saved through the atonement of Christ: and upon condition of faith in him. "To him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10th chap. 42nd verse.—Now, if God has another way of saving sinners, where is the proof of it? It is not to be found in the revelation God has given us. And how come we to be "wise above what is written?"

My next objection is, that if they are saved by living up to the light they have—if that saves them, as you affirm it does, then they are saved by works, and not by grace. They are saved by their obedience to the light they have—that "will save them."—Then their salvation is a matter of right, not of grace. That is in direct opposition to the teaching of the Scriptures. "For by grace are ye saved through faith: and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2 chap. 8 and 9 verses. "Therefore by the deeds of the law, there shall be no flesh justified in his sight." Rom. 3d chap. 20th verse.—Faith in Christ is the only method of salvation that God has revealed for sinners. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." I Cor. 3d chap. 11th v. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men where by we must be saved." Acts 4th chap. 12th verse. "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by faith in Jesus Christ; even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." Gal. 2 chap. 16 verse. We maintain, and only that faith in Jesus Christ is the method of salvation that God has revealed, but that there is no "other way." For the Apostle says: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. 1 chap. 8 v.

The last objection I will present is, That you suppose a case that does not exist. You say, That if the heathen live up to the light he has, that will save him. But there is no man who lives up to the light he has: "For there is no man that sinneth not." 1st Kings 8 chap. 46 v. Those who have held extreme views of christian perfection, have never maintained such a state of perfection under the influence of the gospel as that to which your theory supposes heathenism capable of raising fallen, depraved human nature. For if living up to the light they have saves them, there must be no deviation. It must be full, perfect, entire and obedience. One act of disobedience, in all their life, to the law "written in their hearts," would forfeit their claim to salvation. The least deviation would mar and ruin the service. For their claim rests upon the merit of obedience—their living up to the light they have. But if heathenism raises depraved human nature to such a state of perfection, even it is superior to Christianity: and to send the gospel to the heathen would be to do them a moral injury. It would reduce them from that high state of perfection in which they are capable of rendering perfect obedience to the law "written within," so that they can claim salvation as a matter of right, to that state of imperfection that requires the blood of atonement to constantly plead in their behalf.—But if none of the heathen are saved but those who live up to the light they have, and none of them live up to that light, then none of them are saved. Which horn of the dilemma do you take? The Apostle is clear and distinct upon the moral state of the heathen. He says he has "proved both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin." Rom. 3 chap. 9 verse. "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3rd chap. 23rd verse.

You are very kind to inform us that Bro. Ridley has misapplied the 10th chap 14, 15 and 17 verses of the Epistle to the Romans, for we never could have learned it from anything the Apostle has said. You say the Apostle is "simply showing that the gospel is for the Gentiles as well as for the Jews: and is justifying himself in going to the Gentiles." The confidence with which you make this statement has led me to carefully examine the entire chapter, and I confess my inability to discover any such design.—I then examined Bro. A. Clark on the chapter and found that he had also failed to make the discovery. With all due deference, I must join issue with you. I maintain that the Apostle is there teaching that a man is justified by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and that is God's only plan for saving sinners. He commences the chapter by declaring his solicitude for the salvation of the Jews. He then assumes that they have failed to obtain salvation, and assigns as the reason of their failure, that they did not seek it upon God's plan, but in their own way. He then teaches that God's plan for saving sinners is faith in Christ. "For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." That the Jews were ignorant of God's plan of saving sinners, and sought salvation by the works of the law. "For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." He then gives a lucid exposition of justification by faith. He then teaches that God requires the same condition of all: and that all who comply with the required condition shall be saved. "For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him." "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

These are his premises, and they follow in consecutive order. From these premises, he draws the following conclusions, viz: That they cannot call on him—(referring to the Lord Jesus Christ of whom he had been speaking as the object of faith) in whom they have not believed. That they cannot believe in him of whom they have not heard. That they cannot hear unless the gospel be preached to them. That the gospel cannot be preached unless a preacher be divinely appointed or commissioned to preach it. Or it may mean that unless the church send him, as Paul and Barnabas were sent by the church at Jerusalem to preach to the Gentiles, and Peter was to restrict his ministry to the Jews. "How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" Rom. 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses.

I ask the reader to pause right here, and read the 10th chapter to the Romans and say which of us has given a correct exposition of the teaching of the Apostle. If the Apostle means what he says in the 10th chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of the Epistle to the Romans, then the word of God is conclusive against you.

Your next position is, that the Apostle could not intend to teach in the 10th chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of Rom., that the heathen who die without hearing the gospel preached are necessarily lost. That that "is evident from passages that state just the contrary." Is that sound reasoning? Why not say, that in those passages (if there be such) the Apostle cannot teach the contrary, because in the 10th chap., 14, 14 and 15 verses of Romans he teaches they are lost? Won't not the reasoning be the same? If so, what is such an argument worth?—The Apostle in the above cited passage teaches that they cannot be saved. That they are lost, I suppose, follows as a consequence. But if there be any passages or passage in the Scriptures that teaches just the contrary, then I will abandon my position on this subject and embrace yours. If you fail to produce such passages or such a passage, will you abandon your position and embrace mine?

The first text you cite is Rom. 2 chap. 14 v. "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves." That is certainly Scripture. And so is this Scripture. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." The one passage no more proves that the heathen are not lost than does the other: for neither passage says one word on the subject. A Scriptural quotation does not amount to any thing unless it is applicable to the subject for which it is quoted. The text you cite, while it does not say one word about the salvation of the heathen, does teach an important truth in reference to them. It teaches that they are under law, and that is all it does teach. When you have derived that from the text it is exhausted. There is nothing more. But to teach that a man is under law does not teach that he is saved. The devils were under law, and they are damned. Wicked men were under law, and they are lost. Adam was under law and he fell. If you had continued your quotation the next verse would have taught another important truth. It teaches what law they are under. "Which show the works of the law written in their hearts; their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another." Here the Apostle does not teach that they are simply under a law, but under the law—the moral law of which he had been speaking.—Here we learn that all are under the moral law. That those who have not a written revelation have the law written on their hearts. And we learn from Rom. 3 chap. 23 v. that "all have sinned." And from 1 John 3 chap. 4 v. that, "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." And from Gal. 3 chap. 10 v. that "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." So we learn that the heathen are not only under the moral law, but under its curse. With these facts before us it is worse than trifling to talk about God damning the heathen for not believing a gospel they never heard. As ministers of Christ we should look deeper into Divine truth than that. We should remember that the gospel is a remedial plan for saving the lost; and that if it fail to reach them, that they, as a consequence, fail of its benefits.

The next text you cite is Rom. 2 chap. 12 v. "For as many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." This passage is appropriate.—It is directly to the point: but it teaches directly the opposite of that for which you address it. The Apostle in the 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of Rom. teaches that men cannot be saved without the gospel, and you cite this passage to prove that he has taught elsewhere just the contrary: and the passage you cite teaches that they shall perish. The one teaches they cannot be saved without the gospel, and the other states emphatically that they shall perish: and the one you cite as contrary to the other. You propose to prove by passages from the writings of St. Paul that in the 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of his Epistle to the Rom., he does not teach that the heathen who die without hearing the gospel are necessarily lost. And you propose to prove it by passages which teach just the contrary. You produce two passages. From the one we learn they are under the moral law, and that they are under its curse. From the other we learn that they shall perish. And if you had cited any other passages the result would have been the same. For the Scriptures do not contradict themselves. One portion is not contrary to another. If there is any contradiction it is in our own minds, not in the Scriptures. When you started out on that line I knew you would be defeated.

But you say, "Is not the inference clear and logical, that, as some have sinned and been judged or perished by this conscience-law, so others have not sinned and have been judged and saved by the same law?" Worse and worse. You state that to be a clear and logical conclusion which is the reverse of what the Apostle says he has proved to be true. "For we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin." Rom. 3 chap. 9 v. "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God"—"For there is no man that sinneth not." 1 Kings 8 chap. 46 v. You say: Is it not a clear and logical inference that others have not sinned, &c. When our logic contradicts the word of God as directly as that, it is time to question the correctness of our logic. But the passage you cite does not say "some." It says "as many" as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law. That the phrase "as many" includes all—every one, is manifest from the fact that the same phrase (as many) occurs in the latter clause of the sentence, "and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." Now, when you have as many as are without (as you justly remark, without the written law) and as many as are in the law, (have the written law) you have all. There is no third class who have the law and at the same time do not have it. But why cite a passage of Scripture to prove a point which so totally fails you that you have to change the Scripture you cite before you can so much as draw an inference from it (however illogical) in support of your position? But you proposed to prove by passages of Scripture, not by inferences, just the contrary of what I maintain the Apostle teaches in the 10 chap., 13, 14 and 15 verses of Romans. Your Scriptural passages have failed you, and you now resort to inferences, and you have to change the Scripture before you can find a place for an inference in favor of your position.

I now come to your last position. "That the heathen saved without the preaching of the gospel takes a low position in the scale of salvation."—Poor fellows! And all that "just because Bro. Yates does not go and preach the gospel to them."—But how do you reconcile that with your previous position that they were not saved, and upon that supposition being judged and saved? I would suppose that beings coming into the world with a nature fallen so utterly depraved, without the light and influence of the gospel to assist them, who had spent a whole life in a world like this, without having sinned against God, ought to have a very high position in the scale of salvation"—a position not only above Christians, but above angels who have not been placed in such untoward circumstances. I believe you do not claim any Scriptural authority for this position. It seems fairly novel: and in taking it you have not shown any undue attachment to old landmarks," &c.

I now come to the motives why we should send the gospel to the heathen. You say: "Because of its humanizing, civilizing and ennobling influences,—Christ loved it better than inventions of men, the devotion of woman to her proper sphere, and the bestowal of justice principles of government." How low! How insignificant! How meagre and utterly contemptible! are such motives when contrasted with motives drawn from the eternal world! And is there no higher motives than these that millions are poured into the missionary treasury? Is it for motives like these that the brightest minds and purest hearts leave home and friends and country and all of earth that is dear, and spend a life in foreign lands, and live and die among heathens and savages? No, indeed! There are millions of immortal souls for whom Christ died who are perishing for lack of knowledge. "Thy brother's blood crieth against thee from the earth." We enjoy the glorious hopes of immortality begotten in our hearts by the gospel of Christ. And shall we live in luxury, and hoard up wealth while millions of immortal souls go into eternity without hearing that there is any Saviour for the lost?

But if the heathen be under the moral law, and are under its curse, can they be saved? Yes, they can. "For God hath concluded all under sin that he may have mercy on all."—If the heathen can be saved, has God no clear revelation as to how they are to be saved? I answer, he has. Is it to living up to the light they have? No. The Bible nowhere teaches that as God's plan for saving the heathen. What then is the plan that God has revealed? "And the Scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham." Gal. 3 chap. 8 v. Then the plan is as plain as God's word can make it.

I have now finished my review of your article published in the Raleigh Christian Advocate of the 11th of Nov. I engaged in it from a sense of duty, and for the purpose of counteracting its influence upon the public mind. I confess I also indulged a hope that you had endorsed the sentiments contained in that article with out mature reflection, and that upon further investigation you would see that they are not tenable. How far I may have succeeded in accomplishing the object I have had in view is yet to be developed. I have tried to use soft words, but strong arguments. I have struck out every sentence that seemed to be sharp, that I might not either offend or wound a friend and brother. I have tried to be as dull as possible. I have had no ambition to obtain a triumph over you in an argument. I should abhor myself if I thought I could be influenced by such a motive. If I have demolished your position it reflects no credit on my intellect, and no discredit on yours.—Truth is easily vindicated. Error involves even a vigorous mind in difficulties. That an easy road to travel. Yours were the strugglings of a strong man in a morass.

It might provoke a smile, if it was not so serious in its consequences, to see Pres. Abernethy, Rev. J. R. Brooks and yourself starting from the same stand point, and diverging so widely, that it would be a less difficult task to reconcile you to Pres. Robey or my self than to either of your co-adjutors. Pres. Abernethy ignores the decalogue, and in fact the entire Bible. My young friend, Rev. J. R. Brooks, plants himself fully on the platform of the deist. He says, that a belief in God and his attributes is the faith required. That is identically the position of all the deistical writers. The deist believes in God and his attributes. The Christian believes in Christ. No deistical writer will object to the position of Rev. J. R. Brooks, though the better class of them will assign to Christ a more respectable position in their creed than he does. He says that Christ is but the development of one of God's attributes. And he congratulates himself that the heathen, the Christian and the Jew can all stand on his platform. I will add it is broad enough for every one else to stand upon it, except the atheist, and not be crowded then. The Jew denies Christ, vilifies him for an impostor, and he can stand on Bro. Brooks' platform! It is time we make our platforms a little more christian. You take positions which I am sure your discriminating mind would reject when writing on any other subject. Such are the fruitful consequences of admitting one theological error into our creed.

Pres. Abernethy's plan for saving the heathen is the worship of idols, and for God to accept that worship as if offered to himself. Bro. Brooks' plan is a belief in God and his attributes, from which faith in Christ is excluded; while your plan is, their living up to the light they have. From these schemes of human devising, let us turn to our true guide, the Scriptures, and there learn what is God's plan. "And the Scriptnre foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all nations be blessed." Gal. 3 chap. and 8 v. "Now, to Abraham and his seed were the promises made.—He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3 chap. 16 v. We here learn "that God will justify the heathen," and that the condition upon which he will justify the heathen is faith, "God would justify the heathen through faith," and that the faith by which God will justify them is faith in Christ: "He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." And we further learn that the means necessary to produce faith in Christ is the preaching of the gospel.—The Scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel, &c. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Rom. 10 chap. 17 v.

These strictures are directed against the error, not the men. I have not the pleasure of an acquaintance with Pres. Abernethy. I admire him for his zeal and energy in building up a literary institution of high grade, without the aid of church or state; and upon more than one occasion I have shown myself to be his friend. But he ought to learn the ten commandments As the school boys say, he ought to learn the first and second "by heart."

It was my good fortune to be the first Presiding Elder of both Bro Brooks and yourself when you entered the Conference. I then learned to esteem each of you for your intellect, and love you for your amiable qualities. Time has only increased my esteem and love for you both. Whatever impression these strictures may now have upon either of your minds, when I shall have passed away, as soon I will, you will then remember that your first Presiding Elder would not tolerate a theological error though advocated by two of his best friends.

As ever, your friend and brother,

WILLIAM CLOSS.

Religion

Religion of some kind is a subject which at times at least, occupies the thoughtful consideration of all the inhabitants of our mundane sphere—that is religion so called; but the true religion as taught by our Divine Master is comparatively little understood even by the baptized thousands of our modern Ismel. I will pass over the perversions of the term as embraced in the thousand and one of its corruptions from the Hindoo rites to the adherents of the Arabian madman, and shall refer only to the small the most enlightened portion of our race in this progressive nineteenth century in the Protestant branches of the church militant.

By not a few, Religion is thought to be only of the emotional nature and consequently only felt as the emotions are brought into active exercise and therefore fitful. By others considered only in the light of abnegation and crucial offerings. By some, as in the moralists, a matter only of the judgement and devoid of all ebullition of feeling. My idea of true religion is this—it is a matter of faith, judgment and emotion. Taking Divine revelation as a constant and only text book, following closely its injunctions under the light and guidance of the Holy Spirit allowing the judgement, the heart, mind and emotions full scope in conformity with the revealed word. At times the emotional nature is so powerfully excited under an extraordinary flood—tide of the Spirit that it would be sinful if not impossible to restrain those feelings which could find vent only through this channel, and in different degrees affecting different individuals as to their nervous or easily excited natures in contrast with a physical nature or constitution of a phlegmatic cast.

While at times our feelings may and will be affected more than at others, for we all are more or less affected by circumstances surrounding us, yet there must be ever with us an abiding sense of our weakness, of our leader's goodness—and a clear felt faith, both in His ability and willingness to perform what His word teaches—and an inward acknowledgement of the justice of His claims. Works will necessarily follow faith as the night the day and are inseparably connected,—an existing correlation. Forms and ceremonies are necessary only as adjuncts to connectional worship but should ever be found apart from the sum and substance of vital religion.

Paul may plant and Apollos water, yet God only gives the increase. Man and God are co-workers in the soul's salvation, for without the former's willingness and exertion to be saved God would be inconsistent with Himself and the moral perfections of His being to an enforcement of it; so while the Divine Being condescends in His merciful goodness to plead with man as a sinner to embrace the terms of His salvation, man must obey.

Love, supreme love to God, and to love our neighbor as ourselves are the sum and substance of the law and embrace all others, for if these abound all the other christian graces are necessary consequents. An enumeration of the vices to shun, and the virtues to embrace, are unnecessary here, they will each come up in living array before the probationer as he advances—in full force—and he who overcomes the former will find full fruition in the enjoyment of the latter—for the promise is to him who overcomes. Consolatory too is it that as thy days may demand shall thy strength ever be. And now unto Him who is able to keep us from falling and to present us faultless before His Throne, be honor and Glory both now and forever! Amen

Urgent Appeal to Southern Methodists.

DEAR BRETHREN:—This appeal is to you. Stop long enough to read and consider. We were present at the meeting of the Board of Missions in Nashville, Jan. 27. Facts were developed there extremely painful to every lover of Christ and his Church amongst us.

All the Conferences have been held but one. All the Treasurers of the Annual Conference Boards have reported except one or two. We therefore know the exact state of our finances. After paying what is already due to our devoted missionaries for services rendered the last Conference-year, the Board will scarcely have money enough in the Treasury to pay them for the first quarter of the present year.

What shall be done for our missionaries? Must they suffer when we have plenty? Must they quit the field? Must the work be suspended? Shall the poor and the heathen be allowed to perish for want of the bread of life?

We appeal to our Presiding Elders. At your next quarterly-meetings make the support of Missions the live question of your Quarterly Conferences. It is the duty of your preachers to lift two collections for Missions during the year—one for Foreign and another for Domestic Missions. Now, if we were not sorely pressed for money to prevent our brethren on Missions from actual suffering, it would even then be the best policy—the best financiering to take one of these collections in the early part of the Conference-year.

We appeal to every preacher in charge. Put yourself in the place of one of these brethren for whom we plead. Suppose you were certain only of one-quarter of your salary, and had to wait to an indefinite period for your second, third, and fourth? You would then feel exactly as our missionaries must feel with these facts now before them. We urge you, therefore, to present their subject to your people the first clear Sunday when most of them are present. If you can do no better, read this appeal to them, and comment and enlarge upon it. In our cities and large towns the winter is the very best season to attend to every kind of Church work, and especially is it the best time to raise money. This every pastor knows. Half the people are away in the summer.

Our missionary Secretaries published an Appeal for Missions in the Christian Advocate of Jan. 16. It was read by one of our prompt young preachers on Saturday. On Monday he was ready to pay the full amount of his assessment into the hands of the Treasurer. There are hundreds of pastors in our Church who have wealthier congregations than he.

We appeal to our people. You profess to be the heirs of salvation—the great salvation purchased by the precious blood of Christ. Is not the contribution of five, ten, twenty, or even one hundred dollars, to the cause of Missions, within the mouth of February, simply a question of willingness, and not a question of ability? Answer to an enlightened conscience, and you will act at once.

Think of the self-sacrificing missionary in danger of being exposed almost to nakedness and hunger—think of the ignorant, and destitute, and heathen, who must have the gospel—imagine yourselves in their situation, and then remember the Golden Rule, and we do not fear the result. What should hinder the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, or tarnish the honor of our Church, when the gold rightfully belongs to the Lord?

Send your collections, as soon as taken, to our Treasurer, the Rev. A. H. Redford, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

Chinese Books

Printing a book in China is done as follows: Two pages are written by one trained to the business on a sheet of thin paper, divided into columns by black lines, and in the space between the two pages are written the title of the work and the number of chapter and page. When the sheet has been printed it is folded down through this space, so as to bring the title, etc, partly on each page. The sheet when ready for printing, is pasted face downward on a smooth block of wood, made usually from the pear or a plum tree. As soon as it is dry the paper is rubbed off with great care, leaving behind an inverted impression of the characters. Another workman now cuts away the blank spaces by means of a sharp graver, and the block is then passed to the printer who performs his work by hand. The two points he has to be most careful about are to ink the character equally with his brush, and to avoid tearing the paper when taking the impression. From a good wooden block some 15,000 copies may be printed, and when the characters have been sharpened up a little, it is possible to obtain 8000 or 10,000 more impresions.

How to Account for Jesus.

He (Jesus Christ) is not to be accounted for by any spiritual Darwinism, by any possible process of development. Do what you will with His character, you cannot bring him into line with His predecessors, whether Jewish or Gentile, or with the culture or standard of His age. These eighteen centuries of progress have not brought the advanced guard of humanity up to Him. We can trace the rudiments of other pre eminent characters, and show whence and how they grew. There is no human or earthly accounting for Him. The character of Christ as portrayed in the Gospels is the highest possible evidence of their authenticity. It is a character which without an original, could not have been conceived by the evangelists; one for which they had neither the materials within their reach, nor the genius or culture requisite for its invention. As an actual character, it could not, by any possibility have been formed by antecedent or surrounding influences. It was not a natural development: for human virtue has not yet developed up to its standard. Its human side cannot possibly be authentic, unless its Divine side be equally authentic.—Dr. A. P. Peabody's Lectures for 1874.

Golden Words for Young Men.

I beg that you will remember that you may acquire fortune on terms of honor and self-respect if you will only have courage to insist upon those terms and submit to none other. I had occasion a few years ago, to say to a class of young men about to take their position in the profession of law, that I believed, and I do believe, that it was equally certain that talent, ability, honor, would achieve everything that the human heart ought to desire, if only it is insisted that they should be achieved without any concessions of one's conviction of right, or one's sense of duty; that it is equally—perhaps not quite equally—easy, perhaps not quite so speedy, but far more certain—and when the object is attained it would not turn to ashes in your grasp. I have never known a man so eager for objects of ambition or of fortune, that he sought to attain them by indirection who did not find that when they were attained they failed to satisfy. Even a man who has stolen largely of public money begins to desire public esteem and to turn round and contrive how to get it, and if he can't get the reality he seeks to get samples of the sham article. The human heart is incapable of being satisfied with anything but real victories in the race of life, and, therefore, young men, and this is the last observation I have to make to you, ever feel that the right will be successful, and the right only.—Extract from a recent Address of Gov. Tilden, of N. Y.

Editing a Newspaper.

"The world at large do not know the mysteries of a newspaper; and as in a watch, the hands that are seen are but passive instruments of the springs, which are not seen, so in a newspaper the most worthy causes of its prosperity are often least observed or known. Who suspects the benefit the paper derives from the enterprise, the vigilance, and the watchful fidelity of the publisher? Who pauses to think how much of the pleasure of reading is derived from the skill and care of the printer? We feel the blemishes of printing if they exist, but seldom observe excellences. We eat a hearty dinner, but do we think of the farmer that raises the materials thereof, or the cook that prepares them with infinite pains and skill? But a cook of vegetables, meat, pastry, and infinite bonbons, has a paradisaical office in comparison with an editor! Before him pass all the exchange newspapers. He is to know all their contents, to mark for other eyes the matter that requires attention. His scissors are to be alert, and clip with incessant industry all the little items that together form so large an interest in the news department. He passes in review each week every State in the Union, through the newspaper lens. He looks across the ocean and sees strange lands, and following the sun, he searches all around the world for material. It will require but one second for the reader to take in what two hours' search, produced. By him are read the manuscripts that swarm the office like flies in July. It is his frown that dooms them. It is his hand that condenses a whole page into a line. It is his discreet sternness that restricts sentimental obituaries; that gives poets a twig on which to sit and sing their first lays. And the power behind the throne in newspapers, as in higher places, is sometimes as important as the throne itself. Correspondents, occasional and regular, stand in awe at the silent power which has the last glance at an article, and may send it forth in glory or humility. And, in short, as the health of the body depends upon a good digestion, so the health of a newspaper depends upon that vigorous digestion which goes on by means of the editor."

THE Wesleyans in England are greatly exercised over their liturgy, because they have discovered germs of Ritualism in it. A committee was appointed at the late Conference to consider the revision of their liturgy, and to remove all expressions that can be construed into Ritualistic form or meaning.

REV. WM. H. MILBURN is supplying the pulpit of Trinity Methodist church Chicago, pending the arrival of the expected pastor—Dr. O. H. Tiffany—in March. Crowds went to hear the eloquent "blind preacher" last Sunday.

The Preacher's Joke.

Ministers enjoy a good joke. Dr. Strong of Hartford does. He had invited a young minister to preach for him whose sermon was dull and long. The people became wearied. About the time for the commencement of the afternoon service Dr. Strong saw his people flocking across the river to another church. He readily understood that they feared to hear the same young man in the afternoon. Gathering up his wits, he said to the young minister: "My brother across the river is very feeble, and I know he will take it kindly to have you preach to his people, and if you will do so I will give you a note to him; and he will be as much obliged to you as I would to have you preach for me, and I want you to preach the same sermon you preached to my people this morning." The young minister, supposing this to be a commendation of his sermon, started off in good spirits, delivered his note, and was invited to preach most cordially. He saw before him half of Dr. Strong's people, and they had to listen one hour and a half to the same dull humdrum sermon that they had heard in the morning. They understood the joke, however, and said they would never undertake to run away from Dr. Strong again.

Be Earnest.

Are you members of the Church which Christ has purchased with His own blood? Have you tasted the good word of God and the powers of the world to come? Your very position before the world indicates what duties should rest on your heart and conscience. The Church is, or should be, "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth." A wise man has said: "The Christian is the world's Bible, and the only one which it reads." Believers should be living epistles, read and known to all men. The world is too busy to read books, either divine or human. But they read men who profess godliness critically, and the judgment they form of us, with a proper opportunity, is usually correct. They are not mistaken in supposing that piety is more than mere belief in divine revelation and outward profession. They know that when the heart is right with God, and full of love, the life will show it.

A Word About the Lungs.

In nearly all cases the natural capacity and area of the chest are sufficient for all the uses of respiration. But the capacity of the chest may be diminished by the habit of stooping, or by the abominable practice of tight lacing. The false grace of the wasp form in women is almost always gained at the expense of the lungs. The tight belt and the armor above it fatally compresses the air cells and forbids all easy union of the oxygen of the air with the currents of the blood. The lungs cannot well spare one square inch of the space which they naturally fill. Consumption is the sequel of the corsets. The war of hygiene upon tight waists must be positive and unceasing, for fashion has nothing more destructive to human life than this. The lungs are also injured by being over-worked, strained or made to do more than any reasonable estimate of their powers would allow.

Potash as a Fertilizer.

Potash forms one of the most essential constituents of a fertile soil, and one of the most important of all the fertilizing agents within reach of the agriculturist. In many plants it constitutes more than one-half of their ash, and in most at least one third. In neutralizing acids in the soil, and in the liberation of ammonia, it acts in the same manner as lime, but when it is desired simply to effect these last-mentioned objects the latter should be used, as being cheaper; potash, generally available in the form of ashes, should be applied as a manure, using the word in its strictest sense, to indicate a substance that contributes directly to building up the structure of the plants. But considerable care should be exercised in the use of ashes, and they should never, as is the practice with some in manuring corn in the hill, be mixed with guano or the refuse of the hen roost, inasmuch as the first rain that dissolves them will cause the potash to displace the ammonia in the same manner that lime displaces it from barn-yard manure and similar manures, and as we have just mentioned; and although the potash of the ashes and the phosphoric acid of the guano, or the like, would be left to benefit the plant, the ammonia would be dissipated and lost, and the value of the fertilizer depreciated. Analogous to potash in its action is soda, which, however, with a few exceptions to the rule, enters but slightly into the composition of plants, and may generally be replaced, to a great extent, with potash. Turnips and mangel wurtzel, however, require a comparatively large amount of soda, the ash of the former containing upward of twenty-eight per cent, and the latter a nearly equal amount. This may be most conveniently applied to the soil when required in the form of common salt.—J. A. Whitney, at Farmer's Club.

THE American committee on Bible Revision were entertained at the house of Hon. William E. Dodge, in New York, on a recent evening. Dr. Schaff explained the character and progress of the Revison, and stated that it would probably require about seven years more to complete the work.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL superintendent recently said: "I think if any one could look into my heart he would see a little Sunday school there."

RALEIGH, N. C., FEBRUARY 10, 1875.

The Cross (X) Mark is to remind you that your subscription has expired. Let all renew promptly.

Persons in ordering their paper changed will be careful to state the office from and to which they wish the change made.

At the solicitation of some of our little readers, we propose to give them and those specially interested in them, a column in the Advocate every week to be styled The Children's Column.

Remember that the price of the Christian Advocate is $2.20, postage prepaid at this office. It is the cheapest paper published in the Southern Methodist Church.

We are greatly encouraged at the number of renewals and new subscribers we are daily receiving. A large number of our preachers are earnestly canvassing for the paper. Some of our lay brethren are also at work for it with becoming zeal, and we trust the whole church within our bounds will aid in this good work.

The Baltimore Conference of the M. E. Church, South, will convene its annual session at Mt. Vernon Place Church, Washington City, on the 3rd of March. Bishop Marvin will preside, and Bishop Doggett is also expected to be present.

Rev. W. S. Black, the efficient Presiding Elder of the Wilmington District, writes us that the out-look on his District is decidedly encouraging, —much more so than the past year. There is no district in the Conference better able to take care of its preachers and Presiding Elder than this.

We learn from a private note received from a brother at Wilmington, in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, that both of our churches there are pleased with their new preachers. Our correspondent who is a member of Front Street, speaks especially of Bro. Mann, who is gaining a stronghold upon the affections of that people, and whose congregation has largely increased both upon the ministration of the word and the weekly prayer meeting.

Bishop Doggett has been spending several days in Baltimore, preaching able and eloquent sermons. On the 31st ult, as we learn from the Methodist, he occupied the pulpit of Green and German St. Church, preaching from St. John 5, 25-30, inclusive: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Lord God, and they that hear shall live." Subject—Christ's prerogative as a Saviour and judge of mankind.

Rev. J. F. Craven, in charge of Trinity Circuit, writes us that he has been warmly received by the people of his charge. The people of Trinity College, he says, "are true Methodists —most of them take your paper. I am going to do all I can for the Advocate. I consider it among the best aids to the pastor."

We are indebted to the following brethren for handsome clubs of subscribers to the Advocate: Rev. F. H. Wood, Rev. T. W. Smith, Rev. B. B Culbreth, Rev. A. A. Boshamer, Rev. J. H. Guinn, Rev. L. J. Holden, Rev. G. W Ivy, Rev. W. M. Jordan, Rev. P. F. W. Stancy, Rev. A. D. Betts and Rev. J. T. Bagwell.

Our Missions.

Who can read the last commandment of Jesus before he disappeared from earth, without believing that Missionary work is the paramount distinctive duty of the church? Who can feel that he is saving or pleasing that Saviour, if he is doing nothing for Missions? Oh, brethren, are you not in danger of divine displeasure and punishment, when you so little regard this great matter?

It is cause for humiliation to consider how very limited is the Missionary work of the Southern Methodist Church. We can do better if we will. We must do better without delay. The important thing with us is, to lead the church to understand its duty and its power. Who is exempt from the obligation to help forward the great work? No member of the church. Every one can do something. Nearly every one can give something—though it be but a dime or a cent. Let the brethren encourage every member to give that can do so, be the gift ever so small. Try it, and it will bring blessings to the church as well as to Missions! Let all pray for the grand enterprise. Sing Missionary songs. Talk about Missions. Preach and write about Missions. Let us all awake to the tremendous duty!

The Satanic Paradise

What is it? It is the American Theatre. "Ah! indeed," says one, "Where is the harm of frequenting such a beautiful place? What brilliant lights shine there! What charming music greets the ear. What magnificent scenery is displayed in the back ground!" Oh, yes, these facts are granted without controversy; but does not the Bible teach us that salvation often appears in the celestial light of an angel? His deformity is wreathed with innocent flowers. Does beauty always mean innocence? The serpent is no less deadly because he wears a coat of shining scales. The vulture is dressed in glossy plumage, while he tears asunder the flesh of the helpless lamb. The modern theatre is made as beautiful as an oriental paradise. Its floor is strewn with odorous flowers—its atmosphere fans the flushed cheek of the audience with balmy breath—its roof is hung with rosy clouds—its walls with glittering curtains, while the ear is thrilled with music as enchanting as that of the ancient sirens. But in this theatrical paradise, the old serpent of perdition lurks, whose fascinating yet charms, captivates, and finally destroys. The world fell in a paradise of beauty, and in the midst of the intoxicating perfumes of the theatrical paradise, thousands fall from the purity of sentiment to the lowest walks of sin and vice. The pestilence of the mallarial tropics float through aromatic shrubbery and the most brilliantly hued flowers, but it is no less fatal when breathed by the traveler. "There is a way which seemeth right to man, but the end thereof is death." The world of darkness is populated with the victims of this "harmless amusement" so called.

But it is said, in justification of theatre-going, that in such a place one can learn a great deal of human nature. We admit that this is so.—You can learn a great deal of vicious human nature from the actors themselves. There you can learn how successfully sacred things are ridiculed—how brilliant wit can employ itself in burlesquing religion—how contempt can be generated against the ministry. How human corruption can be decked out in the shining robes of seeming innocence—how attractive the license to live in sinful lust—how pure taste is perverted, and glittering false views of life are produced. If you desire to learn these Satanic arts, go to the theatre. It is a school well adapted to promote proficiency in the higher forms of subtile evils.—But after all that may be said against theatres, exclaims a cold member of the church, "I think I can go once or twice, and even through life, and not be hurt by it." What a delusion—how completely you are under satanic influence. This is just what the devil would have you say and believe. Let us ask you candidly and in the light of divine truth, upon what principles of christian consistency can you justify yourself for wasting your money and time by attending the theatre? —How can you satisfy your conscience and reconcile your conduct with duty in setting the pernicious example of supporting this growing class of playmongers? A class of men and women who do nothing to elevate society, but all in their power to corrupt it. Men whose whole trade is to tickle the world by giggling, capering across the stage, caricaturing the solemn events of life—employing the powers of the soul, given for a higher, nobler purpose, in making people laugh, and general buffoonery. Oh! it is a slur upon the cause of religion, and an index to the deadness of your faith and christian experience to urge such an excuse for visiting the theatre. You spend your (God's) money freely to fill the pockets of bloated, degraded actors, common dancers and vagabond fiddlers, but when it comes to pay honest debts, to support the church or give a penny to the poor orphan shivering in the wintery wind, you beg to be excused. What a specimen of saintly piety!! How your light shines to lead men from God and into the darkness of the second death!—Mothers, fathers—you who regard tenderly the best interests of your children, let us plead with you to keep them from the theatre. It will destroy their morals and exert a deadly influence upon others!

The Richmond Advocate has this to say of Bro. Barrett's letter recently published in this paper:

"Bro. Barrett, of Lincolnton, N. C., writes to Bro. Bobbitt these sensible words, all of which we steadfastly believe.

We covet Barrett. As said of Abou Ben Adhim, "may his tribe increase." We would like to swap for Barrett.—Hear him:"

"The Raleigh Christian Advocate is popular in this region. Your request to get up 'renewals' shall be attended to. We are ice bound at present; you must await the coming of a thaw.—Then we hope renewals will flow into your office as in streams. The preachers and people and schools and Colleges all need the paper. The Church would be better off to spend more money in that direction. Who can estimate the amount of good accomplished by a good religious newspaper?"

We can't spare him. If we begin to swap there is no telling where it would end. Bro. Barrett is but a true specimen of North Carolina Methodist preachers—We have many more just like him, true to the paper and to all the interests of the church.—Ed.

Talking Around the Church.

In the sparsely-settled rural district, where the people have few opportunities of seeing one another, it is not improper for them to give friendly greetings and exchange a few words of kindly inquiry about the wellfare of their families and neighbors; but such words should be but few, and all miscellaneous chit chat should be avoided. Nothing should be said or done at church, before services or at any other time, that does not comport with the great object of going to church—the heartfelt worship of God. All secular topics should be avoided. Never mind the state of the crops, of current topics in politics, or the late sensational rumors about anybody in the neighborhood. Put off the discussion of them for another occasion. They have no more right to take the place of God's worship than the Jewish money-changers had to conduct their mercenary operations in the Temple. Try to lift your minds out of the daily channels and, at least while at church, set your thoughts and affections on better things. Why not go into the church and sing a few good songs, till the preacher arrives? That would put you in frame for worship and have a good effect upon all. It would especially inspire the preacher as he draws near and hears the stirring songs of Zion

Pray for Them.

We call upon all the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, who may read these lines, to offer up earnest prayer to a sin-pardoning God in behalf of Bishop Bowman, Rev. Mr. Ives of New York and the rest of the Northern Methodists who constituted the late vengeful Boston Meeting. Do not try to make evil out of their proceedings. They will do harm enough without your help and despite your effort to prevent it. Pity them and pray for them. Many, probably most of them, possibly all of them, are so blessed by education and surroundings as to really think they do right to hold such meetings and pursue such anti christian policy. Remember the words of Jesus: "Bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you."

Under the prayer of the Redeemer on the Cross "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

On our first page will be found an article from Dr. Closs, and on our editorial page we give an article from Bro. Brooks, both communications growing out of the discussion on "the Curse of Blood." We have on hand another article from Bro. Yates, and another from Dr. Closs on the same subject. The mill is constantly grinding and of course we must adopt the miller's rule. Articles from others have been received, but we cannot admit all, who seem disposed to take part in the discussion, at the same time. Our space will not allow us to do so. Exercise patience brethren: we will give all a hearing as soon as we can.

In the mean time we beg our readers not to grow weary. The subject under discussion is one of great importance, and one upon which our people should be correctly informed.

Not on Trial

Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, the leading counsel for Rev. Henry Ward Beecher in the suit brought against him by Theodore Tilton, in a speech recently said in court: "The Christian religion is not on trial here." After quoting this remark the New York Observer very properly adds:

"That's a fact, and we are specially glad that the counsel has announced it as his opinion at the very outset of the case. Let that be kept in mind. Christians knew it before, and they wish the world to know and believe that their religion does not depend on the guilt or innocence of any man, or any number of men, in any age or country. . . The founder of their religion had twelve disciples, the boldest of whom denied his Lord and then committed suicide in an agony of remorse. If the Christian religion were on trial when its professors are exposed, it would long ago have perished. Mr. Evarts is right. The Christian religion is not in any danger at present."

Rev. Dr. Rosser, of Virginia, reached this city on Saturday. He preached Sabbath morning and evening at Edenton Street Church. His "preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and power" of God. He will preach a series of sermons at this church with the view of awakening a religious interest among the membership and a revival of God's work in the community. His preaching has been greatly blessed, wherever he has labored, in the salvation of sinners. Under his ministry we are praying and expecting a great revival of religion in this community.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate is the adopted organ of the N. C. Conference, and every Methodist in the State ought to subscribe for it and use all available means to give it a still more extended circulation. Terms $2.20 per annum postage prepaid at this office.

Rev. N. M. Jurney, Pastor of Person St. Methodist Church of this city, delivered the Anniversary speech of Bethel Lodge, I. O. G. T. on Monday evening of the first inst.

For the benefit of our readers in the country, the Raleigh Market is correctly quoted weekly.

THE CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

In our last Master E. E. Jurney asked the little readers of the Advocate to give the chapter and verse containing the word "Eternity." The first to respond to this question was little Queen Esther Betts. The following have also responded: Jennie Fitzgerald, Mary Lee and Lizzie Reid Martin, Nannie A. Woodburn, S. Annah Parker, Emma L. Johnson, Nannie E. Haynes, Aura Barrett Chaffin, Maggie McKenzie, Henry Wood Lee, Fannie R. Best, and Mattie C. Durham. All giving the 57th chapter and 15th verse of Isaiah as the place where the word eternity occurs. Some of these letters are so sweet and child-like that we really enjoy reading them. Little Emma L. Johnson writes: "I am a little girl ten years old, daughter of Rev. D. C. Johnson of the N. C. Conference. I like to look out the words given to the children, and hope there will be more in your paper."

We give the following just as they were received at this office:

UNCLE BOBBITT: You will please inform Master E. E. Jurney that I find the word "Eternity" in the 15th verse of the 57th chap. of Isaiah.

I am quite young yet, but can read the Bible, and am glad that Uncle Betts has thus set us little folks to work looking out curious and interesting things in that best of books.

I have heard my Pa speak often of Uncle Betts. He says he knew him in the army as a good and faithful chaplain to our poor soldiers.

Very respectfully,
MAMIE E. HANES.

UNCLE BOBBITT: Please tell the little readers of the Advocate that I find the word "Eternity" in the 57th chap. and 15th verse of Isaiah. I am nine years old to-day, and have been to school only one session.

AURA BARRETT CHAFFIN.

Mamma received the Christian Advocate this evening, and as I am one of the young readers of the Advocate, I tried to find the only verse in the Bible containing the word "Eternity," and found it in the 15th verse of the 57th chapter of Isaiah.

Your little friend,
MAGGIE MCKENZIE.

MR BOBBITT: "Eternity" is in 15th verse of 57th chap, Isaiah. Pa got the Advocate this evening and said as my older sister, Ida, found the other verse, I must find this one. So I ran and got Pa's concordance and found eternity there, and that is the way I found it so quick.

Pa told me to ask the Sunday school children to find a chapter in the Bible that has four verses precisely alike, each containing twenty words.

MARY LILLIE PENNIN,
Yanceyville, N. C., Feb. 3rd, 1875.

Two little girls, Emma Weddington and Nannie E. Guthrie have sent an answer to "A. D. B.'s" question since our last. Little Emma writes: "I think the Advocate the best paper I ever read." The paper has never received a compliment which we appreciate more than this. It is really gratifying to know that the dear children love their church paper. God bless them all, and make the Advocate a means in bringing them to Christ!

THE WORD "ATONEMENT."

Little S. Annah Parker, in answering Master E. E. Jurney's question, says:

"Will you and the little readers of the Advocate tell me where, and how many times, the word 'Atonement' occurs in the New Testament?"

THE WORD "REGENERATION."

Nannie A. Woodburn, a little Sunday school scholar, calls upon the children who read the Advocate to tell where and how often the word "Regeneration" is found in the New Testament.

Sing More

Cultivate singing in the family. Begin when the child is not yet three years old. The songs and hymns your mother sang, bring them all back to memory and teach them to your little ones, mix them altogether, to meet the similar moods, as in after life they come over us so mysteriously sometimes, Many a time and oft, in the very whirl of business, in the sunshine and gayety of Fifth Avenue and amid the splendor of the drives in Central Park, some little thing wakes up the memories of early youth, the old mill, the cool spring, the shady tree by the little school house, and the next instant we almost see the ruddy cheeks, the smiling faces, and the merry eyes of schoolmates, some grayheaded now, most "lie mouldering in the grave." And anon "the song my mother sang" spring unbiden to the lips and soothes and sweetens all these memories.

At other times, amid the crushing mishaps of business, a merry ditty of the olden time pops up its little head, breaks in upon the ugly train of thought, throws the mind into another channel, light breaks in from behind the cloud in the sky and a new courage is given to us. The honest man goes singing to his work, and when the day's labor is done, his tools laid aside, and he is on his way home, where wife and child and tidy table and cheery fireside await him, he cannot help but whistle or sing.

The burglar never sings. Moody silence, not the merry song, weighs down the dishonest tradesman, the perfidious clerk; the unfaithful servant, the perjured partner.—Hall's Journal.

Religious Brevities.

Rev. Levi. Thorne has been called to the Newberne Baptist church.

Rev. M. M. Marshall, rector of the (Episcopal) Church, Raleigh, has been made a Doctor of Divinity by William and Mary College, Virginia.

Bishop Janes recently said that there are as many Methodist in Africa, China, or India now as there were in this country a hundred years ago.

The Missionary Society of the Washington Street M. E. Church Sunday school, Petersburg, Va., collected during the past year $489.75; 239.48 from the male classes, and $190.27 from the female classes.

Rev. Dr. E. H. Myers, D. D., late president of the Wesleyan Female College, at Macon, Ga., and previously editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, has been appointed pastor of the leading Southern Methodist Church in Savannah, Ga.

The Baltimore Methodist says: Bishop Marvin will probably visit the National Capitol previous to the meeting of Conference, and hold a series of religious services with Bro. Wilson some time during the present month.

The Holston Conference celebrates the centenary of Methodism this year within its bounds. The first society organized in the Holston country was in 1774, in Southwestern Virginia. This year is also the jubilee of their history as a Conference, as fifty years ago last November the Holston Conference was organized in the town of Knoxville.

Our Southern exchanges bring us good tidings. Revivals of religion are in progress in various places. Many conversions and accessions to the M. E. Church, South, are reported.

Miss Sarah L. Wilkins, of Trinity M. E. Church, South, in Baltimore, who died recenty in that city, bequeathed all her property at the death of her sister to the Book Concern and the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, excepting $1,000 which she left to a young female friend, and $200 each to five charitable institutions of Baltimore. The estate is valued at $50,000.

Bishop Cummins, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, preached one evening last week in the Franklin Square Presbyterian Church, in Baltimore, of which Rev. Dr. Lefevre is pastor, upon the "true unity of Christ's people," in the course of which he said: "It is the failure to distinguish between the true mystical body of Christ and its outward manifestations in different forms of organization that has led to endless confusion One great law pervades the universe, unity amidst adversity. It is seen in creation, in the human family, in the vegetable kingdom; in the heavens above us, and it prevails especially true in the Church of God. There is but one true spiritual Church. There are many forms of polity. United to Christ all believers are one, though separated into various visible societies.

We have received a copy of the address of Grand Master, John Nichols, Esq., delivered before the Grand Lodge of Masons of North Carolina at its late annual meeting. The address is plain, practical and pointed, and the printing is neatly done by Edwards, Broughton & Co. of this city.

The following item has been furnished us for publication in the Advocate:

William S. Schaub of Stokes county has been married 40 years, has raised 8 children, has never bought a pound of pork or bacon, has had some of each to sell every year; and every year has had hogs to weigh over 200 lbs. Has killed 9 weighing an average of 457 lbs., the heaviest 558 lbs., their aggregate weight being 4116 lbs. This is something not many can say. And his pastor adds that Bro. Schaub takes and reads the Advocate, pays for it in advance, and remembers his preacher.

The Board of Directors of the Masonic Temple have determined to commence the erection of the building at an early day.

TO THE PREACHERS AND LAY MEMBERS OF THE N. C. CONFERENCE—My Dear Brethren: I appeal to you, for you are all interested. I am on the Onslow circuit this year by the appointment of the Bishop,—am out of house and home; and hence I have commenced to build a small one, but though small it will be convenient and comfortable, and not expensive, for we expect to do the most of the work ourselves, but shall need some money to finish off the work. I give some facts in the case which will be a good reason why I appeal to you for help. 1st. I find the most of the brethren on this circuit are poor men, but seem to be pious, and have a disposition to work. 2nd. Their pastor is without a home, and it is a hard matter for him to find a suitable one in a suitable place. 3d. Two of the most wealthy appointments, viz, Richland and Haw Branch, have been detached from the circuit and added to the Kenansville circuit. 4th. We do not expect to build an expensive house, hence our requests will be small, and will be extremely obliged to any one for, even, a small favor, for any amount from 5 dollars to 50 cents.

Now, brethren, send me a small donation, and direct your letters to W. C. Gannon, Newberne, N. C., who is our agent, or to me at Swansboro, N. C., or to my Presiding Elder, Bro. Black, of the Wilmington District.—Brethren, you help me, and when you begin to build, I will help you. "God loveth a cheerful giver."

Angels still Visit this World.

The life of a Methodist itinerant Preacher is not all toil and anxiety. Ever and anon some kind sympathizing angel pays him a visit, and causes him to forget his toils, and the household is lit up with light and joy. Such was the case at the humble Preachers home in the quiet village of Lenoir on Christmas day We were notified on the preciding day, to make no arrangements for dinner, but have the table spread, which was accordingly done. The little ones looked at the table, and then at the cobl cooking stove and seemed to be somewhat bewildered at the prospect for a Christmas dinner, as they were ignorant of the fact that an angel had passed around among the Methodist families, and had whispered to them, let us light up the Parsonage on Christmas day, and gladen the hearts of our minister and his family. About high noon, the baskets and waiters began to come in, and soon the table was loaded with all that the most fastidious epicure could desire. We mention only one dish. The turkey weighed 17lbs, and every thing, indeed, was correspondingly inviting, both in quality and also in preperation. What purported to be only a dinner turned out to be nearly a weeks supply. If my good friend Bro. Lafferty of the Richmond Christian Advocate had been present, he would have seen a dinner so far supassing the one he ate at the Parsonage, that he certainly would have repented wasting space in his valuable paper to notice it.

If the people but knew how much such acts of kindness were appreciated, and what an indelible impression they make, they would certainly become more common on the great anniversary occasions. I have just commenced my 3rd year on the Lenoir circuit for this term, and my 7th in all. This is perhaps one of the hardest circuits in the Conference; 16 regular appointments, 931 members, rides long, and roads rough; but the climate is healthy, the people are kind, and appreciative. The preacher has access to good schools, and then some kind Angel pays a visit, and the preacher is encouraged to renewed effort.

"The Curse of Blood,"—Rev. W. M. Robey Again.

MESSRS. EDITORS: As promised in the "Advocate" of the 20th inst., I now offer a word in reply to Bro. Robey's third article concerning the heathen. I fear that your readers are growing tired of this disscussion, and as I have already written a good deal on the subject, I wish to be brief in this article. For these and other reasons, I will not follow Bro. Robey in discussing the irrelevant matter of which his article is so largely composed. The importance of human agency and the gospel as means of human salvation; the question as to whether God "permits" or "decrees" sin; the inability of mere power in God to save men, etc., are questions not involved in the issue between us.—And the fact that the heathen would be better off with the gospel than without it has no bearing on the question. Nor does it prove anything to the point to show that more heathen would be saved with the gospel than without it. All these things may be conceded without at all affecting my position. The simple question under discussion is this: Is the written or preached gospel indispensably necessary as a condition of the possible salvation of heathen? Bro. Robey affirms and I deny this proposition. If he will admit that the heathen, in the absence of the written or preached gospel, have a possibility or chance of salvation, I will no longer dispute with him. I must say, and I do it with perfect candor, that in passing over what I regard as irrelevant matter. I am not conscious of wishing to avoid any of Bro. Robey's arguments nor unwillingness to treat him with disrespect or unfairness. Apart from the wrong involved in such a course, I see no necessity and feel no temptation to do so. For, I certainly see no difficulty in answering concisively and with entire fairness every argument he has presented in his whole series, including the fourth and last number. And in saying this I intend no reflection on Bro. R. but on his cause. But to the argument. Bro. Robey still insists that no rational adult heathen can be saved without the gospel. But, in answering the objection that his theory is inconsistent with the justice of God, he denies what I once understood him to affirm—that God damns them because of their failure to believe on Christ. He admits that such a course would be "manifestly unjust." He explains that in the articles I have been reviewing, he intended to teach, and that he now holds, that the heathen are all lost because they are "sinners." But I will give his position in his own words. He says: "No unenlightened heathen can be saved. But why is the heathen lost? Not because he has never heard the gospel. If he had heard it he might not have been saved. But he is lost because he is a sinner. For what is he punished? * * * Because he is a sinner." By the term "sinner," of course Bro. R. means a transgressor of the moral law, as given in the decalogue and a summary of which Jesus gives us when He says, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," etc. According to Bro. R., then, the heathen are damned, not for a lack of faith, but because of a violation of, or a failure to comply with, the moral law. I certainly cannot see that his case is at all strengthened by this explanation of his position. Let us see if it is. In the first place, his theory seems to be inconsistent with the plain teaching of the Scriptures. The Bible certainly seems to teach that the immediate cause of the sinner's damnation is not his violat on of the moral law, but his failure to comply with the law of faith. Not because he, from the force of inherited depravity or outward temptat on, does wrong; but because he fails, in the strength of imparted or promised grace, to repent of such wrong. Not because he has inherited the disease of sin that naturally develops itself in outward transgression, but because he willfully refuses to apply, by faith, the remedy for this disease. That is what I understand Jesus to teach when He says, "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation"—the reason or cause of condemnation—damnation—"that light is come into the world and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." Again, He says: "He that believeth not shall be damned." Now, in these formal statements of Jesus as to proximate cause of man's condemnation and ruin, are we not taught too plainly for controversy that it is not his "evil deeds" or violations of the moral law, but his positive unbelief and willful rejection of offered and obtainable light and mercy? Is not this gospel light that Jesus speaks of? And does He not teach that those who receive it would not have been condemned if they had not received and rejected it? And, if the heathen does not receive any of this light, is he condemned for his "evil deeds?" Is there in fact any other real cause or condition of the sinner's final ruin than his unbelief or rejection of offered and obtainable mercy? Are we not taught here that unbelief is the only condition of damnation, in the same sense that faith is the only condition of salvation? But will Bro. R. say that all this is not applicable to the case of the heathen? Is God harder with them than He is with us? If so, is He not a "respecter of persons" in the sense in which Paul, in Rom. 2: 11, says He is not? Will Bro. R., on reflection, say that there is a hell then in hell who did not go there because he rejected offered mercy? If so, how can it be said that "the Lord is good to all, and His tender mercies are over all His works?" Will he say that this refers to temporal blessings? If so, are not these "tender mercies" cruel curses in disguise? Do they not make the heathen's unavoidable hell more intolerable by creating a greater contrast between it and life in this world?

But again. Does not Bro. R admit that the very existence of the heathen is one of the results of the atonement?—that they would never have been born into the world apart from God's purpose and plan to redeem them—except on the basis of the atonement? If he does, (and he must admit it,) is not the death of Christ a position and unmitigated curse to them? Now, it is not sufficient to say that it proves a curse to those who reject Christ. They might have made it a blessing. But, on Bro. Robey's theory, His death was absolutely and necessarily (with them) a fearful curse—bringing them into existence, and consequently, consigning them to hell, without any chance or possibility of salvation. Will Bro. R. say that God could not help it?—that He is no way "responsible" for this result of the atonement? Now, if, as Bro. R. says God could not send the gospel to the heathen without human agency, and He saw that this human agency would not be available, could He not have prevented this result in some other way? Could He not have prevented Christ's dying for them? Was the under any dire necessity of bringing the great bulk of our race into existence when it was out of His power to give them any chance of salvation? Is He still under that necessity in all heathen lands? And if He is under such necessity, is He forced to write His "law in their hearts," and thus necessitate their becoming guilty and punishable by its violation? Could He not have withheld that law and saved them as He does infants and idiots? But, if He saw best to write this law in their hearts, could He have written the gospel too—a knowledge of His goodness as well as His holiness, His mercy as well as His justice? And, if He could do it, and He did the best He could, as Bro. R. teaches, did He not write the gospel "in their hearts?" And—if He did, and they are still lost, are they not lost because they sin against gospel light and reject gospel mercy?

But the most serious objection to Bro. Robey's theory is the one urged in my first article: That it is inconsistent with God's justice. On his theory that the heathen have no gospel—no revelation of God's mercy and grace—it is just as cruel and hard to damn them for their sins as it is to damn them for not believing on Christ. For, according to the teaching of the Bible and that of Bro. Robey himself, the heathen can no more help committing sin than they can help not believing or Christ. Let us hear from Bro. R. on this point. In his first article he says, "neither can it be maintained that some adult heathens live up to the light they have and are therefore saved." I suppose he means, of course, that it is impossible for them, with the light they have, to keep the moral law as to be saved by its "deeds"—their morality or virtue. That this is Bro. Robey's opinion seems to be put beyond question in his third article. He says, "no man can be saved unless he repents. But no man can repent without the motives presented in the gospel. No man can have these motives without a knowledge of the gospel. Therefore no unenlightened heathen can be saved." Now, if "no man can repent without the motives presented in the gospel," of course no man can keep from sinning without those "motives." Certainly, if those motives are necessary to enable a man to "repent"—stop sinning—keep from sinning in the future—they were necessary to enable him to keep from sinning in the past. So, then we may say: No man can avoid sinning without the motives presented in the gospel. No man can have these motives without a knowledge of the gospel. Therefore no unenlightened heathen can avoid sinning. Now, if the heathen can not avoid sinning, is it just in God to damn them for being "sinners?" Is such a course in harmony with His revealed character of justice and mercy? Bro. Robey knows it is not. I would be damning them for not performing (to them) an impossibility—for not improving a talent they never possessed—the power to avoid sin. But as this is a very important point, and as I am "seeking for truth" and not "striving for victory," let us look into the matter a little further. Let us see if the Bible does not prove more directly that the heathen can not avoid sin. Sin exists in two forms or under two conditions. It may possess a position or a negative character. It may consist in doing what is forbidden, or in a failure to do what is rejoined. John says, "sin is the transgression of the law," and that "all unrighteousness is sin." He probably means that all unholiness—impurity—fail—me to comply with the requirements of the moral law—failure to love God supremely etc.—is as really sinful as is a positive transgression of that law—the taking of God's name in vain or hating God, for instance. Now, Paul says, "the carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." The apostle evidently teaches that the natural heart hates God—that it is not, and can not be "subject to the law" of love to Him—till changed by grace. Now, as the heathen are born into the world with this "carnal mind" or depraved heart, and as they have not, (on Bro. Robey's theory,) the "motives," knowledge and grace of the gospel, in any measure, how can they help hating God? How can they love Him? If they are born with the disease of sin in their moral "systems," and the gospel is the only "medicine" that will keep it from "breaking out into actual transgressions, how can they avoid sin in the absence of the gospel? But, it may be said that God damns the heathen for their idolatry, and that they can keep from that sin. Is not idolatry the outgrowth of "the carnal mind" or depraved heart of the heathen? If it is, how can they avoid it without the 'motives' and restraining grace of the gospel? If 'the motives of the gospel' are necessary to enable the heathen to 'repent' of idolatry, are they not necessary to restrain them from the original act of idolatry? But how are the heathen saved from heart sins—heart idolatry, for instance? Is not that as bad as the outward act of idolatry? Is any sin pardoned except on condition of repentance and faith? If a heathen should refrain from all outward immoralities, could he be saved? Fortunately Bro. R. has, in his fourth article, answered this question for me. He says 'the best sinner in a heathen land must be lost because to him the remedy is inaccessible. They are not saved because they are virtuous, or moral or sincere; but because they trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. In him the worst sinners have hope. Out of him the best has none.' I am free to confess that I hardly have language to express my utter abhorrence of such a theory. It is truly a 'horrible' one. Just think of it. 'The best sinner must be lost.' He has no hope or chance of salvation. Let him do his very best—be as 'sincere,' 'virtuous' and 'moral' as it is possible for him to be, and yet he 'must be lost,' There is no 'hope' for him on any possible condition. If he yield to the force of inherited depravity and outward temptation and become an actual sinner, God will damn him for that. If he live as 'virtuous' and 'moral' a life as he can, God will damn him because he is not 'in Christ.' If, in the absence of the 'remedy' of his discussed moral nature, which 'is inaccessible' to him, he should willingly feel pride, hatred or revenge, he 'must be lost'—eternally damned for it. Do what he may, his case is absolutely and eternally a hopeless one. But to cut the matter short: The heathen can or they can not avoid sin and be kept from becoming 'sinners.' If they can, then they may be saved by the deeds of the law, without the gospel. If they can not do so, then it is manifestly unjust in God to damn them for their sins, as we have seen, Bro. R. says they can not be saved in any way—that they all 'must be lost'—that their 'sincerity, virtue and morality' can not save them. He is sorely hemmed in by his own premises, and the latter half of his discussion proves the former half to be unsound.

But I may be asked: How do you explain the force of the passage in Scripture which Bro. R. so often and with so much confidence? I refer to the passage in Ezekiel: "When I say unto the wicked man thou shalt surely die," etc. God does not speak to warn the wicked man, who, the wicked man shall die in his sins; for his future will require no warning. He speaks to warn men as free moral agents, that those so warned may escape the doom of the wicked by turning from their sins. He warns them, because objectively guilty of sin, and he not, for the same reason, take the lives of the wicked in battle. I will agree to stand by this theory, by any and every passage in Scripture which Bro. R. quotes so often and with so much confidence? I refer to the passage in Ezekiel: "When I say unto the wicked man thou shalt surely die," etc. God does not speak to warn the wicked man, who, the wicked man shall die in his sins; for his future will require no warning. Sowing and Reaping.

[Adeline Proctor has written beautiful lines, but nothing more touchingly true than the following. What a lesson and a comfort they convey to every Christian!]

"Sow with a generous hand;
Pause not for toil or rain;
Weary not through the heat of Summer,
Weary not through the cold Spring rain,
But wait till the Autumn comes
For the sheaves of golden grain.

"Scatter the seed, and fear not,
A table will be spread;
What matter if you are lonely
To eat your hard earned bread?
Soon while the earth is broken,
For the hungry must be fed.

"Sow while the seeds are lying
In the warm earth's bosom dewy,
And your warm tears fall upon it;
They will stir in their quiet sleep,
And the green blades rise the quicker,
Penitence for the tears you weep.

"Thick sow, for the hours are fleeting,
And the seed must fall to-day;
And care not what hand shall reap it,
Or if you have passed away
Before the waving corn hides
Small pebbles the sunny clay.

"Sow and look onward, upward,
Where the starry light appears—
Wise, in spite of the cowards doubting,
Or your own heart's troubling fears,
You shall reap in joy the harvest
You have sown to-day in tears.

Six Little Sisters Playing House.

"Oh, mamma," cried Carrie, "may we play house outside of the door, with the great arm-chair and the Mexican blanket?"

"Yes, dear," answered mamma, kindly.

Such a lot of little ones as she had! There were Carrie, Fanny, Maggie, Daisy and Dolly, who were twins, and little Lulu - half a dozen chatterboxes as sweet as sweet could be.

"Mamma says we may!" cried Carrie, flying out of the door; and the first thing the six little sisters did was to jump up and down with delight, all in a row.

Then Carrie and Fanny ran to the garden, and coaxed Rob, the old Scotch gardener, to give them a great basketful of green vines and flowers. They began to work their house at once; and oh, how busy they were!

They borrowed a little picture which Ellen, the cook, kept on the kitchen dresser, and it looked perfectly lovely hung up with the green vines all around it.

Then Carrie and Fanny climbed into the arm-chair, and ornamented an arch that was in front of the house, while Maggie handed them the vines as fast as her little fat hands could take them out of the baskets. The arch soon began to look so charming, that a pair of robin red-breasts made them a visit, and told them in sweet bird talk how pretty it was.

"Here we come!" said little twin Daisy, "with such a big rosy-posy bush."

"And it's so jolful heavy!" chimed in little twin Dolly; while Lulu, the smallest of all, brought her picture book, and entertained the little sisters with lov

"A was an ape
Who stole some white tape,
And tied up his toes
In four beautiful bows."

Just before sunset the arm chair and Mexiem blanket were carried away, and the delightful housekeeping came to an end.

Good night, little sisters.

A Tale of two Cats.

Once upon a time there lived two cats in a house in Stuttgart, a town which, as you know, or ought to know, is in Germany. You will see by the engraving that the Germans sometimes have their kitchens at the tops of their houses: which is a sort of upside down, topsy-turvy fashion, to our American eyes.

One of the cats, whose name was Tab, lived in the kitchen, and was obliged to catch rats and mice, and get her living how, and when, and where she could. She was shoved and hustled here and there, and poked and slapped and scat-ted at all day long; while the other, whose name was Dido, was petted, and loved and kept in the comfortable dining-room. She did not care a button or a fig for mice: for she had crabs and chicken and cream every day for her dinner, and I laid most of the time dosing, with one eye and both ears open, on a beautiful red cotton-velvet cushion by the window.

Even Minna and Gretchen, the two little girls, would chase poor Tab, if she came down stairs to say "wie geht's," which is German for "how are you?" and the only friend the poor thing had was the tea-kettle, which hung over the fire and kept hissing out its indignation at the way Tab was treated, until it grew quite black in the face.

One morning Tab was sitting on a big chair by the fire, warming her paws. She had the chilblains dreadfully in her feet, and rheumatism in her knees: for she had been locked out in the snow the night before, because she slipped down stairs into the yard to get some crabs' legs and fish bones —the remains of Dido's dinner.

"Oh!" cried Tab, with a melancholy sigh: "oh, I am so hungry! I have burnt my nose looking into that great pot on the hearth, hoping to find some meat, but there was nothing in it but apple dumplings. I do wonder how anybody can eat them! And there's that coffee by the fire! why, the very smell of it makes me sneeze. And the way Minna and Gretchen can eat quince jam and seed cake, when they come up here, is ridiculous! Oh, dear me! If a bird would only fly in at the window, or a mouse creep out of a hole——"

"Li-s-s-s-t li-s-s-s-t-t!" said the tea kettle so eagerly, that its lid went flap flap flapping up and down.

Tab bent her ears forward, and listened intently. The next instant she heard a tiny, tiny voice saying, "Squeakly-peepsy weeksy! I smell cheese!"

Like a flash of lightning the cat was out of the chair, and the next moment she had caught the little mouse who had made this innocent observation about the cheese. One nip, and the poor little thing fell dead, heels over head! The next instant it was gobbled up!

If it must be killed, I am glad, for one, that Tab did not torture it first, as cats sometimes will; the reason was, that she was too hungry.

Just about the same time Minna was walking around down stairs, with Dido's kitten held tight in her arms, and little Gretchen was saying: Mammachen, please to give me a drink of milk."

Then her "mammachen," which is the fond, sweet German word for mother, told Brenda, the maid, to take from the shelf a great bowl of rich milk; and you may be sure that Dido marched up immediately and demanded her share, and got it too, as well as Minna and the kitten

Dear me! why could not poor Tab have some. It is really too distressing to think about; but I advise you to write a letter to that good Mr Bergh, whose great heart is so full of compassion for dumb animals, and beg him to make a pow-wow about people who starve and ill-treat poor cats. Why not?

Farm, Garden & Household.

Poultry in Small Yards.

I live in a small town and have fenced off as a poultry yard a little corner of my vegetable garden, making a space of about sixteen by five feet, and have it inclosed by a slight fence of plastering lath, in which I have also a small sliding gate, to put in fresh water to the chickens. At one end are, of course, a few boards put up for a roof, and under it a couple of poles to roost on. A box on the ground projecting outside, with a lid to lift up, but having the opening within the yard, constitutes the laying apartment, with three divisions, in each of which is a porcelain nest egg. The arrangement cost, including labor, about $2.75.

In this simple poultry establishment I have four Leghorn hens, which on some days lay me four eggs, on some days three, and for the past four months have averaged eighteen eggs per week. When I first put them in, one wing was slightly shortened and after one or two attempts at first there has been no effort since to fly out, and they seem entirely happy and contented in their small domain.

I thought it might be useful to some of your readers, similarly situated in small towns or city lots, to know how easy it is to have a supply of fresh eggs without much trouble or expense. When the yard is mown the grass is thrown in to them. I supply them also with the egg-shells, broken bone, gravel, scraps of meat, the refuse of the kitchen, fresh water two or three times a day, and consider they pay me well for all trouble. Corn is dispensed to them occasionally, but the principal food is scraps They require also occasionally green food, for which the refuse of the garden also answers well, such as superfluous beets, imperfect cabbage-heads, pea hulm, grass and weeds. Some of the large green worms which infest tomatoes are thrown in to them and devoured with the greatest zest. It will thus be observed that my poultry establishment utilizes many things which would otherwise be a nuisance, and by gathering up the fragments which remain, so that nothing is lost, I reap my reward in plenty of nice fresh eggs.—Levi Hinkson, in Practical Farmer and Journal of the Farm.

How to Clean Mabble.—Marble of my kind, alabaster, any hard stone or glass may be repolished by rubbing it with a linen cloth dressed with oxide of tin (sold under she name of putty powder.) For this purpose a couple or more folds of linen should be fastened tight over a piece of wood, flat or otherwise, according to the form of the stone. To repolish a mantelpiece, it should first be perfectly cleaned. This is best done by making a paste of lime, soda and water, wetting well the marble, and applying the paste. Then let it remain for a day or so, keeping it moist during the interval. When this paste has been removed the polishing may begin. Chips in the marble should be rubbed out first with emery and water At every stage of polishing the linen and putty powder must be kept constantly wet. Glass, such as jewelers' show counter cases, which become scratched, may be polished in the same way.

Poisoned to Death.

A healthy liver secretes each day about two and a half pounds of bile, which contains a great amount of waste material taken from the blood. When the liver becomes torpid or congested, it fails to eliminate this vast amount of noxious substance, which, therefore, remains to poison the blood and be conveyed to every part of the system. What must be the condition of the blood when it is receiving and retaining each day two and a half pounds of poison? Nature tries to warn us of this poison through other channels—skin or urine—the kidneys, lungs, skin etc.; but these organs become overtaxed in performing this labor, in addition to their natural functions, and cannot long withstand the pressure, but become variously diseased.

The brain, which is the great electrical centre of all vitality, is unduly stimulated by the unhealthy blood which passes to it from the heart, and it fails to perform its office health fully. Hence, the symptoms of bile poisoning, which are dullness, headache, incapacity to keep the mind on any subject impairment of memory, dizzy, sleepy, or nervous feelings, gloomy forebodings and irritability of temper. The blood itself being diseased, as it forces its way over upon the surface of the skin, is an irritating and poisonous fluid It produces blotches, eruptions, pimples, blotches and other eruptions sores, boils, carbuncles and scrofulous tumors. The stomach, bowels, and other organs spoken of, cannot escape becoming affected, sooner or later, and costiveness, piles, dropsy, dyspepsia, diarrhœa, female weakness, and many other forms of chronic disease, are among the necessary results. As a remedy for all these manifestations of disease, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with small daily doses of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets are positively unequalled. By them the liver and stomach are changed to an active and healthy state, the appetite regulated and restored, the blood and secretions thoroughly purified and enriched, and the whole system renovated and built up anew. Sold by all first-class druggists and dealers in medicine.

A Triumph Over Humbug.

It is not difficult to show the timid and healthless are powerfully so. Aware of this fact, the venders of pseudo bitters, "entirely free from alcohol," have raised a false cry against trade preparations containing spirits, and no doubt have frightened a few sick folks into purchasing the fermented rubbish which they sell, and which is infinitely more injurious than the vilest drams drunk at tavern bars. But already a tremendous reaction has set in against these abominable nostrums, which, being devoid of the alcoholic basis which alone prevents liquid botanic preparations from turning sour, decompose almost as soon as made Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has lived and will live down multitudes of such impostors. A regular recurrence of the demand for the great alterative invigorant from those who have always been its patrons, shows that they have not swerved in their allegiance to America's most popular remedy; and a constant influx of new orders demonstrates how little impression, after all, the blatant denunciations of the mock bitters men have made upon the general public. So long as Hostetter's Bitters continue to cure and prevent intermittent and remittent fever, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney disease, and the numerous other ailments to which they are adapted, they will continue to dominate the factious opposition of humbugs, and trail will be just as long as they are manufactured and sold. Be it known unto all bogus nostrum venders, of every degree of audacity, and in every part they can never hope to puff themselves into public favor at the expense of Hostetter's Bitters the reputation of which I founded, as it were, upon a rock.

DR. C. M'LANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS,

Diseases of Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes present. The patient complains of a weakness and debility; he is easily startled, feels as if he had cold or burning, and sensation of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is fearful of exercise would be benefited by it, yet he can scarcely summon up resolution enough to try it. In fact, he dreads every remedy. Several of these symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the liver to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

Dr. C. M'Lane's Liver Pills, in cases of Ague and Fever, when taken with Quinine, are positive one of the most happy results. No bad or cathartic can be used, in preference to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a fair trial.

"THE CURSE OF BLOOD."

FINAL PROCESS ITSELF (krithesontai) in the case of those who HAVE WRITTEN LAW. This will better appear by paraphrasing the Apostle's argument.—Let it be understood, however, that the Apostle is simply giving the legal process by which justice and judgment will take place, and not teaching that one class of sinners will be more leniently dealt with than another.—Let us see: (verse 10.) "But glory, honor, and peace, to every man that worketh good; to the Jew first and also to the Greek, or heathen: (verse 11) for "God does not respect persons" only upon principles of equity; and I will therefore follow (verse 12) that reasoning, and no more, "as have sinned without the written law, shall also be judged, and punished proportionately, in accordance with a law which is both unwritten," and different in its trial process, from that written law, by which these persons sinning in the written law, are to be krithesontai, krinai, separated, tried, "judged," and punished. Now, it will be seen that the difference in the meaning of the two words, must, in their connection, be sought for in the trial, as well as in the results of the trial. Indeed, it seems that if this were not true, the statement in the 12th verse could scarcely have any meaning at all, unless it were the veriest truism. For if those who sin without the written law, and those who sin with it in their hands, are to receive justice, then clearly, those who sin without that written law are to be judged without it, and those who sin in the law are to be judged by it; "in hell" in both cases, of course, for God's goodness and justice are pledged for that; but the punishment, or apoleitai "perishing" will take place or not, as the results of the trial, in both cases. So the slight difference in the words fails to strengthen our author's case.

Dr. A. Clarke is acknowledged to be one of the first scholars, as well as one of the clearest critics, produced by this or any former age. He says: "What the Apostle says in 2nd chapter of Rom. concerning the Gentiles being by nature the things contained in the law, if properly considered, could not be separate cases from former and future judgments concerning the dispensations. We are not to suppose that God is not to be found where His written word does not appear; nor that the salvation of the nations yet unpossessed with the light of the gospel is impossible. God has ever combined Himself to any one particular WAY of communicating His salvation; no more than he has confined His saving grace to one particular set of means. He will in an inscrutable manner, by the power of the Holy Spirit, bring the word of faith to that state where the word is nigh; and that same spirit can speak a correct rule to all. It is through this influence alone that the Gentiles [to] the things contained in His own word, and it is not to be wondered at that the work is the same, both in the law and in the heart, when it has proceeded from the same Spirit."

So here again is that "other way," one of the rays of God's countenance reflected upon the heathen world from the prism of the Atonement, or, more scripturally, one of those streams that make glad the city of God. So be it. Dr. Clarke's heart is with you, and my intellect so far as far as it can grasp the subject.

But our author prepared himself for his conclusion on his exegesis of the text, by begging it. Let us see: if the assumption he makes before he enters upon the exegesis be true, then of course his exegesis is also true, and we should write no more, for that assumption settles the very point in controversy, so far as the text is concerned. Our author says: "Now the apostle goes on to show us that these same [o]ften who are a law unto themselves, have violated that law in every one without exception." It will be seen that he emphasizes the last part of the sentence, upon the truth of which hangs everything in this controversy. Of course, if they have all violated it without exception, then they have already been found guilty, and their being "judged," is of course, the same thing as perishing. But the Apostle does not say they have violated the law unto death, (or continued and died in its violation.) That may have all violated it unto death is the very thing to be proved. Our author's reasoning, in syllogistic form, is thus: all who are a law unto themselves, and violate that law unto death, shall perish. The heathen are a law unto themselves, and have all, "without exception," violated it unto death. Therefore the heathen will all perish. The major premiss is true; the minor premiss we think is false, and the very thing to be proved. It is therefore clearly the petitio principii. We do not understand the Apostle as saying that the heathen have all violated unto death, "without exception," the law which it has pleased God in some way, in His mercy, to give them; for if he had said this, it would prove too much for our author's cause.—Those having the written law are charged by the Apostle, in verse 23d, with its violation, not unto death, and all "without exception," of course; for then they would all perish as well as the heathen. But as all law, both to the heathen and Jew, had reference to, and was the outcome of, Christ's Atonement, all were "concluded in sin, that God might have mercy upon all," and that each individual might be tried or "judged" for his life, the one by the gospel if he had it, the other by the law "written upon his heart," if he had not the gospel. And how plain it is, that all reasoning upon this subject must look in the direction, not of a mere assumption that "all the heathen without exception" have violated unto death the law given them, which it is not possible to prove; but whether God has given them law and light sufficient to save, or leave them without excuse if they are lost. This is the question—the great question—involving the awful dilemma. And herein is involved the truth that is to 'justify the ways of God to men," or throw back the heart of the moral world upon the jagged, horrible logic of Hobbes, Augustine and Calvin. And we are determined to sift for the truth, and to the best of our ability, every argument that looks in the direction of exalting the "ways past finding out" of the Almighty at the expense of His justice. And, alas, how true it is, that when men arguing upon premises that lead to such a horrible conclusion, generally mix in to strengthen their case, such declarations as these: "Who art thou that repliest against God," "His ways are past finding out"—(Robey)—"His justice is beyond our conception," and such like! We can almost always foretell by these introductions: when those men are approaching, unintentionally, of course, the awful precipice of charging God with cruelty. Their heart draws back from such a "conclusion logically drawn" by the intellect!

But, astly, our author makes a great deal of Ezekiel's illustration of the duty of those who are sent to warn sinners. The reader will see that it applies only remotely to the case of the church and the heathen: for clearly, the warning the prophet was instructed to give was to those ("The house of Israel,") who already knew the law and their duty. But in the case of the heathen, it is necessary first to teach them the gospel, and then warn them against its rejection. We would simply suggest to our opponents, that there is a little difference between teaching and warning. If the preacher fails to do his duty in warning the sinner, even in a Christian land, (parallel to the prophet's case,) when he sees him going on in sin against what he already knows of he God's law, then of course the sinner is lost at last, "but his blood will be required at the preacher's hand," not likely in the loss of his son, but in being deprived to some extent of the rich reward and heavenly development of his own heart, that comes of active love and sacrifice in the discharge of duty. The church, in not going her full duty in sending the gospel to the heathen, doubtless will, and does, suffer in the leanness of her own spiritual enjoyment. The outgoing of her heart to the heathen and all other objects of charity, enriches and blesses her internally: for "it is more blessed to give than to receive." And so it will be seen that our author's Gibraltar quotation from Ezekiel is a mere fig-wood: as it cannot mean that the church will all go to perdition because she leaves all the heathen to go there: For, if this be true we all, or most of us preachers, college-presidents, professors, bishops, presiding elders, et id omne genus, had better clear the deck, weigh anchor, and set sail at once for some heathen port,

"And not stand to on the order of our going, but go at once."

And, moreover, if our author's "curse of blood" is upon the church for not sending the gospel to the heathen, and the church is all lost for this neglect; and then the heathen are all lost because they have not the gospel which the church failed to send; it follows that both parties, and all hands, and the whole business go down together! Well, of all the arguments for universal damnation, this is the newest, most unique and elegant!

No! thank God, He has not so shut the heathen up to inevitable perdition. We may fail, to some extent, of our duty to them: which is to be repented of, or be punished in our own poverty of spiritual enjoyment. But He, who placed the heathen where they are, for wise purposes, will not leave their salvation contingent upon a handful of people doing, or not doing, their duty. And it is unwise to make such an argument to the church, 1st. Because she does not need it—the plea for Missions already before her is far superior, and 2nd. Because it is an axiomatic truth, that motives and incentives to action, lose force and become inoperative in proportion as they are unreasonable and out of harmony with God's character.

Culture

Is the education and development of the faculties. The term is almost exclusively applied to the discipline and polish of the intellect, and of the habits of personal deportment in contact with society. There is no form or manifestation of material beauty so delightful and admirable as the grace, complaisance, gentleness, and dignity, which arise from high social culture, and the brilliance which results from thorough cultivation of the intellect. Diamonds and gold are gross earth compared with those finer elements of beauty. The highest culture in the popular acceptation of that term, is not eminently desirable, but if sought for as a proper object, it forms an element of benevolence and becomes the desire and ability to give pleasure to others. But there is something better still than this, and which is more highly esteemed and respected among men, and that is a genuine spirit of self-sacrifice. The finest form of social culture is that which simulates most successfully this spirit. Moral beauty is superior to intellectual. The mother surrendering her life to her children—taking no thought of self; the husband and father [illegible] cheerly his hard task [illegible] that wife and little ones may be [illegible] from want or hardship; the kind [illegible] neighbor; the [illegible] den bearer for others [illegible] love—the novelist, [illegible] the poet, the historian, each seek to [illegible] lighten up this pages by depicting [illegible] this form of moral beauty and attributing it to their heroes and heroines. It is universally recognized as the g[illegible]m of purest ray [illegible] human character. N[illegible]ow mark the fact This form of beau[illegible]ty is absolutely unattainable unless [illegible] is derived from the spirit of the di[illegible]vine founder of Christianity. No amo[illegible]nt of intellectual, artistic, or social cul[illegible]ture can give it, or leave them without excuse if they will bear inspection. [illegible]tion of it that from a heart filled w[illegible]th the spirit of Jesus Christ.—Inter[illegible]or.

Always Abounding.

The Apostle Paul, reaching the climax of his argument in the fifteenth chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians, urges upon Christians that they should be "always abounding in the work of the Lord." The exhortation is applicable now.

"Always abounding"—it involves much. There is to be no cessation of Christian work. There must be no folding of the hands. There must be no indolent movement. Always! Every year and every day, while life lasts, the Christian must in some form or other be at his Master's business. The individual character of the work will, of course, vary. But in some way or other a true Christian will be always abounding.

Then the emphasis comes on another word—abounding. The Christian works not merely from a sense of duty. He has entered upon a service of love. He works, therefore, not as a slave under the eye of a task master. His is the service of a loving child. He will do all he can. He will work with zest. And so he will abound. It will be a full and hearty service he will render.

To this "always abounding" service the Christian is called by the very fact that he is a child of God. Nothing less than this can be expected of him. Is he his own? Is it not his heavenly Father who has a claim upon all that he can render? Shall the child of God dole out his service in stinted measure? Can he do it?

Gratitude calls to it. The Christian is saved with an abundant salvation. Full and free and priceless in the gift of life in Jesus Christ. Shall not he, then, who has received all, give the utmost he can in return?

Desire for growth calls to it. The arm grows most in muscular power which is exercised the most. The mind grows most in intellectual force which is used the most. Similarly, the Christian who is "always abounding in the work of the Lord," will grow most rapidly in every Christian grace.

The claims of fallen humanity call for it. So much to do—a world fast rushing to destruction. So few to work—only here and there those who love the Lord Jesus. What need, then, that all such should always abound in every good word and work.

The sure promise calls to it. It is not labor thrown away. It is not even labor of doubtful success. It is work that leads to certain and everlasting results. There is no work done for God that falls fruitless to the ground. The promise is sure. "Be ye always abounding in the work of the Lord, forsmuch as ye [illegible] and labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Early Wesleyan Preachers.

We find the following in the Irish Evangelist in reference to the early Wesleyan ministers:—"For some years no stated provision whatever was made for the preacher. At a later period the circuits were directed to pay, if they could, £3 quarterly for his clothes and books. Mather was the first who received an allowance for his wife—it amounted to four shillings a week. An additional allowance of twenty shillings a quarter was made for each child. When the preacher was at home, eighteen pence a day was allowed for his board; abroad, he lived among the people. It was no wonder that they should sometimes be brought to the last shilling. In such a predicament it is related that Samuel Bradburn once wrote to Mr. Wesley an account of his sufferings, and that Mr. Wesley sent the following laconic reply, enclosing five pound notes:

"'Dear Sammy—Trust in the Lord to do good: so shall thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. Yours affectionately,

"'JOHN WESLEY.'

"Bradburn replied:

"'Reverend and Dear Sir—I have often been struck with the beauty of the passage of Scripture quoted in your letter; but I must confess that I never saw such useful expository notes upon it before. I am, reverend and dear sir, your obedient and grateful servant,

"'S. BRADBURN.'

"In 1787, Jonathan Crowther and Duncan M'Allum were appointed to Inverness. Their journey to it was adventurous and dangerous; their circuit was large and their allowance next to nothing, for Crowther received only fifty shillings for the whole year's labor. He wrote to Wesley:

"'No man is fit for Inverness Circuit unless his flesh be brass, his bones iron, and his heart harder than a stoic's. If I were doing good I should be content, (if I had them) to sacrifice seven lives every year; but to live in misery and to die in banishment for next to nothing, is afflicting indeed.'

"When Thomas Taylor was in Glasgow he frequently desired his landlady not to provide anything for dinner, and a little before noon dressed himself, and walked out till after dinner, and then went home to his hungry room with a cruel appetite, and confesses that he never kept so many fast days either before or since.

"John Jane died in 1759, and Wesley thus notices his death in his journal:—'All of his clothes, linin and woolen stockings, hat and wig, are not thought sufficient to answer his funeral expenses, which amount to £1 17s. 6d. All the money he had was 1s 4d.—enough for an unmarried preacher of the Gospel to leave."

Fiction may be more instructive than real history; but the vast rout of romances and novels as they are, do incalculable mischief. I wish we could collect all together, and make one vast fire of them. I should exult to see the smoke of them ascend, like that of Sodom and Gomorrah: the judgment would be just.—John Foster.

Who Planned It?

Since his Belfast "Confession," Prof. Tyndall has hurried back from the religions of speculation into the proper field of science, and the notion that matter has within itself the "potency," to create every form of life, seems to be abandoned. The following is a passage from one of his lectures on Light last year:

"In building a crystal Nature makes her first real effort as an architect.—Here we have the first groping of the so-called vital forces; but the most wonderful manifestations of this force, though depending on processes of higher complexity, are, I hold, of the same quality as those concerned in the growth of a crystal. Will the poet or the imaginative man shrink from these notions as cold and mechanical? Why should he? For what have we done but pushed the external mystery a little further back? We reduce life to the operation of molecular forces; but how came the molecules to be thus endowed? Who or what gave to these forces their particular tendencies and directions? Let us contemplate that cycle of operations in which the seed produces the plant, the plant the flower, and the flower the seed again, thus returning with the unerring fidelity of a planet in its orbit to the point from which it started. All these processes are undoubtedly due to the action of molecular forces. But who or what planned their manner of action? Who or what endowed them with the power of talking up at a given time a determinative position, to be followed by another and another through the course of ages? Yonder butterfly has a spot of orange on its wing; if we look into a book written a hundred years ago, where that butterfly is figured, we find the self-same spot upon the wing. Now, the spot depends purely on a manner in which the light falling on and entering the wing is discharged from it, and this again depends upon the molecular structure of the wing. For a century, then, molecules have gone through successive cycles; butterflies have been begotten, have grown, and died, and still we find the architecture the same. Is not this amazing? And what is the explanation? We have a thousand proximate reasons, but at bottom we have no explanation. Still, we stand firm within our range. There is nothing in the architecture of that wing which may not find its Newton to show that the laws and principles brought into play in its construction are qualitatively the same as those brought into play in the construction of the solar system. There is no essential distinction between [illegible] and inorganic; the forces present in the one, when duly compounded, can and do produce the phenomena of the other.—Thus far do I proceed with absolute confidence; and I am ready to take a step farther. The brain of man itself is surely an assemblage of molecules, arranged according to physical laws; but if you ask me to deduce from this assemblage the least of the phenomena of sensation or thought, I lay my forehead in the dust and acknowledge human helplessness. Here Speculation folds her wings, for beyond this point there is no medium to sustain her flight."

The Marks of a Minister.

"On one occasion, when the Doctor was resident in Philadelphia, he went for a few days of rest to a trout stream he had heard of in the interior of the state. Arriving, an entire stranger, at a house kept by a man who had been accustomed to entertain those who came there to fish, he was coldly received. The man told him frankly that he had attended a protracted meeting during the winter, that he hoped the Lord had forgiven his sins, and that he had joined the Methodist Church, and meant to give up going with the kind of men who came up there to fish. The Doctor's humor overcame his scruples so far as to gain admittance for the night, and the next morning succeeded still further, prevailing upon the man to go out with him and show him the best places of the stream. They spent most of the day together, and, on returning to the house in the afternoon, the man slapped him on the shoulder saying:

"'Doc, I like you.'

"'Why do you like me, my friend?'

"'Well, Doc., I'll tell you. We've been out almost all day, we haven't caught much, you fell in and got wet, and I haven't heard you swear once.'

"After supper, as the Doctor was smoking his pipe in front of the house, his host came out, and with some hesitancy, said: 'Doc., since I joined the church I've had prayers every night; we are going to have them now, and maybe you wouldn't object to come in.' 'Certainly not, my friend;' and he went in to listen to the reading of a passage in a broken way, and to join heartily in a good old Methodist hymn. During the singing the man watched him closely, and at the end said anxiously: 'Maybe you wouldn't mind leading us in prayer.' The Doctor knelt and offered one of those full and hearty, yet simple, supplications, which are so well remembered by all who know him. He was hardly seated in front of the house again before the man re-appeared, saying: 'Doc., I kinder suspicion you.'

"'What do you suspect me of? Nothing bad, I hope!'

"'No, nothing bad, and maybe I'm wrong, but I kind o'think you are a minister.'

"'What makes you think I'm a minister?'

"'Well, I'll tell you: I haven't hearn you swear since you came; then the way you joined us in the hymn; then the way you prayed, made me think you were a minister.'

"The Doctor laughed heartily as he acknowledged that he was indeed a minister."

"Who Never look at Children."

This was the description of a little boy of six years gave to his mother, of a man whom he had often met in the street, but whose name he tried in vain to recall. "Why, you know whom I mean,' he said; "the man who never looks at children." The mother did not know at once who the little boy meant. He was a young man—a very good young man, and much esteemed in the community; but with the unfortunate habit of looking straight before him when he walked, seeing no one, small or great, whom he chanced to meet.

But there are others in the community to whom the little boy's description will apply, aside from the young man in question. There are those who seem to take little or no interest in children; who never see them—never speak to them—never so much as smile upon them when they meet them in the way. Children are of no account in their estimation. The world would be just as well off without them.

Very unlike this class of men was the Lord Jesus Christ. He was walking along one day with his disciples, when a company of children came flocking around him. Some, who were very young, were brought in the arms of their parents. The disciples, thinking their Master would not like to be troubled, would have sent the children away. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.' And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them and blessed them.

"I love God and little children,' says a German writer; as if there were some connection between the two, as there certainly is. And the late Washington Irving, in a notice of the poet Campbell, speaks of the love of children as "an infallible sign of a gentle and amiable nature' And when he came to die, no fairer chaplet was laid upon his bier, than was placed there by the little boy who said, in allusion to the double loss he had sustained, "I have lost two of my best friends—my little brother and Washington Irving."—Child at Home

Come to Jesus.

He made a long and costly journey to come to you, and it is now a short step to him. Without money, merit, effort, doing hard things, you can come to him. Just give yourself to his service, to his grace, to his pardon, to his care, to follow [illegible] Thus the Saviour teaches: Believe and live, deny self, take up thy cross, follow me, and thou shalt be my disciple. He says, Come. What sayest thou? Yes or no? All turns upon that. O cease to say No and begin to say Yes. Say it heartily; say it as well as you can, and repeat it until the whole heart is aroused, and you feel that your Yes gives your whole being to the Lord. That is all that is required. It matters not how you come, if you come at all. You cannot come wrong if honest in intent. Therefore dismiss anxiety over feelings, frames of mind, and look only to Jesus and hasten to his feet. Looking within is like gazing into blackness for light—all is vile, dark discouraging there, and none can cure but Christ. Your certificate of commendation is not that you are good, but very bad, and in great need of a Saviour; not that you are well, but very sick, and needing a physician; that you are stupidly sick, unconscious of your danger, and barely persuaded to let the Physician treat you. But only let him, and he will make you whole.

A Happy Woman.

What spectacle more pleasing does the earth afford than a happy woman, contented in her sphere, ready at all times to benefit her little world by her exertions, and transforming the briers and thorns of life into the roses of a Paradise by the magic? There are those whoare thus happy because they cannot help it—no misfortunes dampen their sweet smiles, and they diffuse a cheerful glow around them, as they pursue the even tenor of their way. They have the secret of contentment, whose value is above the philosopher's stone, for, without seeking the baser exchange of gold, which may buy some sorts of pleasure, they convert everything they touch into joy. What their condition is, makes no difference. They may be rich or poor, high or low, admired or forsaken by the fickle world; but the sparkling fountain of happiness bubbles up in their hearts, and makes them radiantly beautiful. Though they live in a log cabin, they make it shine with a lustre that kings and queens may covet, and they make wealth a fountain of blessings to the children of poverty.

The N. Y. Advocate says: At a recent quarterly meeting service of the M. E. Church in Mount Morris, N. Y., an invitation to participate in a reunion communion service was heartily accepted by the Presbyterian and Protestant Episcopal Churches. Methodist, Presbyterians, and Episcopalians mingled their devotions around the table of their common Lord, and were served by their pastors, who all aided in the consecration and distribution of the communion elements. The season was one of most impressive and delightful interest.

Every one thinks his party has the kernel and others only the shell. Whereas they are all apt to let the kernel alone and dispute about the shell, as if that were the kernel.—Gossner.

Near up to Jesus.

It was a beautiful reply, one fraught with richest meaning, which a poor man, when sorely tried in God's furnace by poverty, bodily suffering, and great mental anxiety, gave to the question, "How can you endure such protracted suffering? What sustains you under these terrible trials?

"I just near up to Jesus!"

Near up to Jesus! Ah! that was the secret of all his strength, and patience, and his endurance!

Trials lose half their bitterness; earthly loss becomes heavenly gain; bodily anguish the occasion for songs of praise; while doubt, temptation, and fear give place to faith, victory, and perfect peace, when the Christian can say from his heart—

"Blest is my lot, whate'er be sent,
What can disturb me, who am still,
While, as my strength, my rock, my all,
Saviour, I cling to Thee."

The closer to Jesus the greater our safety, the fuller our joy, the richer our experience. Resting near that great, throbbing heart, we can defy the world, the flesh and the devil. Sin will have no dominion over us: and through for a season, it may be, we are in heaviness though manifold temptations, yet no weapon of the adversary can ever reach or harm us, if we but keep near to Christ, our one eternal Rock of Refuge.

Nearing up to Jesus means Christian progress. The nearer Christ the nearer heaven Every step toward Him is an upward step; a fresh victory gained over self and sin.

It means safety. The closer to Him the father from Satan; the nearer an Almighty, protecting arm.

It means cleansing. At His wounded side we reach the very fountain head of divine love; our souls bathe in its overflowing fulness.

It means peace. "Thou will keep him in perfect peace whose soul is stayed on Thee." We cannot stay our souls on Christ, unless we get close to Christ.

And so, if we would make progress in holiness, be kept from evil, be cleansed from sin, know the full sweetness of a calm, abiding peace, let us, at all times, under all circumstances, keep "Near up to Jesus."—Christian Treasury.

Miscellanea.

An orator lately said to an audience, "I am speaking for the benefit of posterity," when some one shouted, "Yes, and if you don't get through soon, they'll be here."

The Rev. Theodore Monod, son of the well known Rev. Frederick Monod, has resigned [illegible] Home Mission of France to be an itinerant preacher. He leaves the church which was built by his father, in order to travel through France to stir up more zeal amongst Protestants.

The Presbyterians of Philadelphia, desirous of honoring the memory of Rev. Dr. John Witherspoon, the celebrated Presbyterian divine of revolutionary fame, have decided to erect a statue to his memory in Fairmount Park in 1876. He was the only minister whose name is signed to the Declaration of Independence.

Some time ago, W. W. Corcoran, of Washington, offered to the Columbian University, an estate valued at $250,000, as an endowment fund, on condition that other friends of the institution would raise within a certain period an additional sum of $100,000. The executive committee of the University now announces that the requisite amount has been subscribed.

Rev. Dr. Schauffler, one of the oldest missionaries of the American Board, has yielded to the weight of years and infirmities, and left the mission in Constantinople to spend the remainder of his days with his son, who is in the missionary service in Brunn, Austria. Dr. Schauffler has lived to complete his part of the good work of translating the Scriptures into the Turkish language.

Mr. Alvinza Haywood, of San Francisco, who recently sold his interest in a single mine in Nevada for $1,000,000, made some handsome Christmas presents to San Francisco institutions, among them the following: To the Protestant Orphan Asylum, $5,000; Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, $5,000; Ladies' Protection and Relief Society, $5,000; and the Boys and Girls' Aid Society, $5,000.

Don't be above the work that is at your hand. Some people think that, in order to sustain their professional or official dignity, they must not stoop to certain kinds of work. Did Chalmers injure his dignity when he went with a few of his earnest church members and held little meetings for religious conversation and prayer in some of the most lowly and poverty-stricken homes of Edinburgh? We need never fear of stooping in the doing of service for Christ, however humble it may be. We advise those whose backs are somewhat stiff from the effects of that kind of dignity to read now and then the thirteenth chapter of the Gospel by St. John.

The following counties in Georgia, we are happy to chronicle, says the Christian Index, have not a bar-room within their limits: Union, Fannin, Gilmer, Picknes, Dawson, Forsyth, Milton, and Cherokee, while, by the first of next month, Lumpkin will be in the same condition. Those who were familiar with these counties prior to the war, will appreciate the greatness of the change that has resulted.

The police boundaries of London cover 576 square miles, and a population of 4,000,000 of inhabitants. Here are gathered more Jews than there are in Palestine, more Scotch than there are in Edinburgh, more Roman Catholics than there are in Rome, more Irish than there are in Dublin, and there is a great variety in the languages spoken. There is a birth in London every five minutes and a death every eight minutes.

GEMS.

There is a zeal which is nothing more than eagerness to maintain our own opinion, cause, or party, simply because it is ours, and we expect to stand or fall with it, and not because conscience bids. From this come strife and contention about points of difference. The issue is division. Since neither will yield, they separate. This accords with man's fashion. Just as if Christianity was an affair of schools, and sects, or as if one could act in the Church just as he does in the political world, where factions and jealousies abound.—Heubner.

Many a minister in the pulpit—shame on him—betrays his trust to the Bible and his God, by teaching religion very much as if it were a mere matter of reason, and human progress and human discovery, instead of taking God's Word as his authority and instructor, and uttering in the ears of the people, like the old prophets, "Thus saith the Lord."—Spencer.

Religion will always make the bitter waters of Marah wholesome and palatable, but we must not think it continually will turn water into wine because it once did.—Warburton.

The more God empties your hands of other works, the more you may know He has special work to give them.—Garrett.

Toleration is a word which should not be spoken among Christians; for toleration is a very proud, intolerant word.—Heubner.

The heights of earthly promotion and glory lift us no whit nearer heaven. It is easier to step there from the lowly vale of humiliation and sorrow.—Poor.

SCIENTIFIC.

M. de Lesseps, the projector of the Suez Canal, states that he has not abandoned his project of a trans-Asiatic railway, crossing the Himalayas.

The prismatic colors have been chemically produced in the form of sheets, representing the finest pearl, in which purple, blue, golden yellow, pink and green possess the beauty and lustre of the finest polished shell.

One of the secretaries of the British legation reports to his government, that "in every important branch of industry the American manufacturers seem to be ever gaining on their competitors of the Old World, by availing themselves to the utmost of every advantage of improved process as of laborsaving machinery which American or other invention may offer." Whether or not a reduced cost of living shall ever be attained, one cannot doubt that under sound conditions of production. American industry will not only supply its home market in most articles, but will also become a formidable competitor in foreign markets in many articles.

The Westinghouse brake has till recently been under the exclusive control of the engineer. Now it can be applied to the entire train by any person in any car; while the train, in case of derailment, also applies the brake to itself, adding an immense impeding force to the obstacles which it otherwise encounters.

Silver wire is run through plates of rubies to the length of 170 miles, the most delicate test detecting no difference in diameter in any part. Gold and platinum is drawn to a "spider line" for the field of a telescope, by coating these metals with silver, drawing them down to the finest number, and then removing the coating by acid, leaving the almost imperceptible interior wire so attenuated that ten miles of it only weighed one ounce!

Common Sense

It has been said in another form of expression that the slightest excess of expenses over income is poverty, and the slightest excess of income over expenses is wealth. The ability of practical farmers to master this great problem of life is not so much dependent upon what they know of their business as upon the faculty to apply what they know. Success in business is due to the administration. Capacity in administration is due to the faculty, power, or quality, called common sense, which everybody speaks well of and nobody understands exactly. We infer its presence of its absence from the results of a man's life. We venture upon the definition of the phrase, we are using, not so much for the purpose of making its meaning clear as for the greater purpose of giving it a loftier place in your thoughts. Common sense is a degree, a high degree—in fine, the highest degree of human wisdom applied to practical things. It is not learning; it is not knowledge; it is rather the faculty of applying what we may know to what we do. Other things being equal, the practical farmer who knows the most will do the best; but other things not being equal, a man who excels in wisdom and administration may surpass a man of greater learning, or even greater knowledge of things. But do not allow this suggestion to lead you to place a low estimate upon learning, whether general or professional. Culture of every sort gives us capacity to appreciate wisdom, and opportunity also fo its exercise.—[Practical Farmer.

The Christian Register says: "It is said that there were only six Protestant churches in Mexico in 1869, but now there are 98. If they increase sixteen-fold in the next five years, there will be 1,568 at the close of 1879; but our friends at the Pilot office are not to be frightened by such fanciful figures. Indeed, when the Pilot saw that the old Unitarian meeting house at Upton, Massachusetts, had been bought by the Romanists, it exclaimed: "That's right; buy em up, but don't bid too high. Protestant churches are going to be at a discount in this country in future.'"

The Value of Education.

There is no theme more popular just now than that of education. Its importance is painted in glowing colors by public speakers, editors of both the secular and religious press, and by leading ministers of the gospel of all denominations. The liberally educated and the illiterate classes of society, all unite in one voice in setting forth the transcendant worth of education. We have sometimes thought that this growing popularity of education is more in theory than in practical earnestness. Men readily see its value but somehow fail to make such vigorous efforts to secure its benefits to their children as its real importance demands. What subject is so fully discussed and so popular in America as education? And yet, there are in this country, according to what is accepted as reliable statistical information, 5,658,000, including men, women and children, over ten years of age, who cannot read their own names - one seventh of the population sink into barbarian ignorance.—How is it in North Carolina? One half of her population (let it be said in shame) cannot read the plainest paragraph in the inspired word of God. Thousands of her citizens march pretentiously up to the Ballot Box and drop in their ticket without being able to read the candidates name written upon it. There are at this time in our State over 267,000 young persons in the period of school age. Of this vast number there are only about 50,000 of all classes whose names are enrolled in the schools—leaving something over 200,000 out of any school. These are astounding figures. They show the sad neglect of education in our own State. If all our academies, seminaries and colleges were packed to their utmost capacity, the country would still be crowded with children not enrolled in any school of all. The catalogues of our primary and collegiate schools count only a few hundred. Where is the difficulty? Poverty you say. Yes, we admit this is one, but not the only cause. While men are lavish in complimentary words for education, they nevertheless have secret thoughts, such as these: "What is the use of spending all of your money for education?—They point to the young man, perchance, whose father spent thousands on his education whose life is a complete failure." What made his life a failure? Was it his education? No. Was it his fondness for scientific research? No, it was not that either. Young men are sometimes ruined after they have been educated, but their blasted prospects are not chargeable to education. They are wrecked by indolence, sin, evil habits, dissipation or some other vice in the catalogue of debasing evils. A man may spend thousands of dollars in constructing a ship, but if he permits it to lie in the dockyard unemployed, it will decay and go to ruin. The difficulty is not with the ship, but with the builder, who neglects to put it in the channel of usefulness. Ships are indispensible to the great business of commerce. So is education to the accomplishment of great and noble achievements. But, says one, here is a young man who is successful in life, who never enjoyed the advantages of an education. We grant this to be true, yet it does not in the least affect the argument. It only goes to prove that this young man who has had good success might have distinguished himself in the highest walks of usefulness if he had been blessed with a liberal education. If a man has native strength sufficient to fell the forest trees with a dull battered axe, does it not follow as a matter of course that with a sharp axe he could have cut down the timber in half the time and with much greater ease to himself? Education facilitates man's usefulness—strengthens his mental faculties, sharpens and quickens his intellectual powers, and gives polish and skill for the performance of life's highest duties. Educational training does for the intellect what physical training does for the body. Both are essential, and the possession of the one creates the necessity for the other. Uneducated men, it is true, are sometimes useful citizens, but their usefulness is necessarily limited in its range. The educated man reaches out and up into the higher and more sublime spheres of usefulness in the world. In brief, mind uneducated is gold concealed in the mountain—mind educated is gold dug out, coined, stamped and conducting the great enterprises of life.

But to make a practical application of our subject we address a few words to parents. The matter of educating the rising generation is in the hands of parents. Children cannot, of themselves, realize the blessedness of an education. Parents must provide the means, make the necessary arrangements and put the children into the hands of our educators. If they neglected this important duty, their children are left to but one course—that is to grow up and live under all the disadvantages of ignorance. Our colleges are opened and calling for patronage. Have you boys? Send them to Trinity. It is our Conference College. It is doing a noble work for the church, and it has strong claims upon our sympathy and support.—Have you daughters? Send them to Greensboro or Davenport. These colleges offer every advantage and facility for the thorough culture of the female mind and heart. They deserve your patronage because they do their work well, and because they are Conference institutions. What we need at the present time on this great question is not theory but practice—not money, but the will. The cry of poverty has been heard until it fails to make any impression. It is no longer a frightful ghost. Things about home indicate what you can do. Your children are elegantly dressed, and your table is bountifully supplied. If you have fallen upon the plan of economy, which is right and proper, remember that it is the very worst economy not to educate the children, whom God has given you to train for usefulness here and his glory hereafter.

Rev. Dr. Rosser, the great Evangelist of the Virginia Conference, continues his labors at Edenton Street Church of this city. He has preached ten sermons of unusual power and excellence Notwithstanding the weather has been extremely cold and disagreeable most of the time, his congregations have been good, and on Sabbath the church was crowded.—The word preached is attended with happy results. A goodly number have found peace in Christ, and penitents are multiplied at every service. The church is being greatly revived, and the good influence of the meeting is widening and increasing as it progresses. On Sabbath afternoon the Sunday schools of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist Churches assembled at the Methodist Church to hear a sermon from Dr. Rosser.—The discourse was appropriate, earnest and convincing. At the close of the sermon Bro. Mangum, the pastor, invited penitents and a number presented themselves at the altar. We trust our people and the citizens generally will avail themselves of the great privilege of attending upon the Doctor's ministry. His sermons are marked by clearness, originality of thought, and are delivered with great earnestness and impressiveness. It is seldom that a community is visited by one of such rare qualities of mind and heart, and of such commanding pulpit eloquence. He is abundant in labors, and God will reward him for his faithfulness.

THE CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

On our third page will be found some nice little letters from the children. We have received quite a number of answers to the questions propounded in our last, also some new questions, which will appear in the Children's Column of next week. We thank Bro. Betts for the interest he has excited among the little people in searching out scriptural quotations. The first column on our third page is dedicated to the exclusive use of the children, and we want them to keep it filled with charming letters and Scripture questions and answers. Of course parents, Sunday school teachers and superintendents, will do all they can to add interest to this column.

We had the pleasure of a visit, the past week, from Rev. V. A. Sharpe, the efficient agent of Trinity College. The cold and disagreeable weather for some time past has not kept him from active work. He has recently visited Fayetteville, Wilmington and other points in the Fayetteville and Wilmington Districts in the interest of the College, and we are gratified to learn that he has thus far met with encouraging success. The preachers and people generally co-operate with, and sustain him in his work.

We are also glad to learn that the floor of the new college chapel is laid, —steps in the vestibule leading into the chapel are also completed—window sash are in, and the work is going forward rapidly. Let all help our agent, so that we may be sure of the completion of the much needed chapel, by the approaching commencement.—Bishop Marvin and Dr. Munsey need large chapels.

Bitterness of the North

We had determined not to publish the harsh, discourteous and unchristian sentiments expressed in the article which follows. They are the utterances of Bishop Bowman and Mr. Ives at a recent Methodist preacher's meeting in Boston. What a spectacle for a body of professing christian ministers to present to the world! What bitterness—What vindictiveness—How like the political harangues of the hot headed politicians of the country! Can fraternity and union between the two Methodisms ever be effected by such a course? Can it be possible? Bishop Bowman, we believe, was present with Messrs. Hunt, Fowler and Fisk, the fraternal delegates to our last General Conference. Did they there express the sentiments of the Northern Church? Surely they were mistaken in their expressions of fraternity.

We do not give publicity to such violent expressions to generate hatred and bitterness among our people against the Northern Church. Far be it from us to be actuated by such motives. We would rather invite the Southern Church to prayer in behalf of those who would thus so far transcend the bounds of christian propriety and ministerial dignity as to give utterance to such vile and anti-christian sentiments. May God pity and have mercy on them! Here is the article:

At the regular weekly meeting of the Methodist preachers of Boston and vicinity, held at Wesleyan Hall, Tuesday afternoon, the recent difficulties in Louisiana were discussed at considerable length. Bishop Bowman gave an account of what he knew about the treatment of the colored people in Louisiana, narrating a number of instances in which they had been shamefully abused and deprived of the vote. By invitation, Rev. B. I. Ives, of New York, addressed the meeting.

He said we are undertaking now to coax the devil out of those miserable whelps down South, when nothing but strychnine and cannon ought to be used. He rather agreed with Phil Sheridan's declaration during the war, "that if he had owned hell and Texas he would lease out Texas and live in the other place." Dr. Ives administered a castigation to the Church, declaring that there is not a paper in the Methodist Church that dares discuss the civil rights bill, and asks that it be enforced. He said he believed that the meanest rascals in the South are in the Methodist Church, South. He declared himself a Radical of the strongest kind, and he said he believed the more he hated the rebels of the South the more he loved God.

He declared he believed that the spirit now rampant in the South has got to be crushed out by another war, and he longed for the appearance of some colored man able to become a leader among his people, wielding the sword and torch. He said the Bishops ought to come out publicly and declare the whole truth about the treatment of our colored people in the South, but he didn't believe they would. If they did he knew they wouldn't return to the South, for if they did they would be hung; but he intimated that it was no worse to hang a Bishop than a minister, but he suggested if it was done it might wake up the people quicker than anything else.

He thought the Bishops were too tender hearted, and they reminded him of the man who wanted to cut off his dog's tail, but was too tender-hearted, to cut it off where it ought to be, so he cut it off an inch at a time. The speech of Mr. Ives was received with frequent demonstrations of approval; some of his most radical utterances exciting considerable applause, mingled with laughter.

A worthy brother, and an influential layman of our church, requests us to publish the Lord's Prayer, together with the two preceading verses, which we most cheerfully do:

"But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. Be not ye therefore like unto them: For your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him. After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen."—Mat. 6th chap. 7 and 13th verses inclusive.

This is a model prayer, and we should be glad if all our ministers and people would use it not only in the public service of the church, but in family worship.—especially at morning prayers, the whole family repeating after the leader.

Necessity of Regeneration.

None go to heaven but they that are made meet for it. As it was with Solomon's temple, so it was with the temple above. It was "built of stone, made ready before it was brought thither," namely of "living stones, wrought for the self same thing;" for they cannot be laid in that glorious building just as they came out of that quarry of depraved nature. Jewels of gold are not meet for service, and far less jewels of glory for unrenewed sinners. Beggars in their rags are not meet for kings' houses, nor sinners to "enter into the king's palace," without the "raiment of needle-work." What wise man would bring fish out of water to feed on his meadows? or send his oxen to feed in the sea? Even as little are the unregenerated meet for heaven, or is heaven meet for them.

Rev. Mr Talmage, of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, continues his war upon "a licentious press and its crime producing power:"

A house without a wife is like a rose without fragrance.

Delusion of Sin.

Transport yourselves to such a scene as Hogarth painted. Here is a man in a damp, dark cell, seated on a heap of straw, and chained like a wild beast to the wall. He smiles, sings, laughs; the straw was a throne; his bare cell, a palace; those rough keepers, obsequious courtiers; and he himself, a monarch, the happiest of mortals, an object of envy to crowned kings, strange delusion. Yet is not that man, more beside himself, who, with a soul formed for the purest enjoyments, delights in the lowest pleasures; who, content with this poor world, rejects the heaven in his offer; who, surest sign of insanity, hates in a heavenly Father and a Saviour those who love him; who, in love with sin, lugs his chains; lying under the wrath of God, is merry, sings, and dances on the thin crust, that, ever and anon breaking beneath the feet of others, is all that separates him from an eternity of fire?

DEAR BRO. BABBITT: I have delayed several weeks in writing you again for the purpose of gaining some further information of the circuit, and giving you a short account of our Quarterly meeting, which took place on yesterday and the day before. There has been a very great change in the weather since Christmas, or the locality has a great deal to do with the climate. It has been extremely cold since we arrived here. I have visited a number of my appointments on the circuit, found several new and comfortable houses of worship, a good attendance, and patient attention to the preaching of the Word, notwithstanding the inclement weather.

The hearts of the people do not seem to be effected, as the thermometer by the cold and chilly blasts of the weather, but I find a great many warm hearts, and true lovers of Methodism.

There is one defect that I find, which I hope to be able to remedy, to some extent at least. The Advocate is not as extensively circulated as it should be on my circuit.—The financial condition of this country is more healthy than in the Eastern part of the state, and there can be no good reason why every Methodist family should not take the Advocate. Our first Quarterly meeting was held on yesterday and the day before at Zion where we had a good attendance of the official members, and a very large congregation on yesterday listened very attentively to a good sermon from Dr. Burkhead. We then administered the sacrament to a large number of communicants.

I will not fail to call your attention to another matter which very deeply impressed my mind and that of the whole congregation.

Immediately after the sermon, Dr. Burkhead proceeded to the formation of the Stewards of Zion church where the Quarterly meeting was held. The ritual used on the occasion is a production of his own and is deeply impressive. After an appropriate introduction ritually, then comes the reading of the Discipline on the duties of the Stewards, in connection with the question: "Will you discharge the duties of the office of Steward in the church of God diligently and faithfully?" I have thought for a long time that the importance of the office of Steward was not given that prominence that it ought to have. I am very much pleased with the plan and hope it may ere long become a constitutional matter with our church.

MESSRS EDITORS: By your permission, I wish to communicate a few facts about the people of this place. We arrived here Wednesday, Jan. 6th. The people of Thomasville gave us a very cordial reception in the way of a donation party, beside the material aid afforded. The official board met to bid the new preacher welcome in the name of the Lord. The welcome addresses by a number of the brethren, made the occasion a grand one—just as good I suppose, as the Round Lake reception. The party united in singing and prayer, asking God's blessing upon the newly installed pastor and family. I could say a great deal more, but these facts will show that the people of Thomasville know how to manufacture sunshine for their ministers, as well as Greensboro, Raleigh, and Lenoir. I pray that Bro. Ivy's Angels may visit all the preachers and people in the N. C. Conference, and get every family who does not take the Advocate, to subscribe at one. Angels can do some work better than men. When the theme of the "curse of blood" shall have been exhausted, I hope the same able pens will continue to fill the columns of our Advocate especially, a series of short articles upon experimental religion. I close as you said you liked short or condensed communication.

Your brother in Christ,
P. L. HERMAN.

Thomasville, Feb. 11th 1875.

SALVATION.—A minister of the gospel one day saw a piece of ivy intwined round a brand in the fire. He took it out, planted it in front of his house. It took root, grew higher, and spread wider until it covered the front most luxuriantly, forming a beautiful ornament, and admired by the passers-by. To all inquiries, he gives the history of its planting and growth, and then asks the question, "Is not this a brand plucked from the burning?"

True Marriage

Marriage, I repeat, is companionship, and with the termination of companionship veritable divorce begins. Wedlock, as generally seen, is a cumbersome volume, with a sweet prelude of verse followed by tedious chapters of awkwardly constructed prose. The poem represents companionship, and the subsequent part its withdrawal. If the companionship could but be preserved, each month would prove a honeymoon, discords, bickerings, and misunderstandings would diminish rather than increase, because the action of contact wears off angles and adjusts uneven surfaces to one smooth. Men would not sulk; women would not regret; nor would both turn to the past with unavailing wish to undo the present. Their burdens would be lighter by the sharing of them; their discontents be softened by sympathetic unfolding. Their ways might be dark and devious; but the consciousness that they would walk wherever they went, closely and tenderly together, would shed such light upon their pathway that the darkness would be dispelled and the devious ness made straight. It is never too late to resume companionship—would, they who need it most might remember this!—and yet they who have suffered it rarely look for it again. When they step apart the slightest chance of their separation broadens and deepens, until what was a crevice becomes a yawning chasm, which few have the strength or courage to leap. If they would but stretch their yearning arms across, wounded faith, broken affection, bruised tenderness could pass over the natural bridge and be made whole once more by receiving back what had been their own and must soon again be mutually possessed.—Galaxy.

A Warning

Agreeing most heartily with temperence, I write to tell you of my great trouble. After the war was over I found I was a great deal better off than many of my neighbors, and only occasionally got on a spree. As time went on I made more money, but became fonder of whiskey; the case with which I could get it, and the inducements thrown out to me, have raised a fiery furnace in my breast. The silent tears of my noble wife, the sorrowful looks of my lovely children, have nearly run me mad. Often, often, have I sworn, by all that was sacred, that I would not touch another drop as often have I broken the firm resolve. I have just awakened from a drunken dream, and as usual, my first though was my wife, my children; have I maimed, have I murdered any of you in my raving madness? Slowly, but surely, my property has dwipled away; those who sold me the awful drink have grown rich. I would make away with myself, but am not fit to die. Oh God! oh God! what can be done for the hundreds of miserable wretches like the one who subscribes himself. THE DRUNKARD.

—Alexandria Gazette.

The proposition to compromise the Louisiana difficulties by allowing the Conservatives a majority of about ten in the House, and that the past conduct of the Kellogg Government shall not be inquired into, is indignanty repudiated by both parties.

Religious Beevities

Mr. W. W. CORCORAN, of Washington, has given $77,000 to the Church of the Ascension in that city.

CHICAGO has about forty German Protestant churches; among them are fourteen of the Lutheran confession.

FATHER CHINIQUY, the French convert from Romanism, has been preaching in Putnam, Connecticut, and twenty families have left the Catholic Church. They have written to their priest that they have found Christ, the great High Priest, and will therefore need his services no longer.

THE English bishops are after their clergy. A rector with a salary of $10,000 a year having failed for $120,000, compromising with his sixty-four creditors at twenty-five per cent., has been requested by his bishop to resign. He has declined, and says that, having "great expectations," he will eventually pay up in full

The Christian Era, a prominent Baptist Paper, has this to say in favor of the Methodist plan of appointing ministers to pastoral work:

"Looking over New England we find that nearly one fifth of all the Congregational and Baptist pulpits are continually vacant, and further, that fully one-fourth of all the ministers in these denominations are clerically unsettled.—We used to smile at the idea of an itinerancy; but now the Methodist pastorate, on the average, is quite as long as the Baptist settlement, and our Methodist brethren have an advantage over our own in being sure of a 'location' somewhere before their removal. The Bishop says to the preacher, 'Go,' and to the Church, 'Receive,' and the work is done."

The revival in Ireland has assumed such vast proportions and continues with such power that this has come to be called the "year of grace." In smaller towns and villages, as well as the large cities, crowds attend the meetings, and the interest is intense. One pastor stated at the noonday prayer meeting in Belfast that, at his late communion, 230 converts united with the Church.

Recent Publications.

— Our Sunday school publications, Magazine, Visitor and Little People, for March have been received. They are as usual attractive and full of interest for the little people.

— We have received from Nelson & Phillips, agents of the Northern Methodist Book Concern, a copy of the sermons preached at the Round Lake camp meeting last summer.—Among them are sermons by Bishops Doggett and Kavanaugh and Drs. Lee and McFerrin. The sermons were taken down by a stenographer at the time of delivery.

We are also indebted to the same house for a copy each, of Helps to Prayer and Spiritual Struggles of a Roman Catholic. We shall speak of the merits of these publications as soon as we shall have given them a careful examination. They are highly spoken of by the religious press generally.

We are indebted to the Publisher, F. W. Helmick, for a copy of "Remember deeds of kindness," a new and beautiful piece of music. "It is called the moral song of 1875." We give below the first verse of this charming Song:

Remember deeds of kindness,
Let them refer from you depart;
Prize them as your dearest jewels,
Keep them safe within your heart.
Thou' the past should be forgotten,
Love and friendship still remain,
And a heart of true affection,
Deeds of kindness will retain.

To Rev R. L Abernethy.

REV. AND DEAR BROTHER: My attention has just been called to your article in the Raleigh Christian Advocate of the 27th inst., headed "Dr. Closs and the heathen."

In the article to which you refer I intended no discourtesy to you any more than to Bro. Yates, and you admit that I was sufficiently courteous to him. But some men claim that they are entitled to more courtesy than they deem due to others. I was not willing to make any such discrimination. I regard you both as brethren beloved in the Lord.

"O! wad some pow'r the giftie gie us"
To see ourselves as others see us!
It wad frae mae a blunder free us,
An' foolish notion.

Bro. Yates published sentiments that I regarded as not in accordance with the Scriptures, and I so stated. I have not heard from him yet, but shall be greatly disappointed if he regards that as discourteous. The second commandment in the decalogue forbids the worship of idols; and the whole tenor of Scripture denounces idolatry as a heinous sin in the sight of God.

You, in direct opposition to the prohibition in the second commandment, and the uniform teaching of God's word, published that when a man worshiped an idol that it was acceptable to God, and that God accepted such worship as if offered to himself. I stated THAT was ignoring the Bible, and presumed you could not have known that it was in conflict with the second commandment. You complain of that as discourteous. I did say that your views were "unscriptural," but I did not add that they were "illogical assumptions, monstrous absurdities and childish efforts." But observation has taught me that those who lay the largest claims to courtesies from others, usually practice them least themselves. That, I suppose, grows out of an opinion that others are entitled to less than they are.

You do not aver that I either misapprehended or misrepresented you. You do not deny that the second commandment forbids the worship of idols. Nor do you deny that you published that God accepted the worship of idols as if such worship were offered to himself. It will hardly require proof that this is ignoring the Bible. When you shut me up to the alternative to assume that you either did not know that you were publishing views in direct conflict with the second commandment, or that you published them in defiance of its authority—it was no discourtesy to assume the former. But if you insist that you did publish a contradiction of the second commandment knowingly and wickedly, and in defiance of the authority of Almighty God, then I acknowledge that my charity carried me further than the circumstances of the case justified.

If I struck you when you were in the rear, my apology is, that I mistook your locality. I thought you were still in front. With regard to your Irish anecdote, I perhaps, might retort, if I thought that the best way of illustrating scriptural truth. I thought I was meeting, in the President of Rutherford College, a live opponent, but you inform me you were already decapitated. If I had known you were defunct, I would not have struck the blow; as I am too magnanimous to stain my blade with the blood of the slain, or put my heel on the neck of the vanquished.

I now, at your request, address myself to your syllogism.

"If the heathen are lost, they must be lost because they are sinners."

"Will the Doctor deny this?" No.

All sinners are such because they commit sins.

"Will the Doctor deny this?" No.

"Sin arises only from the refusal of an intelligent being to meet moral obligations. But there can be no moral obligations upon any intelligent being without a knowledge of the law which imposes it; for in the very logic of facts, we see that the obligation must keep pace with the knowledge of the law creating the obligation."

"Will the Doctor attempt to deny this?"

Yes. Ignorance of law is no excuse for its violation when it might have been known.

"But the heathen have no knowledge of the lawful question, (the Bible) nor have they at any time had any means of knowing that law."

I also deny the proposition, that the heathen have no knowledge of the law in question, and that they have not at any time had any means of knowing it.

Rev. E. A. Yates says: "The Holy Spirit, by virtue of the atonement, gives the heathen in his conscience a knowledge of right and wrong, and therefore he who is without the outward preaching has a law within." Again he says: "Mr. Watson says the heathen have always been under moral law." How do you like these authorities? Would it not be well for Bro. Yates, Bro. Brooks and yourself to agree upon a line of defence so as not to come so often in conflict with each other? But the Apostle Paul not only sustains Bro. Yates, Mr. Watson and myself, but is still more explicit. He says: "When the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law these having not the law, (Bro. Yates says the written law) are a law unto themselves: which show the works of the law (Bro. Y. says written law) written in their hearts." Rom. 3 chap. 14 and 15 verses.

You add, "And if they are not under moral obligations, imposed by the Bible, they cannot be sinners because they do not meet such obligations; for in fact no such obligations exist for them." Let me here help you a little.

But the word of God says they are sinners. "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3 chap. 23 verse. And the Apostle has "proved both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin." Rom. 3 chap. 9 verse. "All sinners are such because they commit sins:" Abernethy.

Therefore they are under moral obligation, &c. Again you add, "And if they are not sinners like ourselves, it must follow that they are not lost as sinners in Christendom are lost who die impenitent. But they are sinners like ourselves; for the Apostle says "There is no difference." Therefore they are lost as sinners are lost, &c.

You say, "It will be no relief to the Doctor's position to say that they must be sinners because in Adam all fell."—That is worse than trifling. Why prove by inference that they are sinners when the Bible says over and over again in so many words that they are such. To affect that you do not know it, is to make the impression that you have not read the Bible—that you are not only ignorant of the Ten Commandments, but of all the Bible. Such affectation may be excusable with school-boys in a debating society, but not with ministers of the gospel in investigating Bible truths. When you think up an argument for me again, please think up a better one. I never deal in such arguments as you have suggested for me.

You say, "I do not affirm that all heathens will be saved." And yet, you do maintain that they are not sinners.

"Sin arises only from the refusal of an intelligent being to meet moral obligation:" This is one proposition. But there can be no moral obligation upon any intelligent being without a knowledge of the law which imposes it. This is proposition 2d. But the heathen have no knowledge of the law in question, nor have they at any time had any means of knowing that law. Proposition 3rd. It must therefore inevitably follow that they are not under moral obligation.—Prop. 4th. If they are not under moral obligations they cannot be sinners. Prop. 5th. If they are not sinners they cannot be lost—Conclusion. These are your propositions when stript of their unnecessary verbiage. And that is your conclusion. And yet you do not believe they are all saved. Then you do not believe your own logic. Neither do I believe it. But if they cannot be lost; and they are not saved, then please tell us where those of them go who are neither lost nor saved.

Now let me say a word to you in conclusion. I engaged in this discussion that I might contribute my part in developing the Scriptural doctrine of the moral obligation of the church of God to send the gospel to the heathen world; and thereby arouse her from her apathy in missionary zeal I consider a misapprehension of the doctrine of the Bible as to the moral condition of the heathen the principle cause of her apathy. I have been endeavoring for 30 years in my public ministrations to correct that misapprehension. But my public ministrations extend over a very small territory compared to that over which the ADVOCATE circulates. When you published a theory in direct opposition to the second commandment, I did not believe it would damage any one but yourself, and perhaps the young minds you were training. I regretted it on that account, for I have admired you for your zeal and energy in the cause of education, and have watched with interest and admiration your success. Let me speak plainly to you. As an educator you are an eminent success. That is your proper sphere. When you move out of it you are like a limb out of joint that gives pain every time it moves. As your friend, (for I am really such) I regret that you ever published a line on a subject which you seem to have never studied. Let me remind you that the great truths of the gospel are not taught by syllogisms. They come to us authoritatively by the teachings of God's word.

When I commenced this discussion, I resolved not to be called off from the doctrine involved by noticing side issues. Nor did I intend to suffer the discussion of a great practical truth to degenerate into personalities. I have departed from that purpose in this single instance only that you might not feel that I had treated you with discourtesy by not noticing your communication.

With expressions of my best wishes, I am, &c.,

WILLIAM CLOSS.

The Times' New Orleans special says the Congressional Committee are endeavoring to effect a compromise. It involves the seating of the five members expelled by bayonets, the election of a Speaker, other than Wiltz, the recognition of the Kellogg government, and harmonious action with the Radical Senate McEnery and Penn will not be parties to the compromise. Another proposition was the recognition of Kellogg as Governor and Penn as Lieutenant Governor. The leading members of both parties are sanguine of some sort of compromise.

It is said there is a man in the condemned cell in Paris who cannot be guillotined until the authorities ascertain his name. He was condemned by a name since found to be false, and there is no precedent for the execution of a man whose name is not known.

D. R. BRITON, P. E.
Statesville, N. C.

Died, in Ridgeway, N. C., Jan 21st 1875, after a short illness, Rebecca ... eldest daughter of Dr. T P. and Mrs Lucy E. Jeffreys.

The deceased was converted at Trinity Chapel, near Ridgeway, when quite young, and immediately connected herself with the M. E. Church, South, of which she remained a consistent and useful member until God removed her to the ... plant.

The subject of this short sketch was one of the most remarkable ladies ... writer ever knew. Though bright and youthful, she never manifested any disposition to indulge in those popular amusements of the day which are of a doubtful character. While others indulged in such, she sought, and found pleasure in the society of those whose hearts were filled with things of real value.

There seemed to be nothing light in her mental composition. Her mind took hold upon the real rather than the fictitious. In this particular she was a model.

In fact, she was one whose example the young might imitate, in many particulars, with great profit to themselves.

She was obedient to her parents in all things, affectionate to her brothers and sisters, kind and obliging to her friends, faithful in discharging her duty as a teacher in the Sabbath-school, and exemplary in her deportment as a member of the Church of God.

Those ever fleeting, which chase so beautifully through the veil of her unaffected humility, were appreciated by those among whom she moved; and therefore many attended her funeral and wept over her remains. Her parents, brothers and sisters are grief-stricken indeed. May the God of all grace sustain and comfort them in their sad bereavement, and may they follow the departed, as she followed Christ, that there may be a happy reunion, when they shall have crossed the Jordan stream!

HAL PATTON.

Ridgeway, N. C. Jan. 27th 1875.

Mrs Lily M. Cotton was born April 21st 1852, and died near Pittsboro, N. C. Jan. 23rd 1875.

Thus has the death angel laid low into the dark valley one of the purest women, and most guileless christian I ever knew. The sorrows of my own heart almost paralize my pen as I record her death and offer this brief tribute to her precious memory. Just in the dawn of her womanhood, and with all the endowments of head and heart necessary to make her useful in the church and world, we looked to her for years of usefulness in the Masters cause, but death has suddenly disappointed all our hopes, and left us in bitterness to weep the irreparable loss he has inflicted.

The intellectual cast of her mind was of a superior order. This gave tone to the piety and made the current of her religious life to follow on in an even and continuous stream till it reached the ocean of eternity. Though Catholic in her feelings she was a decided Methodist. She comprehended the doctrines set forth by her church, and was ever ready to defend them with the skill of a polemic, and an eloquence inspired by a conscientious effort for truth. At the altar of Methodism she was given to God in holy baptism, from which at early received the washing of regeneration, and from the word of God, as dispensed from thence, she received the nourishment of her spiritual life, and into the bosom of her spiritual mother she freely poured the love of her young and tender heart.

We received her funeral from 1 Cor. 15:23, to a crowded church whose tearful eyes attested how dear she was loved by the entire community. Farewell, dear friend, till we meet above! May the mantle of thy piety fall on the sorrowing husband, and the two orphans thou hast left behind.

OLD NORTH STATE

Excelsior Cotton Feed.

Having been appointed Agents for the sale of the above valuable fertiliser we take pleasure in recommending it to our planting friends as one of the and best adapted cotton and corn manures known to the farming interests.

It has been fully tested for several years with the most satisfactory results. It has been carefully analysed by eminent Chemists, and found to contain a large per centage of concentrated vegetable matter, combined richly with which constituted its component parts. It is particularly adapted to thin or exhausted lands, and while its judicious application will give the desired vigor to the growing plants, its great value will be realised in the quality of fruit produced.

We can only offer a limited amount of this pure and valuable ticle to our friends this season.

Correspondence of the Children.

MR. EDITOR.—In answer to Nannie A. Woodburn's question, I find the word 'Regeneration' in 19th chapter and 28th verse of Matthew, also in the 3rd chapter and 5th verse of Titus. As we all have need of an Advocate, will you ask the following question of the little readers of the N. C. Christian Advocate, viz: which chapter and verse is the only place in the New Testament that the word "Advocate" is found?

Very Respectfully,
QUEEN ESTHER BETTS.

DEAR SIR.—We have just received our Advocate, and I see that Master E. F. Jurney proposes to the young readers of the Advocate to find the only verse in the Bible that has in it the word "Eternity.' I find it in Isaiah 57th chapter and 15th verse.

LAFAYETTE HOLLOWELL.

UNCLE BOBBITT:—I am a little girl and read mothers paper, and have taken pleasure in finding the questions which have been published in the Advocate. The word "Eternity" is in the 57th chapter of Isaiah in the 15th verse.—I found it without help.

BETTIE C. REYNOLDS.

DEAR ADVOCATE:—I am a little girl ten years old, and have found the only verse in the Bible that has in it the word 'Eternity." It is in Isaiah 57th chapter and 15th verse.

Truly yours,
M. W. NORMAN.

DEAR UNCLE BOBBITT:—The answer to the question about "Eternity" I found in "Isaiah" fifty-seventh chapter fifteenth verse.

Yours truly,
KATIE R. PENRY.

MY DEAR UNCLE.—The word "Eternity" is found in the 57th chapter and 15th verse of Isaiah—I am only 10 years old.

Your little neice,
MOLLIE E. BOBBITT.

DEAR EDITOR:—As my ma is writing to you for the Dear Advocate I will say to your readers that I found the word 'Eternity" in 57th chapter and 15th verse of Isaiah. Dear Editor can't you allow a small space in your good paper for children's correspondence? I would like to hear from the Sunday school scholars in our State. I am nine years old.

Yours truly,
MOLLIE L. LEA.

The Tea Party.

Our dolls had a tea party, wasn't it fun!
The things we used there they came one by one.
We gathered at the table and poured out the tea;
And each of us held up a doll to sit near.

You never saw children be more half so well:
Why, nobody had any trouble to tell
And then you believe me for badness, that day,
No dolly was sent from the table away.

One dolly, however, the proudest one there,
Was driven almost to the verge of despair,
Because she had met with a simple mishap,
And upset the butter-plate into her lap.

The cups and the saucers they shone lily-white;
We helped all the lollies, they looked so polite.
We had cake and jam from our own pantry shelves:
Of course, we did most of the eating ourselves.

But housewives don't know when their cares may begin.
The window was opened, and pussy popped in:
He jumped on the table, and what do you think?
Down fell all the crockery there, in a wink.

We picked up the pieces, with many a sigh;
Our party broke up and we all said good-bye:
For come to our next one; but that we'll invite
That very frolicsome pussy to keep out of sight.

Willie's Missionary Tour.

BY MARION WEST.

Willie Hanson, although only five years old, was interested in missions. He had been told that there were men, women and children in this world of ours who had no knowledge of the true God, and who were bowing down and worshipping idols which their own hands had made. It seemed very strange to him they should do so wickedly, for he had been early taught to say "Our Father," could repeat many passages from God's Holy Word, and he was never weary of listening to and repeating Bible stories.

One day, in the spring-time, Willie went into the garden, where Rogers, the hired man, was at work. Willie was very talkative, as usual and among other things he introduced something as a theme for conversation which he had learned from the Bible, and made some inquiries in regard to it of Rogers, who replied: "I don't know nothin' about the Bible."

Willie's eyes grew big with astonishment. He knew that those people who were ignorant of God's Word, and who were called heathen, lived far away over the seas; but here sure enough was one of them who had strayed away from home. Here now was an opportunity to do just what he thought he should like to do, if he could only be willing to leave papa and mamma, and go to the benighted portions of the earth.

"What! are you one of those heathen?" he inquired.

Rogers was somewhat amused at the strange question (for he had never reckoned himself with that class of persons), but replied: "I 'spose I am."

Whereupon Willie commenced his first missionary labor, aided by the golden texts which he had learned. After having done what he could to dispel the darkness of Rogers's mind, he hastened to inform his mother of the very important discovery which he had made, and of what he had tried to do. Who shall say that the day's record of that little life was not closed with a "well done," penned by the Master's hand?

Would it not be well for those Christians who never seem to have anything to do for Christ, and who think they would be willing to work for Him if they could do some great thing (go on a missionary tour to the heathen, for instance), to shorten a short tour first to the kitchen, the garden, or out into the highways and hedges near home, and see if they cannot find some one who needs instruction about the way of life and salvation? "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much."

"Disciples of Jesus, why stand ye here idle?
Go work in His vineyard, He calls you to-day;
The night is approaching, when no man can labor,
Our Master commands us, and shall we delay?

"Our field is the world, and our work is before us,
To each is accorded a mission to bear;
At home or abroad, in the cottage or palace,
Wherever directed, our mission is there."

Must Drain to Succeed.

About three-fourths of the complaints that reach us of the misbehavior of fruit trees, and the failure of vegetable crops, and the unsatisfactory blooming of roses and many other things have one common origin—the want of drainage. We see people laboring away at the surface, raising the level by additions of soil, manuring liberally, removing plants that have not prospered, and planting others in hope of better luck; and we can tell them, when all is done, that until they secure the first essential of success—a rapid removal of surplus water—their can be no success to their efforts, manure and plant as they may.—At this time of the year you have but to open a hole one spade deep, and in less than ten minutes that hole will be filled with water, which proves that the whole surface soil is saturated, and that any cavity, tunnel, or opening would immediately draw off the surplus water, according to the capacity of the opening and that therefore very simple and inexpensive means would suffice to enable the soil to get rid of the water which is in excess of its power of absorption. A two or three inch pipe, laid at a regular fall at about three feet beneath the surface, will effectually drain a breadth from twenty to one hundred feet in width according to the nature of the soil and its relative level. Generally speaking, the drains should be three deep and twenty-four feet apart; but in a wet clay they will not be too close at twelve feet apart. In districts where there is any apprehension of the disturbance of the drains by moles, one inch pipe should be used. On very flat land a fall in one in fifty will suffice to keep the water moving; but a rapid fall is preferable if the outlet is low enough to admit of it, as in times of sudden heavy rain fall, a quick removal is very desirable. Of course we can not here enter into the details of the subject; but as this is a good time to drain land that requires it, we again remind our readers that good drainage promotes the warmth and fertility of the soil; and on the other hand, a water-logged soil is almost poisonous to every kind of plants that come under the care of gardeners.—[Gardener's Magazine.

Training a Horse to Trot.

A correspondent of the Turf, Field and Farm tells how he trained an old cavalry horse to trot. He was accustomed to "lope," and could not be made to understand what was required of him, until a space of some 100 yards was measured off in a field, and he was ridden across this. Whenever he broke he was scolded, at once turned about, and again started from the starting point. If he trotted across without breaking he was petted, fed lumps of sugar, apples, or some other pleasant food. In this way he soon learned what was wanted, and made every effort to trot this distance in the shortest time, becoming a horse of unusual speed. A somewhat similar plan was some years since set forth in a circular and sold at one dollar.

We refer to this now, not so much because of the desirability of knowing how to teach a horse to trot, as because the lesson taught can be applied in very many ways. Teaching any domestic animals what is expected of them is of the greatest importance. If an animal knows that a specified duty is required, to be followed by rest or rewarded, it will much more readily do what is expected, than if it has no definite conception of what is before it.

Don't Hack, Hack, Cough Cough!

Cough is a symptom by which various diseased conditions of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs manifest themselves. But whether it arises from the irritation produced in the throat and larynx by taking cold, from an attack of Bronchitis, from Incipient Consumption, or from various other causes, nothing will allay it more speedily or cure it more permanently than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It does not matter whether it be a recent attack, or a lingering cough, the Discovery is in either case equally well adapted for its relief and permanent cure. In fact it will cure a cough in one-half the time once any to cure it with any other medicine, and it does it, not by driving it up, but by removing the cause, subduing the irritation, and healing the affected parts. No time should be lost in commencing the use of a proper medicine for the relief of a cough, for unless this course is pursued, serious and dangerous disease of the lungs is liable to result. Golden Medical Discovery is sold by all dealers in medicine.

A Triumph Over Humbug.

It is not difficult to show the timid, and credulous are proverbially so. Aware of this fact, low venders of pseudo bitters, chiefly in a diluted state, have plied us falsely against trade preparations containing spirits, and no doubt have frightened a few sick folks into purchasing the fermented rubbish which they sell, and which is fortunately more injurious than the vilest drams drunk at taverns bars. But already a tremendous reaction has set in against these abominable nostrums, which, being devoid of the stimulating tonic which alone prevents liquid lobule preparations from turning sour, decompose almost as soon as made. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has lived and will live down multitudes of such impostures. A regular resurrence of the demand for the great alterative invigorant from those who have always been its patrons, shows that they have not swerved in their timehonored allegiance to America's most popular remedy; and a constant influx of new orders demonstrates how little impression, after all, the blatant declamations of the mock bitters men have made upon the general public. So long as Hostetter's Bitters continue to cure and prevent intermittent and remittent fever, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney disease, and the numerous other ailments to which they are adapted, they will continue to dominate the factious opposition of humbugs, and that will be just as long as they are manufactured and sold. Be it known unto all bogus nostrum venders, of every degree of audacity and sin, very that they can never hope to sell themselves into public favor at the expense of Hostetter's bitters the reputation of which is founded, as it were, upon a rock.

My Heart River.

My heart is like a river,
Whose waters flow to sea;
Sometimes they're deep and quiet,
Sometimes they're wild and free.

Sometimes they're dark and gloomy,
Sometimes they're clear and bright,
Sometimes they're full of sunshine,
Sometimes they're full of night.

Sometimes they're full of music,
Sometimes they're full of sighs,
Sometimes they're full of laughter,
Sometimes they're full of cries.

Sometimes they're full of gladness,
Sometimes they're full of pain,
Sometimes they're full of sorrow,
Sometimes they're full of gain.

Sometimes they're full of blessings,
Sometimes they're full of tears,
Sometimes they're full of hopes,
Sometimes they're full of fears

Take Care of the Babes in Christ.

How to take care of the young converts is a question of very great concern with the faithful pastor. Methodist preachers are expected, at some period during their pastoral charge of a congregation, to make extra and special efforts to win souls to Christ. It is their business to labor for the salvation of sinners at all times. But as a general thing these stated periods, for special religious services, yield results in the awakening and conversion of souls not often realized in any other way. It is God's great plan for saving the world. Hence the necessity of revivals. More than two thirds of all true believers in, and followers of Christ, in the various orthodox churches of the land, were converted to God during some special religious awakening. All newly converted persons are termed "babes in Christ." How to care for these is the subject before us.

The first step is to put them under a regular system of religious drill—drill'd into the marching step of the army of the Lord. They must shoulder responsibilities—be put into the ranks, and learn to handle the instruments of our holy warfare. They are raw recruits, and need private as well as public instruction. Many of them are from the ranks of sin, full grown, and have long been trained with the legions of vice. They will not expect something to do. They will not be content to settle down, and sing all the day long, "I'm glad salvation's free." If it is free to enjoy, it is free to use. Work must be given them, or they will backslide. The pastor is the general. It is his business to direct the energies of the spiritual ranks. The church is sick because of inaction. The more the arm of strength is used, the stronger it will be. The more thoroughly the young converts are imbued with the spirit of holy zeal, the more efficient will they become. They are not insensible to the fact of their worth. The church made vigorous efforts to win them to the cause of Christ, and the zeal of the older Christians is fresh in their memory. The crying and tears at their spiritual birth have not been forgotten. But what shall we do? is asked by one. We have our class, church and prayer meetings, our love feasts and the usual means of grace. What better can we do for them than we have in the past? The answer is, that our danger lies just by the side of our strength. We have many valuable appliances, but if we rest in these we soon fall into forms and ceremonies and lose the vital power. How many of our prayer meetings would capture a soul for Christ?—Are they not too ceremonial—too much alike as to order of exercises? One dear brother prays over his grievances till they become chronic, and the tinge of sadness touches all hearts. The young convert is there, and says in heart, "well, I too will soon be like them: I am coming to it: but O, how I wish the church was steadily in a holy flame of sacred love!" From all these formalities we must depart. Long hymns, long Scripture lessons, long exhortations, long dry prayers and long and studied sighs will kill any prayer meeting.—Reverse this order and new life is at once infused in them and the fire begins to burn.

We cannot think of a greater aid to young converts than a regular weekly prayer meeting conducted properly. Select a leader from the young converts and an assistant leader who may be an experienced member of the church. Form them into praying bands—Let them be trained to take the place of the fathers when they shall be called to the church triumphant. Oh it is sad indeed that so few of the young converts of the present day pray in public!

Again, recognize the young converts when you meet them. Let them know that you are mindful of them. This is not the duty of the preacher alone, but of all the members of the church. Their old chums in sin have not entirely forsaken them, and by secret intrigues will use many efforts to get them back into their old ways. Thus the young converts feel a great loss of personal attention.—They love the church, but the ways of sin are yet a source of temptation. The social element in our church is not fully developed.—Let there be more social life among members of the church—more sympathy—more singing of the sweet songs of Zion together, and there will be less inclination to visit the theatre, the gilded saloons, and the many places of sin and death.

In this city, God is now reviving His work of grace. Souls are being awakened and converted to Christ. Many, many, will be their temptations. If work is given them to do—if they are nursed as lambs of the Rock, and can be induced to join a praying band, it shall be well with them. We trust a prayer meeting for the young in connection with our church will at once be inaugurated in this city. It would strengthen the church on all our stations to establish young men's prayer meetings; and on our circuits it would quicken the church—energize her dormant powers to revive the old fashioned neighborhood weekly prayer meetings. Who will try it?

The Children's Column is becoming more interesting every week. Quite a number of letters from the children containing queries and answers came too late for this issue. We will publish them, or such parts of them, as may be of interest, in our next. Some of the little girls and boys say they are trying to get everybody to take the Advocate. To encourage them in circulating the paper, which they have learned to love, we make them the following proposition:

To the little girl or boy sending us the largest number of new subscribers to the Advocate for one year, with the cash, between this and the first of May, we will give a nicely bound copy of the Bible. To the one sending the next largest number, within the time specified, we will give a nicely bound Hymn book. The names of all who send subscribers, and the number sent by each, will be given in the Advocate the first week in May, so that all our little readers may know who gets the nice presents. The price of the paper, for one year, is $2.20 postage paid.

We are indebted to Dr. Craven, Editor and publisher, for a copy of the Journal of the 38th session of the North Carolina Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held in this city December 2-7, 1874. They were printed at the office of the Daily News. They make a neat pamphlet of 56 pages. The Doctor has gotten them out without resorting to advertisements to meet the expenses. We understand the cost of their publication exceeds the amount raised for that purpose. If this is so, the Conference ought to reimburse Dr. Craven for the amount thus expended over and above what was raised at Conference to publish them. Those who wish to supply themselves with a copy will address Dr. Craven at Trinity College. The price is not mentioned, but we are quite sure that they are worth 25 cts. per copy. We presume the preachers, however, will have them on sale.

The revival at Edenton Street Church, in this city, continues with increased interest and power. Up to the present, there have been about thirty conversions. A number of penitents are still seeking pardon, and great seriousness pervades the entire congregation, and the good work is extending throughout the community. Dr. Rosser is inexhaustible in his public ministrations. He not only does all the preaching, but takes part in the singing, altar work, and his exhortations are frequent and powerful. God bless him, and long may he be spared to the church!

Revs. Dr. Wilson and Craven were in the city last week. From Dr. Wilson we learn that Greensboro Female College is prosperous. The number of students in attendance the present session is in excess of that of the past session. The same encouraging fact we gathered from Dr. Craven in reference to Trinity College.

The Junior Editor, who has been absent on a bridal tour for about a month, is expected to return to the city this week, and resume his place on the Advocate.

Kind Words.

A brother from Rocky Mount renews his subscription to the Advocate and adds: "I want it as long as I live, and after I am gone I want it sent to my wife and children." We wish all fathers and husbands were like minded.

Another brother writes from Anson county: "Your paper is gaining favor among the people in this section. I shall use every possible effort to give it the circulation it deserves."

A subscriber from Charlotte renews his subscription, and says: "The Advocate is a great comfort to me. It is the best paper I have ever seen."

I brother from Princeton apologizes for a short delay in renewing his subscription and appropriately adds: "If I should fail to renew my subscription at the proper time, don't discontinue my paper, for I don't see how I could get along without it—I think it ought to be a weekly visitor to every Methodist family in the State of North Carolina."

NOTICE.

Before the war, many of the Preachers of the N. Carolina Conference kindly consented to sell my books, I paying freight, and books unsold to be returned to me. Parcels of these books, I have learned, are scattered in the bounds of the Conference, and I shall be much obliged to the brethren, who may know this in any case, if they will inform me of the fact, addressing me Richmond, Va., mentioning the number of each of the works, and I will give directions as to forwarding, &c.

LEO ROSSER.

The Religious Paper.

An excellent article appears in the Standard of Chicago from the pen of Rev. J. B. Broadus on the value of a religious paper. We publish the article in the Advocate and most heartily commend it to our readers. The real value of a religious paper in the family has never been fully appreciated by the people. Even the preachers themselves have failed to attach to the religious paper the importance and dignity to which it is justly entitled. The subscribing for, and reading of a religious paper, is somehow considered by some as of little consequence, and therefore a matter which may, with impunity, be neglected by members of the church. In this they are in error. We believe it the duty of every professor of the religion of Christ to take his church paper. If religious papers were not important and necessary for the good of the church, why give them an existence? The best men, the most intelligent and deeply pious, have justly assigned to the religious press a place by the side of the gospel. Indeed, they agree that the religious paper is a preacher of righteousness, carrying to its thousands of readers precious gospel truths and religious intelligence every week. If then the religious paper is important for some members of the church, is it not important for all, and if it is important for all, should not all avail themselves of its great benefits? Here is what Dr. Broadus says:

A modern newspaper is among the foremost wonders of the world. It is a worthier and a nobler monument of human capacity, really a far grander thing, than the pyramids of Egypt. In the mere mechanical production of it are used nearly all the foremost inventions which the human race has achieved.

Besides, a newspaper is the cheapest thing on earth. Just look at a single number, with its multifarious contents; think how many different men have wrought together to make it and bring it to your hand; and then remember that it has cost you five cents, the very smallest sum for which, according to the fashion of the Cotton States, any article, the most trifling, can be bought and sold. In fact news papers are, on some accounts, entirely too cheap. We are so accustomed to estimate everything according to its value in money that, people are apt, unconsciously, to think lightly of newspapers because they cost so little. The best gifts of nature and the chiefest blessings of Providence are often underrated for a similar reason.

Religious news ought to possess the highest interest for all who are really pious and moderately intelligent. When any man or any family takes and reads a political, a commercial or a literary periodical, and does not take, or does not read a religious periodical, it indicates a lack of interest in religious things, which is painful in any case, and, in those who profess to be Christians, alarming. And, on the other hand, if every professedly pious family in Virginia—to take one State as an example—should for the next five years be regular readers of a good religious newspaper, it would indicate and partly produce a state of things that would thrill every devout heart in the commonwealth with delight, and awaken new joy among the angels of God.

Religious newspapers are often dropped simply because they have never been attentively read. A person who has been taking no paper, or none that resembled the one to which he now subscribes, should read every number carefully for several months. He will thus gradually get into the current of contemporaneous events and thinking, will gain some acquaintance with the principal writers for the paper, will find it easier to understand the local allusions—in a word, will begin to feel somewhat at home in reading it.

Among the charms of a good religious newspaper is the fact that it may be read with interest by all the family. In the immense multiplication of books and periodicals it is apt to occur that the parents, the grown children and the little ones are separated into three distinct groups as to their habitual reading. Now there are few things more delightful in a family of some intelligence, few things that shine brighter among the recollections of childhood, than the choice literature which has been read by all alike, any reference to which is at once understood and enjoyed all round the domestic hearth, or the family table. It is a golden chain of sympathy that links all the group into one circle. We ought to think of this in regard to the books read by our children, so far as possible. But, beyond most other literature, a good religious journal may be made common ground for the whole family, one of the intellectual centers of family life.

But the benefits that may be derived from a religious newspaper would form an inexhaustible theme. We close with some practical suggestions.

There is scarcely any form of Christian effort by which a person may be so sure of doing much good in a little time as by trying to induce others, throughout the community, to take a good religious newspaper. Much may be accomplished among our neighbors as well as in our families, by judicious efforts to make people read the paper as well as take it. And where a good paper is generally read the Sunday school teachers will always have some thing to say to their classes when the lessons are over, the brethren who speak in prayer meeting will not have to say the same thing every time, and when the neighbors meet they will have other subjects to talk about besides idle gossip.

Those who are tempted to abandon a good religious newspaper had better conclude to try it another year, and see if they cannot awaken more interest in it, on their own part, and that of their families and friends.

Every subscriber who renews and every new subscriber helps to make the paper better for all the rest. A first class newspaper of to-day can be conducted only on a large scale.

So then, friends, subscribers heretofore, for the sake of your fellow-subscribers, for the sake of your church and Sunday-school, your neighborhood and your family, for the sake of your own mind and heart, for the gospel's and the Savior's sake, renew your subscription immediately, and take some trouble—trouble no sure of being rewarded with usefulness—to prevail on others also to subscribe.

DEAR BRO. BOBBITT: Please excuse me for asking, how much longer will it take for our clerical brethren to comply with the "curse of blood?" Has it not already been sufficiently "cursed?" I am sure some of your readers are getting quite tired of it. Bro. Herman strikes the key when he says, "a series of short articles upon experimental religion" from the same able pens might do vastly more good. I cannot help but think, that you in your great kindness have allowed them more space in your valuable paper than their articles or the subject deserves—and I confess that some of them are very able documents;—yet the differences between the contesting parties seem drifting into personalities, which is very much to be deplored. They have all had several hearings, and we do hope, for a time at least, they will write upon subjects more profitable and interesting to a large majority of your readers.

LAYMAN.

Another layman writes us expressing about the same sentiments. We have also received letters from brethren expressive of their appreciation of the disension, and desiring its continuance at least for a while longer.—The subject is one of grave importance, but we are clear in our conviction that the articles thus far have been too lengthy. They have been well written, and by many read with deep interest, but the large majority of our patrons have declined reading them on account of their length. We think the brethren are about through with the discussion, and when through, they will, we trust, give us articles upon other subjects of interest.—EDITOR.

What They Say Of It.

BISHOP PIERCE WRITES:

"I received the book "Life, Sermons and Speeches of Rev. Dr. Reid." I thank you for it, your Father was my warm personal friend. I loved him for his talents,—his piety—his devotion to the church. His whole character was lovely. His history a precious heritage to Methodism and his children, you ought to thank God for your ancestors. Your Grandfather, Rev. James Reid, and your Father, Rev. N. F. Reid, were both marked and model men in their generations. They have left their descendants a noble inheritance, richer than gold—more enduring than brass or marble.

I have read the book with interest and cheerfully commend it. It is Methodistic—pure and wholesome. Every methodist family certainly in North Carolina, ought to have a copy. The selections of the editors type—the man—reproduce him—the Publishers have shown skill and taste in the getting up, and the book is a credit to all concerned. I hope the rapid sale will reimburse all expenses and leave a surplus for the noble purpose you propose, the education of the younger children.

God bless you and all the family of my sainted friend.

Yours truly,
GEO. F. PIERCE.

BISHOP MARVIN WRITES:

"I have read the "Life, Sermons and Speeches of Rev. Dr. Reid" and can most cheerfully and heartily endorse the book as being well prepared and worthy of the attention of the public. Several of the discourses are productions of great merit, and just at this time I should rejoice if every lover of Christ could read the great Missionary Address contained in this book. I rejoice that the memory of Dr. Reid has been honored and his name preserved in this publication. One who occupied so large a place in the breast of the church ought not to pass away without some such permanent memorial..... I trust you will meet a large sale, for certainly the life of Dr. Reid ought to be in the library of every North Carolina Methodist and many others besides. Not only the intrinsic value of the book, but the memory of the name it preserves ought to secure this. With sincere christian regard, I am as ever,

Your Brother,
E. M. MARVIN.

DEAR BRETHREN: The action of the Board of Missions made it obligatory upon me to make the division of the Missionary Assessments between the Districts, on the basis adopted by the Board of Finance. I have therefore been waiting to see the publication of their Report, that I might govern myself accordingly, but so far, I have waited in vain, and have determined to wait no longer, but to proceed in the division on the basis of last year.

I hope this action will meet your approval, and also satisfactorily explain any seeming unnecessary zeal on my part.

FRANK H. WOOD,
Sec'y Board of Missions.
Wilson, N. C., 17th Feb., 1875.

BROTHER BOBBITT: Some time ago you intimated that the readers of the Advocate, might expect to hear from the Agent of Trinity College, through its columns. Allow me to thank you for your kindly references to the Agent; and also for your hearty support of the Institution which he represents.

Having been appointed by the Bishop to this work, I greatly desire to make it a success. To do this, your aid is solicited, and also that of every preacher, and member within the bounds of the N. C. Conference. Not that the sum we propose to raise is so large, but that we may do it without difficulty.

Let it be kept in mind that it is a church enterprise—that it belongs to the N. C. Conference; and that it is the only male College under our care.

For years it has been felt that the buildings were inadequate. Some two or three years ago, the Trustees determined to enlarge, and for this purpose we are now soliciting aid.

The new building, (90 by 60) is being carried forward to completion, and will be ready we trust, for commencement in June next. Money, however, is necessary to this desired consumation: and for it, we confidently appeal to all concerned.

Hard as the times are, we believe that all the money, asked for, might be contributed this year, and nobody be hurt. Let us try it. In numbers, and material resources Methodists are not in the rear in N. C., Nor are they behind in general intelligence. Let them stand among the foremost in facilities for higher education. Let this building be completed and paid for this year: and let us thus say to the youth of N. C., and especially to those of our own church, we are ready to receive you.

Men and brethren help—give us material sympathy. Send to me at Thomasville N. C. the amount you are willing to invest in this noble enterprise. Brethren, who subscribed to Bro Culbreth, my predecessor, will please communicate with me. Remember the money is now needed.

To the Ministers and Members of the Quarterly Conference of Williamston Circuit—

DEAR BRETHREN: In consequence of the sleet the members of the Quarterly Conference failed to meet me at the time appointed for your 1st Q. M. I now appoint it to be held at Jones' Chapel March 13-14.

WM. CLOSS, P. E.
Tarboro, Feb. 1875.

Rev. W. S. Chaffin writes: "The weather has been unusually disagreeable since my appointments commenced on Buck Horn circuit, but I have attended all of them. My reception has been, at every church, just such as intelligent, kind hearted Christians should always extend to their pastor.

It is to be feared that a secret wish to be saved without holiness is the great bar to our progress towards perfection.

Religious Brevities.

REV. STEPHEN H. TYNG, JR., is giving cheap concerts of a high order of merit in his church, New York city, each Wednesday night. The attendance is very large.

THERE are 1,000,000,000 heathen who need the gospel, and are going into eternity without it. Is there one professing Christian who will not make an effort to save them?

THE schools for girls established and supported in Egypt by the wife of the Khedive, proves a great success. In three months there were 205 boarders and 160 day scholars.

THE presbytery of Coleraine, Ireland, has adopted a temperance pledge, in which the members say they feel bound, under present circumstances, to abstain from all intoxicating drinks as beverages: (1) from love to God; (2) from love to their fellow men; (3) from love to their own souls.' This example might well be imitated by religious bodies in our country.

THE Catholic Freeman's Journal, while censuring Mayor Kelley, of Richmond, of supporting "godless schools," adds: "One thing is certain. If our bishops do not forbid Catholics sending their children to godless schools, in fifty years from now the Catholic Church in the United States will be a shriveled and ghastly skeleton."

THE Romanists have in Japan a numerous mission of over fifty priests; but they are not popular either with the people or government. They have also a mission in the center of the capital, which they owe to the power of France. Their work at present seems to be chiefly among their old converts. They have a school of about fifty pupils preparing for the priesthood.

THE American Presbyterians have had a station in Canton, China, for fourteen years. The work has been one of continued blessing. Last year 48 were added to the church, and within twenty months 65. A new church has lately been dedicated, capable of accommodating 500 persons, or, when crowded, 600. The audience usually numbers about 400, of whom more than 200 are females.

DR. GULICK, in the Missionary Herald, estimates that of organizations of the different Protestant churches at work in Italy, there are 124 different cities and villages with Protestant preaching.

THE restriction in the new Constitution of the State of New York, prohibiting State aid to sectarian institutions, does not prevent counties, cities, towns and villages from granting aid to such institutions.

FATHER BECKX, the general of the Jesuits, requested the Pope not to nominate any Jesuit as a cardinal. The Jesuits are particularly anxious not to appear in any way prominently before the world just now!

AT MADRAS, where there has been much spiritual deadness among professed Christians, Mr. Taylor's labors have resulted in about three hundred conversions. The old-fashioned Methodist protracted meeting has gathered in crowds, night after night, from six to ten o'clock.

THE acknowledged decay of Brahminism is said to have aroused the fears of influential Hindoos, and they are making strenuous efforts in some places to sustain the tottering system. Books, defense of Hindooism or assailing Christianity, have been printed and widely distributed.

THE number of Catholic priest in all the countries of Europe is on the decrease. In Italy the loss is serious—three lost to one ordained. In Germany the loss is but little less. Even in our own country the ranks are only kept efficient by importations. In view of the great wealth of the church, and the honors which priests are held by the laity, this depletion of numbers is surprising.

AT THE session of the Central New York Conference in 1870 Rev. G. W. Peirce was appointed the first Methodist minister to Salt Lake City. At the last session of the Rocky Mountain Conference one charge and four missions were reported in Salt Lake City. The Rock, Mountain Seminary stands at the head of the educational institutions of Utah. At the Central church, Rev. C. C. Stratton, pastor, has over one hundred members.

The Domestic Alter.

Family prayer, says, Cecil, may be made a vast engine of power to the whole circle. It says there is a God, and inspires a reverence for, and points to the spirit land. It fixes the idea of responsibility in the mind, while it diffuses sympathy through the soul. "It furnishes a judicious parent with an opportunity of glancing at faults, where direct admonition might be inexpedient. It greatly conduces to the maintenance of family government and order, while its spiritual advantages are invaluable."

As one of the signs of the times; we notice in the advertisements of the services of one of the Episcopal Churches in Philadelphia, the following words—"An old fashioned Episcopal Church with no novelties." No doubt this is an attraction, but the Reformed Episcopal Church is running away with the kind of people who are attracted thereby—Presbyterian.

The Church and the Sabbath school

We observe in the annual report of one of the most prosperous churches in the city, a large proportion of the accessions to the Church is from the Sunday school. This is as it should be. It is strictly in the line of the normal growth of the kingdom. It is only saying that most of the orchard trees are transplants from the nursery. We presume to say the number of additions to the Church, from the Sunday-school, measures, with tolerable accuracy, the shepherd care of the Church over its lambs. A very successful pastor said recently that he attributed any prosperity he had had in church work mainly to his interest in, and care for, the children. It does not require a long pastorate to witness that great change in a congregation which comes by swift gradations when childhood passes up into youth. A pastor who devotes himself to the audience-room and neglects the school room, will presently find himself in the midst of a company of young people who are strangers to him. Or sadder still, he will find they have strayed altogether beyond his influence. A closer union between the church and school, a more practical, organized and constant care by the officers of the church over the lambs of the flock, would result in a steady progress from the school to the church, from the classroom to the communion table. To this end, let the pastor be no stranger in the school. Let him study that part of his field as the most hopeful of all. Let the elders of the church, actively at work in the school, be a bond between the two. Let the conversion of children be the constant aim of the school, and their nurture in Christian life call forth the most prayerful and earnest efforts of all the people of God.—Interior.

Christian Service.

God expects service of us. And how often is it to quicken our languor, and shame us out of our sloth or timidity, that he smites us with his sharp, penetrating rod! Often has affliction sent us to serve, and showed us the sin of standing all the day idle when there is such a work to do. Up and serve me in the gospel of my Son is God's message to some. Up and serve me in the diligence of labor for my Church is his council to others. Up and serve me as a witness for my truth—a testifier against all error and gainsaying! Up and serve me in seeking to win back heedless wanderers to the fold! Up and serve me in the thousand little duties and offices of daily life!

But our service is not ended here. It passes on beyond this age into ages to come. It is everlasting service. No doubt there are parts of service carried on here which cannot be transfused into the ages of perfection; and there will be new parts of service called for then, which we know not now. But still we may say that the service to which we were set apart, when first the blood of the covenant was sprinkled upon us, is in substance the same as shall be developed hereafter.—Christian Treasury.

A little daughter of Mr. Wiley W. Clefton, living near Rolesville, was burned to death on Monday of last week.—She, with other children, were playing around an open fireplace when her clothing took fire, and though her father was near by, and made every effort to tear her clothing from her person, she was so badly burned that she died in a few hours thereafter from the injuries sustained. Drs. Fleming and Young were called in, but could do nothing for the little sufferer. She was buried on yesterday.

Died on the 13th of February 1875, at the residence of her father-in-law in the town of Smithville, Marion Co. S. C., Mary A. Cooper, age 26 years and 5 days; wife of H. S. Cooper Esq and daughter of the late Maurice and Sarah Ann Moore.

Mary Ann Cooper united with the M. E. Church at 15 years of age, under the ministry of that great and good man the Rev. H. H. Gibbons, at old Shiloh [illegible] about the year '57 or '58, and in all her journeying through life, she evinced by her spotless character and christian walk the beauties of the religion of Jesus and all through her protracted but suffering of one hundred and twenty days the patience, meekness, blended with Christian cheerfulness, was truly wonderful to behold.

Her exhortations to the recent band of converts (whom she styled "Little Paul") to her husband, and in fact to all that came in contact with her, will be like bread cast on the waters, that will be gathered up after many days.

The writer knows how hard she tried to stand it under her afflictions, not that she feared death, for she frequently expressed her self as being fully prepared to die, but she disliked to give pain to any one, and particularly to her husband. O the prayers of she poured out of and from her heart for that husband, will be remembered for many days to come. But we must bring this obituary to a close Dear Mollie thou has gone. Good bye—farewell; thou has gone to join but stand in glory. Father, mother, sister dear little children, Mandaro, Johnson Owen, and little Cora May, that preceded her but a few days, will constitute quite a circle round in that white robed army on the land in the Silver land

Dear husband, brother, sisters, friends and physician, they sing they have landed on the other shore. S. J. J.

John Ewing, was born in Richmond co. Oct. 4th 1797, and died at his home in Montgomery co. Jan. 24th 1875, aged 77 years 3 months 20 days

He professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Church at Antioch, Nov. 1821, and on the same day was appointed class-leader. During his long official connection with the same he exhibited a purity of life and a devoted attachment to the cause of Christ which procured him a the true rank of God's servant and host.

He was a man of great integrity, of indomitable energy and was always ready to contribute of his time and his means to support the cause of God. His piety was decided, even of all known of all.

It required no microscopic examination to discover the christian virtues which shone so brightly in his life. He was not a mere lay-nary in number of the church. Now that he is dead charity is not called upon to shroud the predominant traits of his character, that he did virtues may be seen it passed on the characters as of a mature christian, and they could be seen by all. It may be said with emphasis, "He was a good man" and if he was a success in the race, the highest success. Well did he live to peace did he die.

He was a long while in life, his end approached slowly but sensibly; he was a man-ished of the time he set his house in order, disposed of his temporal matters—dismissed from care, his mind, gave himself to devotion and to him and patiently waited the final summons. And when it came, with abiding confidence, he like a venerable patriarch wrapped his mantle round him, went to sleep in Jesus and awoke up in glory. He has gone to his home in peace, he was buried in a good old age.

For more than fifty years his house has been the preacher's home, and many will remember the pleasant hours spent under his roof. He as an aged widow and three children with a home on their minds, but with faith in their hearts. May they cherish his memory and emulate his virtues.

Died near Price's store, Rockingham co., N. C., Oct. 12 of croup, James Walter, eldest son of Lemuel Robert P. Price age 6 years. Little Walter had a kind affectionate disposition, that made him a general favorite with all his kindred and friends. God in his wise and mysterious Providence doeth all things for the best, and those he loves he chasteneth. Then beloved parents weep not, for your dear born; your sainted child. Remember that the bright beautiful star which has been removed from your earthly home is now a with brighter luster in that home on high. May that celestial light guide you safely on to that heavenly shore, where little Walter with other beloved ones awaiteth to greet you. Fond parents we sympathize with you in your great affliction, but O what a comfort to know that in that brighter and glorious world where doeth dwelleth we may meet again our loved ones, to part no more.

Died in Green county N. C. of consumption on the 8th of Jan 1875, Thomas C. Dr. aged in his 53rd year. He embraced religion and joined with the M. E. Church South, at a Camp-meeting at Drumon's Chapel in 1840 in which communion he lived till death released him to join the church above, where his sainted parents, brothers sisters and five little children have gone before him He leaves behind to mourn their loss, a bereaved wife and three children, numerous relatives and friends but they have the blessed assurance that their loss is his gain.

When first taken sick the operation of his children by much on his mind, but in his latter days he was patient and seemed resigned to his fate. A few days before his death he prayed for Jesus to come and take him home out of his suffering.

"The prayers of the righteous availeth much" for soon God sent his messenger to summon him home.

Died, in Newbern, S. C., Saturday night, Feb 13 1875, at 12 o'clock Mrs Mary E Bowen aged 39 years and 3 months, of consumption.

Mrs. Rogerson was the late consort of our esteemed contr'g Wm H Rogerson, formerly Conductor on the A & N. C. R. R. She was a pious member of the M. E. Church of this city, an amiable lady, a faithful wife and a fond mother. The bereaved husband and orphaned children have our heart felt sympathies.

Mrs Barbara Moore, was born Jan. 9th 1804, and died Jan. 24th 1875, joined the M. E. Church, from choice, when about sixteen years old—an acceptable member to the end of life. She was remarkable for firmness, and judgment, generally, especially in the training of her children.

She stood in her last illness that her children were all naked, and that she brought her work was done.

I quote the above as given me by one who knew her well, and loved her devotedly, and from the uniform testimony of all that had the pleasure of acquaintance, and a correct knowledge of her character, I think the above, touching her "firmness and judgment generally, especially in the the training of her children," but a modest eulogy on the christian character and moral worth of our departed mother in Israel.

Though dead she yet speaks to her children, speaks to all within the circle of her acquaintance, speaks by the force and consistance of her Godly example. Her children, all, thank God, are endeavoring to follow in the way she so successfully taught them—to follow her as she strived to follow Christ.

To all who may feel exercised as to how those who "fear God and keep His commandments" depart this life—know ye that a prince as Israel has fallen; but she fell in the exercise of triumphant faith, and in sure hope of the life everlasting.

Died in Smithville on the 18th of Jan. 1875 Mrs. Cordelia A. Thompson, aged 32 years and 6 months. She was the wife of Mr Joseph Thompson of Smithville N. C. She was converted about 20 years ago in this place during a prayer meeting held in the M. E. Church. For about 20 years previous to her death, her thompson had been afflicted, and part of the time a great sufferer, yet amid all her bodily afflictions she evinced by her patience, a degree of gratitude that was truly commendable. With a heart full of the grace of God and a strong faith in her blessed Redeemer, she meekly bowed to the mild sceptre of Him who promised that "All things shall work together for good to those that love and serve Him."

The funeral services took place in the Methodist Church in Smithville Jan. the 20th, conducted by the Rev. W. P. England. The attendance was large and many eyes were suffused with tears while we gathered around the body of the departed saint for the last time, until the last trumpet shall summons us to the bar of God. According to her request we sung at the grave that beautiful hymn:

And let this feeble body fall,
And let it droop or die!
My soul shall quit the mournful vale,
And soar to worlds on high, &c,

In the death of sister Thompson the church has lost a valuable member, the husband an affectionate wife the children a tender mother, but heaven has gained an other jewel brightened and polished by long years of suffering.

May God's Spirit comfort the heart of the bereaved and as they have an other tie to charm their affections toward heaven may they press onward until they too shall gain the prize, and join hands on the other shore.

Where the pilgrim reposes, the fields are all green
There day never closes, nor clouds intervene
O the former that era there, such as eye hath not seen!
O the songs they sing there with hosannas between,
While the river of life flows freely.

Dianah Stuart, wife of John Stuart, died near Carthage N. C. Jan. 29th 1875, in her sixty-fourth year, having been a member of the Methodist Church about forty years. She had been connected with the church at Carthage ever since its organization, and was a truly pious woman, one that enjoyed religion, loving Jesus and striving by precept and example to bring others into the same happy relationship to the Saviour. Sister Stuart had for years been sorely afflicted and had for a long period been denied the privilege of the sanctuary, but in the midst of all, her faith was strong and her spirit serene, so that when the last hour came she was ready. A few days previous to her death, upon inquiry made by her pastor concerning her future prospect, she said, "All is well! yes, yes all is well!" And doubtless all is well with this servant of God forever. In the relations of wife, mother and neighbore, Sister Stuart was all that a christian woman ought to be, as those who knew her intimately, cheerfully testify. She lived to see her children converted to God. They, together with her husband are left sorrowing on the shores of time, but still tending upward to meet the loved one gone before.

OLD NORTH STATE
Excelsior Cotton Food.

Having been appointed Agents for the sale of the above valuable fertilizer we take pleasure in recommending it to our planting friends as one of the and best adapted cotton and corn manures known to the farming interests.

It has been fully tested for several years with the most satisfactory results. It has been carefully analyzed by eminent Chemists, and found to contain a large per centage of concentrated vegetable matter, combined richly with which constituted its component parts. It is particularly adapted to thin or exhausted lands, and while its judicious application will give the desired vigor to the growing plants, its great value will be realized in the quality of fruit produced.

We can only offer a limited amount of this pure and valuable article to our friends this season.

For the Advocate.

Dear Children of the Church

My little girl was tired of play one day last week, and said "Mother what shall I read to you while you darn little Kate's stocking? I replied, get "The Advocate" daughter, and read from that: it is always brimfull of instruction—"Oh! Mother, I have looked it over from 'top to bottom' and find nothing in it for "the children," why don't Mr. Bobbitt write something for us, don't you guess he has little girls?"

Now dear children "Uncle Betts has" renamed the blockade, (God Bless him and his!) and we have one column in our noble church paper, all to ourselves—ain't we glad! Shan't we be happy? We will read of little May and little Maggie; of obedient little Nellie, whom every body loved; of gentle Daisy Eyebright who got into every body's heart, and our little eyes will fly wide op n with delight, and our little hearts fly open too, and the seeds of kindness and love will be sown for Time and Eternity.

You all know that the home Nursery, is a large, bright, happy room, right close by mama's room; where you laugh and romp, jump and tumble and thereby grow larger and stronger every day—even so, shall the "Children's Column" be a Nursery for your little hearts and minds, helping them to grow better and purer each day, until they shall become like a beautiful garden of fair flowers, all sweet, all fragrant, fit for the Master when He comes "to make up His jewels."

KATE'S MAMA.

UNCLE BOBBITT: Little Mr. Jurney did not give us much of a puzzle after all, for all of us have a concordance, and could find it easily I am so glad you have given us a corner in our paper. I think you must love, particularly little girls. I want to tell you about the little girls of Shelby. The grown ladies of our church have a sewing society to make money to furnish our new church: and they have given us little girls a corner in their room, and we sew and make lots of nice things, and we are going to buy a bell, a great big one. I hope you will hear it some time and come, won't you? We meet at the Shelby Seminary every Saturday at 2 P. M.

I hope some of the little girls will tell me what they are doing for their churches, also what chapter in Esther the word God occurs and how many times.

Your little friend,
SIDNEY BELL GOODE.

MR. BOBBITT: I find the word "Regeneration" in Matthew 19th chapter 28th verse: Also in Titus 3rd chapter 5th verse. "Atonement" is to be found Romans 5th chapter 11th verse. I propose to the young readers of the Advocate, like myself, to find the word "Milk" in the New Testament and send it to the Advocate. Also find, from any source you may be able, what were the names of Noah's three son's wives.

Yours truly,
MACK HAYS.

Oxford N. C, Feb. 10th 1875.

UNCLE BOBBITT: The Children's Column in the Advocate, is really interesting: and I think instructive too, to us children. Please continue it for our enjoyment. I find "Regeneration" in the 19th chapter 28th verse of Matthew, and in the 3rd chapter 5th verse of Titus. "Atonement" I find in 5th chapter 11th verse of Romans.

Please ask the children how many times the word "Belief" is found in the Bible, and where?

Your little friend,
ROSA LEE JORDAN.

Roxboro Feb. 12th 1875.

UNCLE BOBBITT: I am a little girl, a reader of the Advocate. I like it very much especialy the children's part of your paper. I wish all the children had it to read. I have found the answer to questions by Uncle Betts, and others. In answer to little S. Anna Parker's question, the word 'Atonement" occurs but once, in the New Testament—5th chapter and 11th verse of Romans. And to Nannie A. Woolburn's question. The word "Regeneration" occurs twice, Titus 3rd chapter and 5th verse and Matt. 19th chapter and 28th verse.

I want some one to tell me, what the blessing was, that our Saviour conferred on little children, when he took them in his arms and blest them

ANNIE E. RUSS.

Kernersville N. C. Feb. 11th 1875.

MR. BOBBITT: In your last paper the Sunday school children were requested by Mary Lillie Pinnix to find a chapter in the Bible which contained four verses just alike; and each verse containing twenty words. I find it to be the 107th Psalm; and the 8th 15th 21st and 31st verses. I find the Children's Column to be very interesting. And I hope the interest that is being created among the children will be continued. I love the Advocate; it is the best paper I ever saw.

Your little friend,
SALLIE L. JURNEY.

Olin, N. C. Feb. 10th, 1875.

UNCLE BOBBITT: Last week sister Emma got your paper first and found out the words, but to day she is at school and I have looked them both out myself. I am just eight years old The word "Atonement" occurs only once in the New Testament and that is in the 5th chapter and 11th verse of Romans. The word "Regeneration" occurs twice in the New Testament; in Matt. the 19th chapter and 28th verse, and also in Titus the 3rd chapter and 5th verse. You will let me know if I am right. I am so glad when Tuesday comes, for then we get your paper and I turn immediately to the Children's Column. I want you to keep putting in something for the Children.

L. B JOHNSON.

Trinity College N. C. Feb. 9th 1875.

The following have answered Master E. E. Jurney's question, but their answers reached us too late for the last issue:

Bettie O. A. Fearrington, Maggie C. Woods, Bettie Farrow, Henry B. Culbreth, and Nannie E. Guthrie.

The following have also answered the questions asked by Annah Parker:

Bettie Farrow, Lucy Ritch, D R Martin, N. A. Woodburn, Lizzie Porter, Samuel M. Gattis, Bettie C. Reynolds, E. E. Jurney in part, and Bettie O. A. Fearrington.

Other answers on the question "Thereof" have been received from—Lee A. Falls, C J. Falls

NEW QUESTIONS.

Master E. E. Jurney and little Lizzie Potter wishes the little readers to inform them when and how many times the word "Reverend" occurs in the Bible. Who first divided the Bible into chapters, verses and words.

Nannie C. Woodburn wants the little readers to find how many times the word "Theatre" is used in the Bible.

MR. EDITOR: Will the little readers of the Children's Column, please tell me where the word "it" occurs in the Holy Bible? It is found only once.

Corn and Hogs.

From carefully-conducted experiments, by different persons, it has been ascertained that one bushel of corn will make a little over ten and one-half pounds of pork, gross. Taking the result as a basis, the following deductions are made which all our farmers would do well to lay by for a convenient reference:

When corn sells for 15½ cents per bushel, pork costs 1½ cents per pound.

When corn costs 17 cents per bushel, pork costs 2 cents a pound.

When corn costs 25 cents per bushel, pork costs 3 cents a pound.

When corn costs 33 cents per bushel, pork costs 4 cents a pound.

When corn costs 50 cents per bushel, pork costs 5 cents a pound.

The following statement shows what the farmer realizes on his corn when in the form of pork:

When pork sells for 3 cents per pound it brings 25 cents per bushel in corn.

When pork sells for 4 cents per pound it brings 32 cents per bushel in corn.

When pork sells for 5 cents per pound it brings 45 cents per bushel in corn.

MILK DIET IN DYSENTERY.—Dr. Barret states in the Archivees de Medicine Navale that he has used milk in chronic dysentery among soldiers and sailors returning from China. He considers a milk diet superior to all other treatment in such cases. The milk must be pure, unmixed with water, as fresh as possible, and not boiled. Sufficient milk was given to a patient, but nothing else allowed to pass his lips. Diarrhea, if it appears, lasts but a few days. No change of diet is to be made, and no medicine given. If the physician fears the persistence of diarrhea, a small quantity of bismuth must be prescribed If the milk pass through the bowels undigested, pepsin will remedy the defect in the digestive process. After a time the faeces become solid, the patient thinks himself cured, and craves other food. This is the dangerous period, for too early relaxation of the diet may cause a relapse. White of eggs, rice, cream, and the lightest possible things are to be admitted sparingly; and when the patient feels convalescent, and will endure the restrictions no longer, he is to return by the slowest degrees to his former diet.

A Few Words to Feeble and Delicate Women.

By R. V. PIERCE M. D., of the WORLD'S DISPENSARY, Buffalo, N. Y.

Knowing that you are subject to a great amount of suffering, that delicacy on your part has a strong tendency to prolong, and the longer it is neglected the more you have to endure and the more difficult of cure your case becomes, I, as a physician, who is daily consulted by scores of your sex, desire to say to you that I am constantly meeting with those who have been treated for their ailments for months without being benefited in the least, until they have become perfectly discouraged and have almost made up their minds never to take another dose of medicine, nor be tortured by any further treatment. They had rather die and have sufferings ended than to live and suffer as they have. They say they are worn out by suffering—they are only made worse by treatment. Of anything more discouraging, we certainly cannot conceive, and were there no more successful mode of treating such difficulties than that, the principles of which teach the undressing and depleting of the vital forces of the system, when the indications dictate a treatment directly the reverse of the one adopted by them, their cases would be deplorable indeed. But lady sufferers, there is a better and far more successful plan of treatment for you; one more in harmony with the laws and requirements of your system. A warm, irritating caustic treatment and strong medicines will never cure you. If you would use rational means, such as common-sense should dictate to every intelligent lady, take such medicines as embody the very life-invigorating tonics and nervine, compounded with special reference to your delicate system. Such a happy combination you will find in my Favorite Prescription which has received the highest praise from thousands of your sex. Those resentful diseases sensations causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet or ascend a flight of stairs, that continual drain that is sapping from your system all your former elasticity, and driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital force that renders you irritable and fearful, may all be overcome and subdued by a perseveing use of that marvelous remedy. Irregularities and obstructions by the proper workings of your system are relieved by this mild and safe means, while portions of the existence of which is a rare indication of serious disease that should not be neglected, readily yield to it. Read it. Its use is kept up for a reasonable length of time the special cause of the pains is permanently removed. Further light on these subjects may be obtained from my pamphlet on diseases peculiar to your sex, sent on receipt of two stamps. My Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists.

A Triumph Over Humbug.

It is not difficult to alarm the timid, and invalids are proverbially so. Aware of this fact, the venders of pernicious nostrums, "entirely free from alcohol," have ridiculed, or sought to ridicule all genuine tonic preparations containing spirits, and no doubt have frightened a few sick people out of a dose of tavern bars. But already a thousand times more than the whole number of the victims from the grave of the blackest character are responsibility, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has proved itself as the most

EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC

for all diseases of the larynx, Stomach and, Bowels. The SUPERSTITIOUS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or half-hearted remedy, and Pain in the Back, Side or Head is often mistaken for Rheumatism, Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Bilious attacks, Sick Headache, Heartburn, Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having neglected to do something which should have been done, Dizziness, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the skin and eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption

Such diseases many of them existing in or about the stomach, or others very few, but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is responsible for a vast line of diseases and if allowed to [illegible] and remain torpid, wretchedness and DEATH will ensue.

DR. C. M'LANE'S

CELEBRATED

Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, feels cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he despairs of every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. M'LANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

Address all orders to

FLEMING BROS., PITTSBURGH, PA.

P. S. Dealers and Physicians ordering from others than Fleming Bros., will do well to write their orders distinctly, and not mistake for Dr. C. M'Lane's Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. To those wishing to give them a trial, we will forward per mail, post-paid, to any part of the United States, one box of Pills for twelve three-cent postage stamps, or one vial of Vermifuge for fourteen three-cent stamps. All orders from Canada must be accompanied by twenty cents extra.

Sold by all respectable Druggists and Country Store keepers generally.

Dr. C. M'Lane's Vermifuge

Should be kept in every nursery. If you would have your children grow up to be HEALTHY, STRONG, and VIGOROUS MEN and WOMEN, give them a few doses of Selected Poetry.

What is God?

What is God? Can we find out by searching?
Are the heights of heaven His dwelling place?
Are but an outer circling sphere
Before whose power our power ceases?

Rest my brain, be still, and cease!
Thou'rt here, here in these, though't everywhere.
Where reason stands dull by, eager to hear,
More against eyes see in thy place.

My weary hands vainly search for me,
Unknow they all. I see thy works,
Within them hear the sound of Power's laws.
But where, or how, I cannot see.

Can man who comes to this dull clay
Know that which is truly Essence is,
And has no form to shape like his?
But yet he feels it day by day.

Can the child know a man
Who is not, that he was like me,
But now he came to dwell with me,
To live with me day by day?

O God, we feel Thee near us,
Thou art so nigh as our love.
Is this Love within us more?
I love as I see, more below.

I study pictured human forms
But they come short me to clear;
Imagination draws no line
More like to these than to the worms.

My mind surmounts this little world
And pierces thro' its circling dome,
To view thy throne, find thy home,
I wonder oft how angels can't'd.

Expanded soaring spirit bids,
And sinks again more to present it to
Tho' my shrine, now you one tares
Which to my soul's attention calls.

And soon within, yet from above,
A gentle voice discerns my heart:
"No matter where my feet to where
I am present, I will love."

Communicated.

For the Advocate.

"THE CURSE OF BLOOD."

Heading Strictures, etc.

Messrs. Editors: I feel that I owe you and your readers an apology and a debt of gratitude—an apology for continuing this discussion so long, and a debt of gratitude for the kind and patient attention given the parties to this discussion. I beg that you and they will remember who it was that provoked the discussion. I trust, too, that you will accept, as entirely satisfactory, my apology for taking part in and continuing it. It is that the cherished doctrines of my church and the Bible are controverted by prominent and influential ministers of that church. It is that they have "promulgated" and continue to "promulgate," through an organ of our church, views that are, in my opinion, both unscriptural and anti-Methodistic. And I beg, Messrs. Editors, that you and your readers will bear with me a little longer. For if we stop now any good results of this discussion may not be reached.

In my first and fifth articles, I tried to show that the theory of Bro. Robey and Dr Closs is utterly inconsistent with the teaching of the Bible concerning God's justice and mercy. That for God to damn the heathen for a violation of the moral law, in the absence of the gospel and a practicable condition of salvation, would be manifestly cruel, hard, and unjust. I think I made it appear, too, that such a course, on the part of the Almighty, is not only hard and unjust, but that it is out of harmony with His dealings with others—with rational adults, in Gospel lands, and infants and idiots, everywhere. And, I am persuaded that your intelligent and unprejudiced readers accept that reasoning as conclusive against the theory I am combating. But, lest Dr. C. and Bro R. should continue to believe that the theory of heathen salvation would suffer in a contest with theirs on their chosen ground, I cheerfully and gladly accept Bro. Robey's challenge to meet him there. After quoting Rom. 2: 12, 14 and 15, he says, "it is amusing with what gravity the advocates of the 'standard theory' quote these passages, as though they really thought that they prove something to the point." And, after giving what is certainly a very remarkable exegesis of this passage, he, with an air of triumph, says, "we respectfully ask that the defenders of the 'standard theory' come to the point and defend, if they can, their favorite fortress." Well, although this passage has not hitherto been my "favorite fortress"—not having quoted it except incidentally during the whole discussion—I am now inclined to regard it as such. Indeed, I feel under obligation to Bro. R. for calling my attention specially to it. I am entirely willing to leave the settlement of this whole question to a fair interpretation of this single passage. And, I must say, (I do it with the utmost sincerity,) that did I not know something of the power of an erroneous theory to bias the minds of those who adopt it, I should be utterly amazed at the construction which Dr C. and Bro. R. put upon this passage. They seem, indeed, to have totally misapprehended the apostle's design and argument. No better, probably, ought to have been expected of Bro. Yates. Bro. Abernethy and myself, as we "have never studied the subject;" but such a blunder is almost inexcusable in those who seem to have made the matter a specialty. They represent Paul as teaching just exactly the reverse of what he really does teach. Now, this may seem to be rather strong language, but let us see if it is not warranted by the facts in the case. For the sake of brevity, I will not quote the passage, but beg that the reader will get his Bible and read, with me, Rom. 2: 6-16, before going any farther. The passage that is specially in dispute is the 12th verse. It is insisted by Dr. C. and Bro. R. that Paul teaches here that all the heathen—those who sin "without law"—inevitably "perish," because they have not the gospel; while those who have the gospel, and sin "in the law," need not necessarily be lost. Now, it seems to me that the capital mistake that these brethren made in interpreting this passage was their failure to examine the context, to ascertain what was the design or drift of the apostle's argument. I think, indeed, that we shall find before we are through that the theory of our interpreters is not only inconsistent with the general drift of the apostle's reasoning, but that it is also flatly contradicted by plain statements, made by him in the context. I need hardly say that we must never, by our interpretation of Scripture, make a writer teach what was foreign to, and inconsistent with, his manifest design. Least of all, should we make him flatly contradict himself. Now, I propose to show that Bro. R. and Dr. C., by their theory of interpretation, make Paul do both these things. What was the design or drift of the apostle's reasoning or teaching in this chapter? I think it will be generally admitted that his leading design in this epistle, so far as it was designed for the Jews, was to teach them the doctrine of salvation by faith, rather than by works. Now, as preliminary to this general conclusion, he had shown in the preceding chapter that the Gentiles were very corrupt and sinful in their lives, and consequently could not be saved by works or "the deeds of the law." Lest his argument should lose its force on the Jews, he proceeds, in this chapter, to correct two errors that they had fallen into. They believed that all Jews, because of their having descended from Abraham, having been circumcised, and having received the written law, were accepted of God, and would be finally saved; while all the uncircumcised Gentiles, who had no written law, were rejected by Him, and would be finally lost. If any one doubts that Paul's design in this chapter was to correct this double error of the Jews, I beg that he will read the whole chapter before we proceed further. The Jew seemed to say, substantially, "your statements concerning the corrupt state of the Gentiles proves nothing in favor of your theory of salvation by faith; for some of the Gentiles are saved on any condition; and we, Jews, are saved on other conditions than that of faith." Paul then proceeds to show that God's judgment of, and final dealing with, men are based on their character or works, and not on any superior advantages or ceremonial observances. He shows that the works of the Jews were wicked, as well as those of the Gentiles, and that "the judgment of God is according to truth"—the facts—"against them that commit such things," whether they be Jews or Gentiles. He then warns them against hoping to "escape the judgment of God," while they live in sin, and adds that He "will render to every man according to his deeds," whether he be Jew or Gentile. Having laid down the general proposition that God "will render to every man," Jew and Gentile, "according to his deeds," he proceeds to amplify and explain it. He says God will visit "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile; but glory, honor and peace to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first and also to the Gentile; for there is no respect of persons with God,"—He not dealing any more hardly with the Gentile or heathen, who has no written law, than He does with the Jew, who has. Having stated the general proposition that he was arguing in opposition to the Jewish theory, in other words—"God is no respecter of persons"—he goes on to explain and amplify it still more fully in the next five verses. He says, "for as many as have sinned"—and afterwards failed to repent—"without law"—the heathen Gentiles—"shall also perish"—suffer or be punished "without law"—without any trial or condemnation by the written law—"And as many as have sinned—and afterwards failed to repent—"in the law"—against the written law—"shall be judged"—condemned and punished—"by the law"—in accordance with the threatening, and with the penalty of the written law. "For," continues Paul, "not the hearers of the law"—those who have the Jewish Scriptures—"hearing" better representing their mode of receiving Scripture truth than reading, as the Scriptures were then very scarce and they were read and explained to the people by their religious teachers, "but the doers of the law"—those who perform the condition of final salvation, whether they have the Scriptures or not—whether they be Jews or heathen Gentiles—"shall be justified," accepted and saved, ("when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ")—at the last day. 'For,' continues the apostle, 'when the Gentiles'—the heathen—'which have not the law'—the Bible—'do by nature'—the light which they receive from the works of nature, tradition and the Spirit—'the things contained in the law'—the Bible—'these'—the heathen—'having not the law'—the Bible—'are a law unto themselves'—the light of nature, tradition and the Spirit supplying, in some measure, the place of the Bible—'Which'—the heathen—'show the work of the law written in their hearts'—exhibit to others, in their lives and good works, the fact that the substance of the Bible teaching has been imparted to them by God, through nature, tradition and the Spirit—"their conscience also bearing witness" to the fact that their lives have been in conformity with the light or truth revealed in this way.

Now, I think that with unprejudiced readers I might safely rest my case on this general paraphrase and exposition of the apostle's teaching. But, as all men are not unprejudiced, and as Dr. C. and Bro. R. seem to be so certain that they are right in their interpretation of the 12th verse, let us look a little more closely into it and the context. In the first place, our interpreters make a mistake when they apply the term 'law,' used by Paul in the 12, 13, 14 and 15th verses, exclusively to the decalogue or moral law. For, he certainly does not here use that term in so restricted a sense.—On the contrary, he evidently applies it to the Jewish Scriptures at large—as a whole. In support of this assertion, I offer, first, the fact that Paul teaches that a man may so do or obey this law as to be 'justified' or saved. He says, 'not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.'—Now, if Paul does not mean to teach here that a man may so do or obey this law as to be 'justified,' or saved, as a consequence, then he stultifies himself. If he does mean so to teach, then he must refer to the Jewish Scriptures, as a whole—the gospel that was in them, as well as the moral law. For he teaches elsewhere that no man can so do or obey the moral law as to be justified or saved by it.—Secondly, in the next chapter he quotes from the 14th Psalm and then applies the term 'law' to that Psalm or quotation: "What the law saith," etc. (See Clarke's note in loco.) Let us bear in mind, in the next place, that it was the substance of this law, the Jewish Scriptures, and not the decalogue alone that has been written on the heathen heart by God, through nature, tradition and the Spirit. For, Paul says they "shew the work of the law"—the same law or Scriptures that the Jews had—"written in their hearts." But if the heathen of Paul's day had the substance of the Jewish Scriptures, as a whole, "written in their hearts," they had the substance of the gospel that was in those Scriptures. And, if there was enough of the gospel in them to save the Jews, by giving them a practical condition of salvation, so was there in them, as written in the heathen heart, to do the same for them. Hence, Paul says, "for when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law"—the Jewish Scriptures, etc. That the apostle means to teach that the Gentile or heathen can so 'do' or obey this law as to be saved, is plain from the fact that the conjunction 'for' connects this statement with the 13th of the preceding verse, in which he speaks of so doing or obeying it, as to be 'justified' by it. But, let us examine the 10th verse again. It reads: "But glory, honor and peace to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile." Now, if Paul does not teach here that a 'Gentile' or heathen could so 'do good'—perform the condition of final salvation—as to reap, in Heaven, the reward of well-doing—"glory, honor and peace"—then he does not teach that the 'Jew' could do it. For, he certainly affirms the possibility of salvation in the case of the former as plainly as he does in the case of the latter. And, if he does not teach that the 'Gentiles' may do good and be saved, neither does he teach that he may do evil and be lost. For, exactly the same form of expression is used in speaking of both courses and their results. Once more. If the 'Gentile' cannot secure 'glory, honor and peace' in Heaven, why does Paul, in speaking of the matter, say 'to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile?' 'First' and 'also' are correlative terms here, and if the 'Gentile' is not saved 'also,' then the 'Jew' is not saved 'first.' And if the Jew is saved 'first,' then the Gentile must be saved 'also,' or Paul's language is adapted to mislead. A word now on the 12th verse. Bro. Yates has saved me the trouble of writing much on that. I am amazed at the construction that Bro. R. and Dr. C. put upon it. I am sure that if they had, without prejudice, consulted their Greek Testaments and Lexicons, they would have seen that so far as the final result of sinning is concerned, Paul teaches that it is substantially the same with both Jew and Gentile, only worse with the former, because he sinned against greater light. At least, that the word rendered 'judged' means 'condemned' or 'punished' or both; the same that it does in Heb. 13: 4, when Paul says, "whoremongers and adulterers God will judge"—punish. So that if all the Gentiles are to 'perish,' all the Jews and Christians are to be 'judged' punished. If they had viewed this passage in the light of the context and other passages, they would have seen that the sentence: "As many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law," is an absolute form of expression, where a condition is implied. It is clearly parallel with such passages as the following: 'He that believeth not shall be damned,' that is if he persist in his unbelief till death.

Again: 'All liars shall have their portion in the lake,' etc., that is, if they fail to repent before they die.—So, 'as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law,' if they fail to repent of their sins, not otherwise.

We see, then, that Paul, in this passage, teaches just the reverse of what Bro. R. and Dr. C. says he does, viz: That God does not deal more hardly with Gentile or heathen than he does with the Jew or Christian, and that the former has a possibility of salvation.

If I have not displayed sufficient 'gravity' in quoting this passage in support of my 'standard' theory to 'amuse' Bro. R. again, I trust that I have found in it a grave deep enough to bury his 'horrible' theory.

Reason and Faith

Christianity, it has been affirmed and truthfully too, is a Divine Fact, and not a theory, or a sentiment. Men disregarding this affirmation, have been constructing theories for four thousand years and more, and laboring in them with mighty energy to show a true God, a true system of religion and attempting to give the origin and destiny of men, what is required of them as a condition of immortality and endless bless. All of these systems and theories have been, in the whole scope and tenor of their teaching, opposed to christianity and true religion as set forth in the Bible, the great store house of facts: facts divine and eternal in origin and effect. First heathen philosophy appeared, manifested in the system of learning among the Greeks and Romans, and began the construction of a system of religion to meet the wants and desires of man's immortal nature, and when this had gone to its sublimest heights, swept over its fields of investigations and had reached the, "adamantine walls," the boundary between Reason and Faith, it heard a voice powerful in authority, saying, "thus far shalt thou go and no farther:" this system at this point demonstrated the saying of St. Paul, "the world by wisdom knew not God." After the failure and partial decay of this system of theorizing and reasoning, Scholasticism with its subtilities appeared, or was constructed, and undertook to set forth truth and reason in their native colors bringing out in the undertaking, everything that was hidden and recondite. This system flourished greatly in the twelfth century. The effect of Scholasticism was absolutely to bury as far as possible, every lineament of divine truth, beneath the ponderous tomes of mysticism, until the Bible and the doctrine of justification by faith was well nigh lost to the world. The final result of this was darkening counsel by words without knowledge. Then came the period of "the revival of Letters." This was during the time of the Reformation when Luther and his coadjutors were struggling for the true light. This period was remarkable for extraordinary mental activity in every department of learning, (theology not excepted) and in many instances, rejecting mysticism and scholastic subtleties—yet diluting the teaching of divine revelation—sweeping out boldly into the regions of free thought and inquiry. This mental activity brought much that was true to the surface—but masses of baneful error. Mind though mighty in its capabilities, cannot unless directed by divine light reach the true empyrean of thought and learning. The fourth system, and the one now flourishing, boastful of its native powers was called the reconstruction of the Methods of inquiry into the subject of Physics and Metaphysics. All of these, (in a certain sense and a fearful one too) may be recognized, as so many struggles, contests, battles and whatever else may convey the idea of conflict; first to oppose learning to the sublime and glorious truths of christianity, and secondly, to array Reason against Faith, just as if there was no realm for reason, save one in opposition to faith. The two have their distinct kingdoms and they may both be wielded, or exercised, without hinging one upon the other. Reason may investigate every subject arising in its wide realm, build its grand temples and then Faith with a diviner and more skillful hand may paint reason's landscapes, in more glorious dyes of beauty, decorate its temples with gems of blazing lustre and then do no wrong to proud Reason. Faith founded upon God's eternal Truth and the wealth of the Atonement may lead proud reason beyond its ample domain of material things and introduce it into the regions of fadeless bliss. He who made reason and marked out its boundary lines made man, made him capable, not only of reasoning, but capable of exercising faith, not to struggle against reason, in deadly and ruinous conflict, but the two were intended to harmonize and to assist one another to the fullest comprehension of God and of his plans for the government of his moral subjects. Reason has vast resources. Faith glorious disclosures. These two when combined and harmonized, show to men all of the departments of God's benevolence, point out the wisdom of every law, that has been enacted for the control of the intelligencies of the universe and to use the language of an eminent writer, shows to us, who exercise these, "the beauty of the bluecyed orb of divine Truth." Separating Reason from Faith, we bring on a state of moral and physical revolt, and superstition comes in like a flood, sweeping the soul away from the blessings of God, its dark folds shut out the beams of light from the sun of Righteousness and finally brings the death of the soul.

We need a revival now in learning, another reconstruction of the modes of exercising the mightiest faculties we possess, a revival that will bring Reason and Faith to God's altar, arrayed, each in all of their original and redeemed powers, to be united in eternal wedlock, that henceforth they may go with man, in his efforts to bring peace and joy to the sorrow smitten sons of this world. With Reason's powers man searches for the kingdom of heaven and when the evidences of its glory and riches have been examined and the treasure-trove discovered, Faith can mount aloft and take the kingdom. Faith holds a higher place in God's economy than Reason.

Reason the foundation,—Faith the capstone, faith through grace "lays the topmost stone."

Reason the strong one that labors to bring together all of the resources of the Atonement; Faith the faculty of the soul which embraces redemption's wealth and brings peace and joy to the soul. Divorce these powers and man is thrown at once into a moral and spiritual paralysis. Reason, touched by the power of the atonement and taking faith to its assistance, is fully capable of grasping God's great scheme of redemption. Reason properly used is the glory of man and the friend of God's cause—misused, it is a destroyer.

Action vs. Talking.

Messrs Editors: What the world needs is more doing and less blowing. There is a wonderful power in words to be sure, but they must be weighty; otherwise they are less than nothing and vanity. Here is what I have to say: Let every Methodist in N. C., and particularly every preacher in the N. C., Conference, estimate his value and then ask himself, 'How much of this capital can I lay on God's altar this year?' Let this question be asked in the fear of God. Don't be afraid of this solemn question, my brother, repeat it—think over it again. The question is, not what can I say, not how much noise can I make, but what can I do? I'll ask myself this question and I'll write down the answer when conscience speaks. What am I worth? Well, I pay tax $27.80 on two thousand dollars—no more—Do I pay as much to the church as I do to the State? Can I? Am I able? Have I been doing so, and can I continue to do so? Let us go back two years. Tax receipt for 1873, thirty one dollars ($31,00) for 1874, twenty seven dollars and eighty cents, making fifty eight dollars and eighty cents for the two years past. Within that time I have paid twenty five dollars to Trinity College, twenty five to Davenport, twenty to Greensboro; ten to Rutherford, ten to Widows and Orphans, thirty to Missions, making one hundred and twenty, besides various smaller amounts not counted. Not a dollar of this was collected from the people, but paid out of my own funds. Note, I have never received as much as six hundred dollars for ministerial services but one year since I have been a member of the Conference. This I have done. Now what can I do for my Lord, my church and my country this year? The Lord being my helper, I propose to buy one hundred dollars worth of books to help prize out our House, by the first of March; I propose to be one of two hundred to give Bro. Cunninggim the ten thousand dollars he asks for Greensboro College; I propose to be one of all who are orthodox on the possibility of a heathen's salvation, to give twenty dollars for Missions. Let those who believe that such men as Socrates, Seneca, Cato and others are in hell, give more. All this and as much more as I can, I intend to do before the end of the year. I will have to deny myself to do this, but I am willing. Are you? If you are not, you are not of the number who are invited to follow Jesus. 'If any man will come after me let him deny himself! Your bodies, brethren, your bodies must be presented 'a living sacrifice.' If we would render to God acceptable service, we must 'crucify the flesh,' 'put off the old man; keep under the body' 'mortify our members!' But he who is not willing to deny himself many things that would please his fancy or gratify his appetite which he has perhaps already perverted, is not willing to do what God requires. There are those who seem willing to render to God a service which costs nothing, and which they call spiritual, but the sacrifice of the body is more than they can offer—costs too much.

It is a shame to tell, but it ought to be told until every guilty cheek might burn, that there is enough money wasted, worse than wasted—by members of our church in our Conference bounds, in violation of one single general rule—needless self-indulgence, to pay off the whole Conference debt. I am ashamed! But what can I do? Why I can do this, and the Lord being my helper, this will I do. I will 'deny myself' that I may have something to 'give to him that asketh.'

Tell Bro. Cunninggim to put me down for $50,00 to Greensboro, also Bros Robey and Closs to put me down $20, for Missions.

The Pilgrim and the Knight.

In a noble castle there once resided a very rich knight. He expended much money in adorning and beautifying his dwelling, but he gave very little to the poor. A weary pilgrim came to the castle and asked, for a night's lodging. The knight haughtily refused him, and said:

"This castle is not an inn."

The pilgrim replied, "Permit me to ask two questions, and I will depart."

"Upon this condition speak," replied the knight; "I will readily answer you."

The pilgrim then said to him, "Who dwelt in this before you?"

"My father," replied the knight.

"And who will dwell here after you?" still asked the pilgrim.

The knight said, "With God's will my son."

"Well," said the pilgrim, "If each dwells but a short time in the castle, and in time must depart and make way for another, what are you here otherwise than guests? The castle, then, is truly an inn. Why, then, spend so much money adorning a dwelling which you will occupy but a short time? Be charitable, for he that hath pity upon the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given he will pay him again."

The knight took these words to heart. He gave the pilgrim shelter for the night and was ever afterward more charitable unto the poor.

John the Baptist and Christ.

To this preaching, to this baptism, in the thirtieth year of his age, came Jesus from Galilee. John was kinsman by birth, but the circumstances of their life had entirely separated them. John as a child, in the house of the blameless priest, his father, had lived at Juttah, in the far south of the tribe of Judah, and not far from Hebron. Jesus had lived in the deep seclusion of the carpenter shop in the valley of Galilee. When he first came to the banks of the Jordan, the great forerunner, according to his own emphatic and twice-repeated testimony, "knew him not." Though Jesus was not yet revealed as the Messiah to his great herald-prophet, there was something in his look, something in the sinless beauty of his ways, something in the solemn majesty of his aspect which at once overawed and captivated the soul of John. To others he was the uncompromising prophet; kings he could confront with rebuke; Pharisees he could unmask with indignation; but before this presence all his lofty bearing falls. As when some unknown dread checks the flight of the eagle, and makes him settle with hushed scream and drooping plumage on the ground, so before the purity of sinless life, the wild prophet of the desert becomes like a submissive and timid child. The battle-brunt which legionaries could not daunt—the lofty manhood before which hierarchies trembled and princes grew pale—resigns itself, submits, adores, before moral force which is weak in every external attribute, and armed only in an invisible mail.

John bowed to the simple, stainless manhood before he had been inspired to recognise the divine commission. He earnestly tried to forbid the purposes of Jesus. He who had received the confessions of all others now reverently and humbly makes his own, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" The response contains the second recorded utterance of Jesus, and the first word of his public ministry, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness."—Farrar's Life of Christ.

Judaism and Early Christianity.

There is no question that the earliest Christian Church was a Hebrew Church. There is also no question that it was an offshoot from this Hebrew Church which planted itself with exceptional vigor at Rome; and that hence Roman Christianity, from that time to this, has been strongly tinctured with Jewish elements, has blazed with Jewish intolerance, delighted in Jewish gorgeousness, and fallen a victim to Jewish realism; while Pauline or Augustinian, or Protestant idealism has struggled manfully indeed, but too often in vain, to overcome the deep weight of these lower ingredients in Catholic Christianity, and to assert for intelligence and freedom their true place in the church. That this strangle of the Petrine and Pauline elements of Christianity is still going on under our eyes, as it has been going on in all ages, need not be said. But it is essential to the healthy solution of the problem that both views should be clearly understood. The lower, sensuous, realistic Roman type of churchmanship can not be thoroughly understood without an understanding of the early Hebrew Christianity out of which it took its rise. Would any one, therefore, see how much and how little Romanism has to say for itself, let him go to the Holy Scriptures, and, putting aside their Pauline ingredients (St Luke and the Acts and St. Paul's Epistle,) he will then find that he has left upon his hands (1) the Jewish Old Testament complete; (2) the literalism of St. Matthew and St. Peter; (3) the sacramental mysticism of St. John; (4) the ascetic moralism of St James and St. Jude; (5) the gorgeous ritualism of the apocalypse; and out of these Hebrew materials he might perhaps be able to construct, in its main features, the Roman system of religion. Reintroduce, however, St. Paul and all this wonderful phantasmagoria begins to break up. Its unity and completeness is troubled. Pauline freedom, individualism and intelligence, entering into combination with the previous Hebraizing ingredients, produce that vivacious and wholesome effervescence which we see going on at this hour in all countries where Christianity is really alive, and where the Scriptures in their completeness are really studied.—Edinburg Review.

Long Lives.

Moses wrote the 90th psalm. Some think he composed it in view of his own immediate death, at the age of a hundred and twenty years. In that ode his mind seems deeply impressed with the great brevity of life: "Thou carriest them away as with a flood; they are as a sleep; in the morning they are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down, and withereth.... We spend our years as a tale that is told."

Inspired writers have used almost every apt figure to teach the swiftness of time and shortness of life. They compare our earthly existence, to a weaver's shuttle that flies so fast that one cannot trace its course with the eye; to one riding fast, who presses on day and night, and never stops; a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away; to a span which is the breadth of four fingers; to a moment, and even to a little moment. Much as men differ on most things, nearly all sober men agree that life is short. The poets sing about "an inch of time."

Yet on this point of time hang the most weighty and the most solemn things. They, who here live unto God, shall for ever reign in glory. They, who despise his goodness and waste their precious moments, shall awake to shame and everlasting contempt. Never were such crowns and victories lost or won, never were such treasures of joy or grief laid up as in this short life.

Short as life is, it is long enough for the evil disposed to do a world of mischief, and for the well disposed to do an immense amount of good. See how busy and successful the wicked are in treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath. Behold the success of those who seek for glory, and honor, and immortality. They lay up a good foundation against the time to come. Blessed is he who seizes the happy moment, lays hold on eternal life, makes peace with God, works righteousness, sows beside all water courses and gathers fruit unto life eternal.—N. Y. Observer.

March Winds.

How d' ye do, again! Glad to see you, my dears. Do you know that, in very old times, March was the first month of the year? They deprived her of that honor long ago, but she has blustered about it ever since.

Her winds soon will be talking to the trees, and trying to make them think it is time to 'turn over some new leaves.' I listened one night last Spring. The moss declared that I snored so loud that she could not sleep. I felt sure that it was not I, but I quietly staid awake to see, and I soon discovered that it was Mr. Meddlesome Wind. He came romping through the woods, talking to everybody in our neighborhood; trying to give them bad dreams.

First I heard him say to the dear tree branches: 'Rub each other; show some spirit; anything for fun; break your brother's arm off, and see how he will scold; hit the next tree a little,—she's a maple, and too weak to strike back! Ha! that's fun!'

The poor, sleepy branches did as he told them, and there was a regular family row up there.

One would suppose he might be satisfied then. But no; his fun was not complete until he had spoiled the solid comfort of our 'feeble folk,'—the ferns and old leaves, and even the tiny things under them all.

So down he came, and made a great ado. He blew all the leaves about, calling out:

'You foolish things! to lie still here when you might as well take a frolic. Jump up and have a race! Never mind the baby-flowers! One cannot always be made a blanket of. Stand up for your rights, old leaves, and let the blossoms freeze. Who cares?'

He actually slapped me in the face a dozen times! He put his arm around the poor lady-ferns and proposed a waltz; but he almost twisted them off their feet, and then laughed at them as he slept away soundly, and only groaned once when some pine cones came pounding down on her head. But the next morning she began:

'How you did——' When I informher that it was old March Wind who snored, and if she did not believe me, she had better lie awake and judge for herself.—From 'Jack-in-the-Pulpit,' St. Nicholas for March.

If I Had Leisure.

'If I had leisure, I would repair that weak place in my fence,' said a farmer. He had none, however, and while drinking cider with a neighbor, the cows broke in and injured a prime piece of corn. He had leisure then to repair his fence, but it did not bring back his corn.

'If I had leisure,' said a wheelright, last Winter, "I would alter my stove pipe, for I know it is not safe.' But he did not find time, and when his shop caught fire, and burned down, he found leisure to build another.

'If I had leisure,' said a mechanic, 'I should have my work done in season,' The man thinks his time has been all occupied, but he was not at work till after sunrise; he quit work at five o'clock, smoked a cigar after dinner, and spent two hours on the street talking nonsense with an idler.

'If I had leisure,' said a merchant, "I would pay more attention to accounts.' The chance is, my friend, if you had leisure, you would probably pay less attention to the matter than you do now. The thing lacking with hundreds of farmers who till the soil is, not more leisure, but more resolution—the spirit to do—to do now. If the farmer who sees the fence in a poor condition would only act at once, how much might be saved. It would prevent breechy cattle creating quarrels among neighbors, that in many cases terminate in law-suits, which take nearly all they are both worth to pay the lawyers.—Annual of Phrenology and Physiognomy for 1875.

How They Did It.—A gentleman in a Western city, sitting in a pew with a lady with whom he had formerly been on terms of intimate acquaintance, handed her a Bible with a pin stuck through the following verse:—"And now I beseech thee lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another."—After reading it she stuck the pin through the following verse and handed the book back to him:—"Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink, but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face, that our joy may be full,".

Infidelity at a Discount.

Last week there was much interest excited in the General Assembly of our State, over the trial and expulsion of Mr. Thorne, Representative from Warren county, on the ground of his denial of the existence of a God such as taught by our Holy Scriptures. In politics he is a Republican, but his arraignment and expulsion proceeded from no partisan motives or spirit, the resolutions being introduced by Representative Hughes, colored, and supported by members of both political parties.

There was produced in evidence against him, a pamphlet whose authorship he acknowledged and which is replete with the grossest blasphemy and ridicule of the God of the Bible and the Messiah of the New Testament. We have not read the pamphlet, but only extracts therefrom. Those extracts, however, contain sentiments so utterly at variance with religion and morality that they would unfit their advocate for the responsible and sacred duties of a wise and honest law giver, and would justify his exclusion from legislative halls in a time even of the greatest religious tolerance. He made his own defence before the House in which he asserted his belief in a certain kind of Divinity, but not in such a one as is described and taught in the Scriptures. He claimed to be a member of the Society of Progressive Friends, a religious body in existence in the Northern States, holding certain strange doctrines.

It was contended on his behalf (Messrs Meadenhall, Finger and Pinnix being the principal opponents of his expulsion, but not sympathising with the sentiments uttered in his pamphlet) that his holding views at variance with the Christian religion, did not disqualify him, under our Constitution, from holding office.

The State Constitution which was in existence previous to 1835, prohibited any one from holding office who opposed the Protestant religion. The Constitution, framed by the convention which met that year, rendered ineligible all who denied the truth of the Christian religion. Still greater liberality characterized the Constitution of 1868 under which we are now living and which disqualifies those who deny the existence of "Almighty God." As our government is founded on the principles which the Christian religion inculcates, and, by its laws and penalties, enforces what the Bible of the Christian pronounces right and prohibits what it pronounces wrong, it is not assuming too much to hold that the Supreme Being who is mentioned in our Constitution, is the God of the Christian's Bible,—a being of infinite wisdom, power, goodness and mercy, requiring of his creatures purity of life, virtuous conduct, adherence to truth and fair dealing.—So that, although Mr. Thorne may believe in the existence of a God, yet if he denies that he possesses the character which the Bible attributes to him, he is wanting in that belief which the Constitution makes a condition of eligibility to office.

This requirement of the constitution has a purpose and is not mere verbiage and emptiness. It is that he who proposes to make, construe or execute laws, must feel the obligations of an oath or promise—must recognize the rights of the governed to life liberty and property and must be encouraged to do good and deterred from evil by a belief in future rewards and punishments. He must believe that the Supreme Being whom he recognizes and worships, is a God who weighs the motives and actions of men and metes out such reward and punishment as their conduct deserves. Unless the restraints of morality which a belief in such a God imposes, are present with him, the Constitution will not place in his hands a control over the rights and happiness of others. A heathen believes in a God: he believes, too, that human sacrifices are acceptable to his god and necessary to appease his wrath, and elicit favor: but surely, because he believes in a Supreme Being, he would not be allowed to make or assist in making laws for a civilized and christian people. And although Mr. Thorne, the expelled Representative, may believe in a God of some kind, yet he is ineligible to office since he denies that his God is such as taught by the christian's Bible in the light of whose teaching our governments, national and State, were fonnded

Persons in ordering their paper changed will be careful to state the office from and to which they wish the change made.

Read This.

We take the following from the Pittsburg Christian Advocate. Let it be read and carefully pondered by all. Let each member of the church prayerfully ask himself the solemn and momentous question, Have I done my duty in the support of the gospel? Could I not have done more to help forward the great means ordained of God himself, for the conversion of the world?

"1. Some of our members are not religious. Either they have never felt the blessed power of the gospel in their hearts turning them from darkness to light, or they have left their first love, and are again in a state of religious indifference. Hence they do not appreciate the gospel as they should, and are, as a consequence, indifferent in regard to the wants of its ministers.

2. Some of our members are not even honest. They have not learned to walk by the golden rule. They will, if they can, take the advantage in buying or selling. They will take up goods without a probability of paying for them. Is it any wonder, then, that they will withhold from the preacher what is his just due?—that they will take his labor and then refuse to pay him for it? Now a man cannot be religious without being honest; but he may be honest, in the common acceptation of the term, without being religious. There are honest men who make no pretensions to religion, and do not belong to the church, who never refuse to contribute for the support of the preacher when called upon; while these dishonest members will often positively refuse to pay anything, and find a dozen faults with the preacher as an excuse for their meanness. Either he can't preach much, or he does not visit much, or he is not sociable, or he has an easier time of it than they have, etc.

3. Some of our stewards and leaders do not do their whole duty. They have little or no system in what they do. They do not properly instruct their members, particularly young converts, in regard to the duty of paying the minister. They begin the work of collecting too late in the quarter, in the year, and then spend too little time in collecting. They allow their members to look upon the work of giving to the preacher's support as a charity, instead of a duty, and look upon it too much in that light themselves. They often talk in the presence of their members in a way that is not calculated to impress them favorably. They have been heard to say: "Well, brethren, we are taxed pretty high this year, and I don't believe we can pay it; but let us do the best we can, and may be we can raise the most of it." Then a Sunday or two before the quarterly meeting they will announce that the quarterly meeting is at hand, and they would like to have a little quarterage to take there, as they would feel ashamed to have no report. A few of the better class of members respond to the call each quarter, but as a great many pay nothing at all, and others very little, at the end of the year there is a great deficiency, and the preacher leaves his work minus in his salary a hundred or two hundred dollars, more or less, when it is understood that they owe him nothing more for his services; and if he should ever ask for his back pay—for what they justly owe for services performed—he would be laughed at, and would be regarded as a great lover of money."

For the Children.

To the little girl or boy sending us the largest number of new subscribers to the Advocate for one year, with the cash, between this and the first of May, we will give a nicely bound copy of the Bible. To the one sending the next largest number, within the time specified, we will give a nicely bound Hymn book. The names of all who enter the contest, will be given in the Advocate the first week in May, so that all our little readers may know who get the nice presents. The price of the paper, for one year, is $2.20, postage paid.

Repeating the Lord's Prayer.

A CORRESPONDENT of a English Wesleyan paper wants the Lord's Prayer to be repeated by the people at the close of public prayer in churches, and suggests that the Commandments also should be similarly repeated. The London Methodist Recorder seconds the motion, saying:

"As to the Commandments, is it not a burning shame that in any Methodist chapel they should not be read more than two or three times in twenty years? Where is discipline, where is old Methodism? If the Superintendents have been asleep, can it be that no local preacher has been awake and in his senses? Such an observance is in accordance with the inmost spirit of Methodism, which still continues to teach that it is first the law which awakens; then the law again—obeyed from a heart and freed—an unfailing rule of life to those who believe the Gospel."

We are pleased to learn that Rev. W. H. Cunninggim, who accidentally had a limb broken some time since, has been removed to his home and that he is rapidly recovering.

Write Plainly!

The Southern Christian Advocate has some practical and pointed suggestions to its correspondents, which we copy, in part, and commend to those who are in the habit of writing hurriedly and carelessly for this paper. Persons who write for a paper should be careful not only to write plainly, but in spelling, the formation of sentences, and in punctuation. If a person cannot write a legible hand, and has not acquainted himself with the rules of pronunciation, let him transfer his manuscript to a friend to transcribe and prepare for publication. Here is what Dr. Kennedy has to say on the subject:

"A tolerably liberal experience with "bad writing" has rendered us somewhat of an expert in reading doubtful chirography, and yet with all the skill acquired by extensive practice we are sorely perplexed and puzzled by much of the manuscript which comes to us from week to week. It is bad enough when such manuscript bears the evidence that it is the best the writer can do, but when there are indications that the illegibility is due to sheer slovenliness and indifference on the part of the correspondent, the infliction is well nigh intolerable. It is palpable injustice to the printer to place badly written manuscript in his hands On the other hand, it is flagrant injustice to the Editor to send him such manuscript as he must rewrite before his conscience will permit him to pass over the writer's thoughts—brilliant or otherwise—to the printer. Some men, we know, are incapable of writing legibly, and carefulness only makes the matter worse Such have our sympathy, and instead of rebuke, we offer them the suggestion that when they have some thing to say through the press, it would be well, if practicable, to dictate their thoughts to some friend more gifted in the manipulation of the pen. But most of our trouble of this kind, we feel sure, results from thoughtless indifference as to the annoyance and waste of time that careless chiography may occasion.

Many of the manuscripts which we are compelled to rewrite if they appear in the paper, have enough plain writing in them to prove that with a reasonable amount of care and effort, the whole might have been made easily legible. To such writers we appeal, to do themselves the credit and us the justice, of taking more pains in the mechanical preparation of their contributions for this paper. Most especially is it important that names and dates should be written with the utmost distinctness. Ordinarly, so much of the sense may be gathered from part of a sentence or paragraph, as to identify the design of the writer, in other places where there is a very remote, and even no resemblance to the authorized form of words or letters."

The Revival in Raleigh.

The protracted meeting at Edenton Street Church, in this city, to which Dr. Rosser has given the influence of his earnest, eloquent and consecrated preaching, still continues, and will be protracted as long as the interest in it will justify. There had been up to last Sabbath over forty conversions, and several penitents were at the altar on Sabbath evening. Large and interested congregations attend the services, brethren from other churches join in the meetings, and great good is being accomplished in the city. We trust the meetings may continue and the interest spread until the whole city is brought under its blessed influence. Dr. Rosser may leave this week to fill engagements at other points, but if the interest of the people in this city does not wane, he will postpone those engagements and remain here. After his sermon on last Sabbath evening, he said, in response to Bro. Mangum's allusion to his probable departure this week, and with a heart full of feeling and consecration, "Yes, I promised to stay with you until the spring flowers bloomed: they are blooming now, and if the people will repent, I'll stay until the snow flakes fall again, for I love the people, and had rather see souls saved than to see God make a world!"

The Doctor has been laboring in our midst for three weeks preaching at night and twice on four Sabbaths Large crowds gllock to hear him and listen with the intensest interest to his pointed argument, startling eloquence and melting pathos. His resources, physical, mental and moral, seem exhustless. His constant study is how to further the salvation of souls—to that purpose he is completely consecrated—he works and does not tire, and seems to have received from Heaven, not only love for souls, but strength for his body and mind and fire for his tougue. He is sowing, and has for many years sown, precious seed and in the day of rejoicing will bear many sheaves with him. May God let him continue his work for many, many years yet to come!

We have a communication from Rev. C. H. Wiley, Bible Agent, which will appear next week.

A melting sermon being preached in a country church, all fell a-weeping but one man, who, when asked why he did not weep with the rest, said "Oh! I belong to another parish."

A deputation from the Young Men's Roman Catholic Society of Italy has waited on the Pope to present him with the proceeds of a collection amounting to 100,000 francs.

The Bilious Man.

The last Richmond Christian Advocate has the following sensible remarks which are applicable to a large class of persons. We would shun the blues just as we would a contagious disease. Let a member of the family have a genuine attack of the blues, and all of its members are effected by it. It is no indication, however, that a person always has the blues when he is thoughtful and meditative. Here is what the Advocate says:

"To a bilious man the world has an indigo hue. Congested livers are not confined to the ungodly. Good men have the blues.

It is not an unfrequent error to confound the depression of spirit caused by bodily disorder with "leanness" of soul coming from declension in piety. The horrors of indigestion are aggravated by an immginary frown of the Deity. The Apostle James gave a double prescription—oil and prayer. Calomel is sometimes "called for," to use the phrase of the doctors, when tracts are administered. An alterative is better at times than exhortation. Dyspeptics seldom shout. He is not far from Christian perfection if his spirit can master the ills of the body and sweeten the acidulous blood into effervescing joy. Usually the disordered stomach sours the soul. Sydney Smith said in his diary that he had just seen the sick child of a country parishioner, baptized it, and gave it a dose of oil. This was sound practice.

Diagnosis is everything. An organ may be healthy in itself, yet show signs of disease from sympathy with a sick member. The same spirit that groans, being burdened with an unhealthy body, would, if in a sound frame, be as buoyant as a bird. Is there a more pitiful sight than a good man mistaking the drooping of his soul incident to its connection with decay in piety?

It is a mooted question what part of the anatomy of "the possessed" was the seat of Satan. He tormented Job by boils. In modern times the mind inclines to connect bad bile with Beelzebub.

Resist the devil by natural and supernatural remedies."

MESSRS. EDITORS: I notice in your last paper quite a scorching suggestion from "Layman" that we stop the discussion upon the "curse of blood." He says we are "drifting into personalities," and intimates that the Advocate needs some practical articles upon religious subjects. Permit me to say to "Layman," 1st. The very page of the paper containing his note contains practical, religious articles, enough to satisfy a good appetite for pious reading. 2nd. I was not aware of what he suggests—that we are "drifting into personalities." I think he will find no "personalities" in what I have written. I utterly disclaim it; and "Layman" ought to give his name, so that we may know whose opinion we have thus so lavishly given to us. Will he please give us his name? I have received by letter and otherwise repeated assurances of the interest the reading public were taking in this discussion. "Layman" ought to remember that there is a variety of mind and heart to be fed. A great many desire to have a systematic belief—to be furnished with pabulum not only for the heart, but also for the intellect. Has it come to this, that such prominent gentlemen and ministers in North Carolina, as Dr. Closs, Presidents Robey and Abernethy, and Rev. J. R. Brooks, cannot discuss such an important subject as the loss of the whole heathen world without being thus squelched! I have not yet fully developed my strongest points; and please, do not stop us. We will write shorter articles, so "Layman" can get in something practical. Far be it from me to say anything personally offensive to Dr. Closs or Pres. Robey. The one was my first Presiding Elder and personal friend—the other my class-mate and highly esteemed brother.

Very truly, &c.,
E. A. YATES.

MESSRS. EDITORS: On reading my article in the Advocate to day, I find one or two passages that might be understood as a designed reflection on the honesty or integrity of Dr. Closs and Bro. Robey. And, as I certainly intended to make no such reflection, and would very much regret that any one should so interpret my language, I hasten to make this disavowal. When I referred to Dr. Closs's misinterpretation of my views concerning the design and effect of "Christ crucified," and to Bro. Robey's "utter disregard of facts"—the statements I had made, etc., I did not mean to attribute to those brethren any intentional "misrepresentation" or "disregard of facts." We all know how liable the best of men, in the ardent advocacy of an adopted theory, are, insensibly and unintentionally, to misinterpret an opposing theory.—And, in saying this, I do not except myself from the operation of this law of mind.

My apology for writing the passages referred to is the fact that I wrote very hurriedly—commencing to write the article after breakfast of the day that I mailed it at 2½ o'clock. Had I considered the language deliberately, I should have either cancelled or qualified it.

Earnestly deprecating and assiduously striving to avoid all offensive personalities in the discussion, I remain,

Fraternally, yours and theirs,
JNO. R. BROOKS.

One Opportunity.

At the Orphan Asylums at Oxford and Mar's Hill, we are feeding, clothing and teaching about one hundred and fifty orphans. Many others are applying; but our means do not justify their admission. Many good people have been expecting a lottery to support the orphan work. The lottery offered only a small sum, and if it had been larger, I would still have refused it. My reasons for refusing money, while so many orphans need it, will be found in the next number of the Children's Friend. And now I ask the truly benevolent people of the State to feel that the Orphan Work is their work, and not the work of a lottery.

If ministers will only tell their people that we need their help and give them one opportunity to contribute, and then forward what is collected, we ask for nothing more. We do not ask for any pitiful appeals—just give the cause a fair chance. Not long ago, the orphans of a Methodist minister and of a Baptist minister went on the same train to Oxford. The churches cannot afford to neglect the orphan work, neither can individuals; for a man, who is prosperous to day, may leave poor orphans to morrow. But I will not argue the case. All I ask is that the people may have one opportunity.

J. H MILLS.

DEAR ADVOCATE: I think I will have a large field for canvassing for the Advocate on Neuse circuit this year. There are at least 100 Methodists with in this charge who do not, but ought to take, the paper. This circuit ought to be called Pamlico circuit as it embraces the whole county of Pamlico as well as a good portion of Beaufort and Craven.

I consider it a very important work. It has the elements to become a first class circuit and one good station. Aurora should be a station and the balance of the circuit would be more suitably bounded for a wieldable charge. But with some aid we hope to be able to manage the whole to advantage this year.

Please send me the Advocate, and publish that my address is Newberne N C.

Devotedly yours,
J. J. CARDEN.

Newberne Feb. 24th.

The Orphan Asylums.

The course of the Superintendent in refusing the money raised for the Asylums by the immoral means of Lotteries, challenges the unqualified approval of all true friends of genuine charity and public morals. The right eous policy of Bro. Mills throws the Asylums on the direct benevolence of our people. Let all appreciate the responsibility. I have placed the Asylums on the list of objects for which I take up special collections in my congregation.

A. W. MANGUM.

NOTICE.

Before the war, many of the Preachers of the N. Carolina Conference kindly consented to sell my books, I paying freight, and books unsold to be returned to me. Parcels of these books, I have learned, are scattered in the bounds of the Conference, and I shall be much obliged to the brethren, who may know this in any case, if they will inform me of the fact, addressing me Richmond, Va., mentioning the number of each of the works, and I will give directions as to forwarding, &c.

LEO ROSSER.

Difficulties.

The Rev. Dr. Punshon, speaking of difficulties, says:—"Sirs, are there difficulties in your path, hindering your pursuits of knowledge, restraining your benevolent endeavors, making your spiritual life a contest and a toil? Be thankful for them. They will test your capabilities of resistance. You will be impelled to persever from the very energy of the opposition. If there be any might in your soul, like an avalanche of snow, it will acquire additional momentum from the obstacles which threaten to impede it. Many a man has thus robed himself in the spoils of a vanquished difficulty; and his conquests have accumulated at every onward and upward step, until he has rested from his labor, the successful athlete who has thrown the world. 'An unfortunate illustration,' you are ready to say; for all cannot win the Olympic crown, nor wear the Isthmian laurel. What of him who fails? How is he recompensed? What does he gain? What? Why, strength for life. His training has insured him that. He will never forget the gymnasium and its lessons. He will always be a stalwart man—a man of muscle and sinew. The real merit is not in the success, but in the endeavor; and, win or lose, he will be honored and crowned at last."

A Presbyterian Synod, consisting of twenty-seven missionaries and twenty-seven native preachers, recently met in China. How long will it be before a Southern Methodist Bishop will hold a conference in that land?

Remember that the price of the Christian Advocate is $2.20, postage prepaid at this office. It is the cheapest paper published in the Southern Methodist Church.

Bishop Peck, of the M. E. Church, preached in Sidney Church (M. E. Church South,) at Richmond recently, which the Methodist Advocate says is the first instance of a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church preaching in a Southern Methodist pulpit.

At Portland, Oregon, an evening-school and a Sunday school, for the benefit of the Chinese population, have been sustained for about three years.

The English revisers of the New Testament will publish a report of their labors some time next month.

The deputation from the Council of the Evangelical Alliance, which has started for Constantinople to see the Sultan with reference to the persecution of Christians in Syria, was expected to reach that city about January 23.

A new order of monks has just been established in Ireland, with the direct sanction of the Pope. They have incorporated themselves under the title of "The Brotherhood of the Presentation." As decribed by themselves, their object is to visit the sick and teach the poorest classes of children.

It is said that Mr. Gladstone has seen no fewer than eight members of his immediate family leave the Anglican Church for that of Rome. Seven of these perverts were ladies Mr. Robertson Gladstone, brother of the ex-Premier, has become a regular attendant at Myrtle-street Baptist Church, Liverpool, of which Rev. H. Stowell Brown is the pastor.

Dr. Cumming, of the National Scotch Church, Convent Garden, alluding to the mission of Messrs Moody and Sankey in the course of his sermon on Sunday morning, said they had achieved a great success; and though they were laymen, they had set an example that the employment of laymen as preachers was a most desirable thing for the masses.

It is less than nineteen years since the first convert was baptized at Foochow in connection with the mission of the Methodist Church, in China. The present number connected with the Methodist mission of Foochow, is 2,000, averaging more than one hundred baptisms per year, since 1856.

There are in the United States about fifty missionary associations, whose annual receipts and expenditures amount to $6,000,000. Of this the Episcopal and Congregational Churches each contribute about $300,000; the Presbyterian, $500,000, and the Methodist Episcopal Church about $700,000, or nearly one ninth of the whole amount.

THE Church Missionary Society has been so well pleased with the growing disposition toward self-support in the Singhelese churches at Kandy, Ceylon, that they have appointed Rev. Henry Gunasekara (the pastor of one of the congregations) chairman of the native church council at Kandy.

AN EXTRAORDINARY REVIVAL IN NORTH CHINA.—Some two years ago Cheefoo, a Buddhist, was converted, and commenced at once in his native town to persuade the people to embrace religion with wonderful success, resulting in the conversion of 160 persons, who reside some 200 miles from any missionary, and far away from the ordinary lines of travel.

All the anonymous thousand pound checks that have for a long time found their way to this and that charitable object in England are at last traced to the hand of an old man of eighty, living in a quiet way in the vicinity of Chesbunt. His secret, however, comes to light only in his death. By his books it appears that he gave away in his lifetime some £350,000 after this fashion £45,000 within the last year.

Temperance Items.

The Ohio State Convention of Prohibitionists met in Columbus, February 24th.

The Eighth National Temperance Convention is to be held at Chicago on the first of June next.

A bill has ben introduced in the Illinois Legislature to do away with treating to drinks. It provides that any man asking another to drink any intoxicating liquors shall be fined anywhere from $20 to $100.

The Michigan State Prohibition Convention met in Lansing, January 27th, passed resolutions reaffirming faith in a prohibition party to rid the State of the evils of intemperance and protesting against the proposed repeal of the present liquor-law.

The Woman's State Christian Temperance Union of Michigan held a session in Detroit a few week's since. Resolutions were adopted denying that the Union was a political organization, or in league with one, and affirming that its only intentions are to combat the evils of intemperance on philanthropic, moral, and Christian grounds, so they ask for the more efficient enforcement of the prohibition law, and protest against its repeal.

The Board of Police Commissioners of Cleveland, Ohio, in their report published, state as their belief that the real cure of the evils of intemperance is a wise and judicious license law. This is what every liquor-seller, wholesale or retail, believes. Perhaps some of the members of the Board are in some way interested in the liquor traffic.

A meeting of the New York City Liquor Dealers' Protective Union, Feb. 2d, broke up in great excitement. One of the members made a speech denouncing the officers, who had, he said, squandered funds amounting to $25,000, without any benefit to the Union. The President, Aaron Henzberg, then declared the meeting adjourned, and the gas was turned off.

"Hospital Sunday," the day when collections are taken up for this special object, in England, was remember ed in 1300 churches and chapels, resulting in collections amounting to £29,678. Many a child of sorrow will be made glad by that day's offering.

'TOM.'—A war reminiscence. Tom was a native of Granville county, N. C. He was a fine family horse. Tom's master sometimes rode him and sometimes drove him in harness. Tom was a favorite with his master. In the younger days of Tom the great war came, and in its course swept off many splendid steeds from our State. But it was the good fortune of Tom to remain untouched by the spoiler. He never snuffed the battle from afar, but the dregs of iniquity that lingered among us, after the great Lee had laid aside the munitions of war, and said by his acts: "Let us have peace." Some of those men took Tom away from his master in April 1865, and led him away captive. To his old friends Tom's whereabouts were unknown. Whether living or dead they knew not. On one Monday night in March 1863 a horse was heard walking about the premises of Tom's old home. Next morning the Major, Tom's old master, walked out early, and there to his surprise and joy stood Tom. The Major let down the drawbars, Tom walked into the lot, the door of his old stall being open, he walked leisurely in, turned round and looked as much as to say, "I am safe at home—satisfied with the situation—give me some corn and fodder, and all is well."

On that evening the gentleman who had had possession of Tom for four years arrived at the Major's and told the particulars of Tom's escape and his trip home. Early on Sunday night he made his escape from the stable, and made as good time towards Granville as he could. On Monday he refused to be captured. If a crowd met him on the road he would pass them some how, either run round, leap fences or lay his ears on his neck, show his teeth, with out stretched jaws, and rush furiously through the crowd. Home he was going, and to it he went. Like Adams, "Live or die, survive or perish" he was going home.

Tom's splendid form was no more seen among the hills of Caswell; Tom died lives.

Died, in Pamlico county on the 19th of Jan. 1875, Mrs. Ann B. Perkins, widow of the late W. B. Perkins, age 83 years, 10 months and one day. Hers was a long life of pious devotion to God and her duty.

Alda Deems, youngest child and only daughter of Mr. John A. and Mollie S. Green, fell asleep in the arms of Jesus Friday morning, the 12th day of February, 1875. She was eight months and twenty-eight days old, and her afflicted parents loved her tenderly. Little Alda was a bright child, healthy affectionate, and was beloved by all who knew her. But a mysterious providence has removed her to a clime where she shall in immortal glory bloom.

Jesus hath said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

"I take these little lambs, said He
And lay them in my breast;
Protection they shall find in me,
In me be ever blest."

ELLEN W. S.

Ann M Craig wife of Jno. Craig, died at her residence on Federal Point, Topsail circuit, N C, on 5th Feb 1875, aged 57 years, 6 months and 22 days. She was domestic in her habits, economical and skillful in the management of her household affairs, and of excellent judgement and during many years of married life was a companion and a guide to an affectionate husband, and a safe counsellor to the younger persons of her family connections. She was for 50 years a consistent member of the M. E. C hurch. Another mother in Israel has fallen she whose amiable virtues won the affections of all who knew her. Angels have taken her to the mansions which our Saviour hath prepared for the faith full, the last way of trouble has rolled act so fast as in her case, the last storm of sorrow is over past the last cloud of anxiety and care has disappeared behind the horizon of this inconstant life, the last battle is fought and the glorious victory is won and we bless God that in her last hours she could still trust her Saviour.

The soul of our sister is gone
To heighten the triumph above
Exalted to Jesus's throne
And clasped in the arms of his love.

Tribute of Respect.

Whereas it hath pleased the great Shepherd and Bishop of souls to remove from this to a higher sphere, the Rev. John F. Burnett, who for many years, filled the position of a Shepherd to the flock of Christ in the bounds of this Conference, therefore it is resolved by the Quarterly Conference of Chapel Hill and other Wake circuits:

1st. That we recognize in our departed Brother a christian whose singular purity of life and consistency of hope in his death; a minister whose fidelity to his Lord and a steward whose faithfulness must meet a large reward at the resurrection of the just.

2nd. That we tender to the afflicted family of our deceased Brother our christian sympathy, in this sore bereavement, and in respect to his memory, we extend these Resolutions to be entered in the Conference record which he was so long an honored member.

3rd. That a copy of these Resolutions be sent to the family of our departed Brother and also left to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

OLD NORTH STATE

Excelsior Cotton Food.

Having been appointed Agents for the sale of the above valuable fertilizer we take pleasure in recommending it to our planting friends as one of the and best adapted cotton and corn manures known to the farming interests.

It has been fully tested for several years with the most satisfactory results. It has been carefully analysed by eminent Chemists, and found to contain a large per centage of concentrated vegetable matter, combined richly with which constituted its component parts. It is particularly adapted to thin or exhausted lands, and while its judicious application will give the desired vigor to the growing plants, its great value will be realized in the quality of fruit produced.

We can only offer a limited amount of this pure and valuable article to our friends this season.

Children's Column.

DEAR ADVOCATE: I send answer to the questions given last week. The chapter containing the 4 verses alike, is the one hundred and seventh Psalm. The word Atonement does not occur but once in the New Testament, that is, in Romans 5th chapter and 11th verse. Regeneration is to be found twice, once in Matthew 19th chapter and 28th verse, and in Titus third chapter and fifth verse. I found them all last week, but thought I would be too late, so I did not send them, but I see from the paper yesterday, that only one of the questions was answered, and I concluded to send them together with the one this week. The word Advocate is to be found in 1st John, 11th chapter and first verse.

I am so glad Uncle Betts has put us little folks to looking up Scripture questions and answers. Is Queen Esther Betts, Uncle Betts' little girl?

Your little friend,
ROBERT LEE BURKHEAD.

Shelby, N. C. Feb. 16th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE: I find "Advocate" in the 2nd chapter and first verse of 1st John. Please ask the little readers of the Advocate if the personal pronoun "you" is used in the singular number in the Bible; if so how many times, and also tell where the word 'headband' is found. I think like some of the rest of your little correspondents that the Advocate is the best paper I ever read.

Yours truly,
MATTIE J. E. FARRAR.

Jonesboro, N. C. Feb. 18th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE: In answer to the question proposed in the last paper, I will say that the word "Advocate" is found in the 1st book of John, 2nd chapter and 1st verse. I think it a beautiful verse, and affords comfort to all of us little children, as we are all sinners.

Very respectfully,
B. A. CORBIN.

Hillsboro, N. C. Feb. 19th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE: In answer to the question of Queen Esther Betts, I will say that I find the word "Advocate" in 1st John, 2nd chapter, 1st verse. I would like for the little folks like my self to find the chapter in the Bible containing three certain verses repeated twelve times. I take a deep interest in the "Children's Column."

Respectfully,
ALICE E. PELL.

Lenoir, N. C. Feb. 18th 1875.

MR. EDITOR: In answer to Queen Esther Betts' question, I find the word Advocate in the first Epistle of John 2nd chapter and 1st verse. Can any of the young readers of the Advocate tell what Queen of Ethiopa is mentioned in the New Testament?

Very respectfully,
MARY J. BWEDLY.

Charlotte, N. C. Feb. 18th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE: In answer to little Queen's question, I find the word Advocate in the first Epistle of John 2nd chapter first verse. I think that is a very pretty verse for us little Sunday school children. I am a little Sunday school scholar and I like it very much.

LEWIS B. COLLINS.

Warrenton, N. C. Feb. 19th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE: I have found the word Advocate in the first Epistle of John in the 2d chap and 1st verse.

DEAR ADVOCATE: Will some of the young readers tell through the Advocate where, in the Bible, the name is found composed of the following letters:—it occurs but once.

Greensboro, N. C. Feb. 18th 1876.

DEAR ADVOCATE: I see that Miss Queen Esther Betts asks the young readers of the Advocate to find a chapter containing the word Advocate. It is found in 1st John 2nd chapter and 1st verse.

Yours respectfully,
MAMIE BETTS.

Ansonville, N. C. Feb. 20th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE: In answer to Queen Esther Betts' question I find the word Advocate to be in the second chapter and first verse of first John.

Very respectfully,
SALLIE L. JURNEY.

Olin, N. C. Feb. 16th 1875.

Will Uncle Betts, or some of the little folks like myself, tell us if there is but one man spoken of in the Bible who shaved himself? if so who was he and where is the chapter and verse that says he shaved himself?

MARY EMMA FLINTOFF.

Yanceyville, N. C. Feb. 15th 1875.

MY DEAR UNCLE: As sister Mollie found the word Eternity, I thought I would find the next, so when Pa's paper came I hasten to find the word Advocate. I found it in the first Epistle of John, the second chapter and first verse. I think it a very sweet verse. I hope you will give us another question next week. We children take pleasure in looking for them, and reading the good Advocate.

Your niece,
MARTHA O BOBBITT.

Feb. 20th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE I find the word "Advocate" in 1st John, 2nd chapter and 1st verse. The whole verse is pretty, and all the "little children" should memorize it, as I have done.

GENEVA THOMPSON.

Cary, N. C. Feb. 20th 1875.

Little Nannie Fleming sends the correct answer to Nannie Woodburn's question

DEAR ADVOCATE I found the word "Advocate" in the first verse of the second chapter of the first Epistle of John.

Your little friend,
MAGGIE MCKENZIE.

Feb. 16th 1875.

DEAR ADVOCATE: As you are so good as to give us a column in "our Advocate," I thought I would try to pay you by getting some one to subscribe to it, I have gotten one, and hope to get more, i. e. if you will allow it. I hope if you do, all of the little folks will try to see how many they can get for you.

Your little friend,
SIDNEY BELL GOODE.

Shelby Seminary.

Master Sammie Jurney desires the little readers of the "Advocate" to find where and how many times the word "Wife" occurs in the Bible.

Farming on Shares.

(Albemarle Times.)

Our paper has repeatedly, at the risk of treading on friendly toes, dealt out condemnation for the errors and illeness of our people.

Ours is emphatically a section of universal poverty and universal illeness.

Farming on shares is a root of much evil. The tenant becomes as he thinks a proprietor, a boss, and as such gets above work. He has nothing and has to be furnished. His hirelings are to be paid by the landlord. They are not looked after and made to work. Why? Because the tenant is not staking any thing on the success of the crop. The tenant is elated at his bosship, and thinks more of airing his dignity in town than of getting the grass out of the cotton.

At the end of the year there is no enough to fill all the demands. The land, not manured and badly cultivated has not yielded the necessary result. The tenant is broke. The landlord has lost by him.

A tenant on shares will not work.—Cleaning out ditches, fencing, manuring, caring for the team, preserving carts and tools—these and other similar duties he puts far away from him. If the weather is cold he will not work. He keeps Saturday as a standing holiday. And on one pretext and another, he does not perform real good work half his time.

How shall we begin a new order of things Is there a remedy?

Alas, we fear that poverty is the inevitable portion of this region!

EAST INDIA HEMP.

And What We Know About It.

Instead of devoting a column to the merits of this strange and wonderful plant, we remain silent and let it speak for itself through other lips than ours believing that those who have suffered most can better tell the

We will here quote words of wor[illegible] recently received, simply adding our testimony to the rest in saying, that when this plant is properly prepared, we know that it positively cures consumption, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, Allegheny City, Pa., Nov. 16, 1874.

The East India Hemp has been taken by Rev. Matthias Binder, D. S. B., and Rev. Sebastian Arnold, O. S. B., both assistant pastors of this church, and so far has given relief to both. They suffered from affections of the lungs and bronchial organs. We have recommended, through charity to sufferers, the Cannabis Indica to different persons, and continue the same in good conscience, knowing the effects by experience. Please find enclosed check for twelve bottles of syrup, pills and ointment. We shall inform you in due time what further success the medicine shall meet with.

Yours truly,
REV. FERDINAND WOLF, O. S. B.,
87 Washington street

CHINA GROVE, Rowan Co., N. C., Oct. 21, 1874.

——: Send one dozen Ointment and one of Cannabis Indica. When Mr. J. W. Fisher brought his wife to me for examination, found her in the incipient stage of interstitious consumption. Then it was I concluded to make a fair trial of India Hemp, and now there is a general demand for those remedies. The Ointment exceeds everything and anything of its kind I ever saw or tried; in many cases it acts like a charm.

Fraternally yours,
P. A. SIFFORD, M. D.

RIDGEVILLE, Caswell, N. C., Sept. 12, 1874.

Inclosed is $10 for more of the Indian Hemp. I can truly say that this medicine has done me more good than all the doctors, and I had several of the best in the country. My cough is a great deal better, and my chills and night sweats are gone. You may look for several orders soon, as many have seen the effect of this medicine on me.

W. A. FULLER.

COLEMBUS, O., Oct 30 1874

Your treatment for consumption has so improved my condition, that the inquiry comes every day from my friends, what are you taking? Several are talking of sending for some of your medicine, and James Huff desires me to order for him $9 worth of the Hemp.

WM. HUNT, North High Street.

P. S.—It is my opinion that as against this place would sell considerable for you.

W. H.

DECATUR, Franklin, Tenn., Sept. 12, 1874.

——: Send three more bottles of your consumption and bronchitis cure. My son began taking the Hemp last night three weeks ago, and he is improving rapidly. The last ten days have made him look as act like another person. I have great hope.

J. M. BRATTON

DEER RIVER, Powesheik, Iowa, Jan. 3, 1874.

I have just seen your advertisement in my paper. I know all about the Cannabis Indica. Fifteen years ago it cured my daughter of the Asthma. She had it very bad for several years but was perfectly cured.

Blood Diseases.

The blood being the source from which our systems are built up and from which we derive our mental as well as physical capabilities, how important that it should be kept pure. If it contains vile festering poisons and organic functions are weakened thereby. Settling upon important organs, as the lungs, liver or kidneys, the effect is most disastrous. How well it behooves every one to keep their blood in a perfectly healthy condition and more especially does this apply at this particular season of the year than at any other. No matter what is the exciting cause may be, the real cause of 9 out of every ten of all diseases is bad blood. Now Dr. Pierce does not wish to place his Golden Medical Discovery in the catalogue of quack patent medicines by recommending it to cure every disease, nor does he so recommend it, on the contrary there are hundreds of diseases that he acknowledges it will not cure; but what he does claim is this, that there is but one form of blood disease that it will not cure, and that disease is cancer. He does not recommend his Discovery for that disease, yet he know it to be the most searching blood cleanser yet discovered, and that it will free the blood and system of all other known blood poisons, be they animal, vegetable or mineral. The Golden Discovery is warranted by him to cure the worst forms of Skin Diseases, as all forms of Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions, also all Glandular Swellings, and the worst form of Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores of Neck, or Legs other parts, and all Scrofulous Diseases of the Bones, as White Swellings, Fever Sores Hip-Joint and Spinal Diseases, all of which belongs to scrofulous disease.

CONFIRMED—HIP-JOINT DISEASE CURED.

W. GREEN STATION, Ia., July 14, 1872.

Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—My wife first became lame nine years ago. Swellings would appear and disappear on her hip, and she was gradually becoming crippled, and her whole system rotten with disease. In 1871 a swelling broke on her hip discharging large quantities, and since that time there are several openings. Have had five doctors at an expense of $125, who say nothing will do any good but a surgical operation.

July 15th, 1873, he writes here: My wife has certainly received a great benefit from the use of your Discovery, for she was not able to get off the bed and was not expected to live a week when she commenced using it, a year ago. She has been doing most of her work for over six months. Has used twenty bottles and still using it. Her recovery is considered as almost miraculous, and we attribute it all to the use of your valuable medicine. I can cheerfully recommend it as a good purifier and strength restorer.

A Parable of the Flowers.

BY LILLIE E. BARR.

Roses, with the summer's blood
Yet in the rich cup of you;
Lily maids, whose cares perfume
Come from fairer sanctuaries;
Lamps lighted by heaven's own light,
Heather, all spotless white:

Now I see the spring will come,
Even at her persuasive shower;
Now the woods are white and dumb,
And the wild winds shake the pines,
Saying, sweet flowers, wait to say,
Cruel not, I am on the way."

Leafless shrub and trembling vine,
Shivering 'gainst the window pane,
Hyacinth and eglantine,—
You shall find that not in vain
Have been winter's storm and snow,
When the sweet spring breezes blow.

Now the gathered wealth and rest
Of the dark and dreary hours,
Every worth-its-while expressed
In your scented, glowing flowers;
All the whole-year labors paraded,
Every stem we care to water.

Lily pure and lowly,
Grow, I would best try your virtue's rule;
And the sun rise black over the sea,
And my eyes shall not look to you,
Till the garden, and day spring
Summon all the sweet world to bring.

Communicated.

For the Advocate.

TO REV. Wm. OLOSS, D. D.

VENERABLE AND DEAR BROTHER: In finishing your review of my first reply to Bro. Robey you make only a few points not fully answered in my letter to you. I have two general reasons for pursuing the subject further. 1st. I owe to developed and substantiate, for the general reader, the doctrine of our church—that the heathen are not all lost because the church fails to send them the gospel and 2nd, because I think it particularly important Methodist ministers to take the utmost extreme arguments of our Presbyterian brethren, and seek with them, in this enlighten the church founded by Wesley, they do not let her beautiful Christ! She does not need them:— God's grace, she shall not

To say that Abernethy, Brooks myself differ in our lines of argument. What of that? "All roads to Rome." And so, the doctrine of our church on this subject is so clearly true that it may be demonstrated by different argumentative The profound theologian, "I take not, will see that the neither idolaters nor de-

Paul Rom. 2 12 to 11 to show some of the heathen are saved, that they never saw a gospel You reply, "Yes, that is and so is "God said let light." and you say "one has to do with the argument as Now, you intended by darkness rain to blur my argument; in fact, you struck a powerful "God said let there be truly every corner of old illumined with Heaven's blessing; although a spot may be found the sun only slightly impinges the dark horizon, yet even that receives all necessary light and salvation of the Jesus! And so, that God shines upon the just and Just has also said to every human no matter where it throbs beneath the burden of sin and sorrow, "let there be light." And although "Sun of Righteousness" in a Jesus Christ has never risen above heathen's horizon, yet God furnished media by which its rays, the healing in their wings, may be upon the heathen world. So Paul to Rom. 2 12 to 11. But say that this Scripture does not your position. Well, let's take a You who think that Rom. 2-12 proves my position that some of heathen are saved, will please unWesley, Watson, Fletcher, Clarke, Bledsoe, Abernethy, Brooks, every other Arminian think You who think it does not, please Dr. Closs and Pres. Very well—enter a nol. pros. the present.

And now let us look back over the session and see how far we agree, what is still left of disagreement.

Bro. Robey's position, which I understand you to endorse, is this—er this at first: that all the heathen are lost because the church fails to send them the gospel, but they are lost because they are personal sinners.—I admit there is difficulty in understanding this—how they are lost because the church does not carry them the gospel, and yet lost because they reject it already in their possession. But I am not responsible for your difficulties. The position of our church is, that, as many of the heathen as are lost, are lost for violating a known law, and not living by the light they have. If this is not true, then they are under the "horrible decree" of Calvinism. But if they are lost because the church fails to do its duty, then this is punishing B because A does wrong! Therefore, you are driven to admit that the heathen have law. Very well—so far we agree.—Now, for what purpose was this law given them? Will you not agree that it is for one of two purposes—either 1st. To furnish them with means of salvation? or 2nd. To tantalize them with enough light to furnish an excuse for their damnation? Your logical mind must answer, yes. Well, the last purpose cannot be the true one, since God is infinitely good; and the former must be the true purpose on the part of God in giving the heathen law, i. e. that they might be saved.—Therefore, some of the heathen will be saved—q. e. d.

You have been driven, then, (or, at least, Bro. Robey has,) to your last resort. What is it? I give it in Bro. Robey's language: he admits that the heathen have law, and tacitly admits that it was for their salvation: but he says that "they have all without exception violated it." Now, that is cool and easy. Assume the very gist of the controversy and so end strife! But, where, and oh! where, had his Richard Whately gone! Surely you must see that this is begging the question; and you must permit me to say, kindly, that you and Bro. Robey are blinding yourselves with another ambiguity. Let us see. The sentence in Bro. Robey's proposition, that the heathen "have all without exception violated the law" must be defined, so that we may know the sense in which we are using it at every point. Now, Paul uses the fact in one sense, but you use it in another. The term may be understood in two senses. In one sense we have all violated law, without exception; so that you, Bro. Robey and myself are in the same category with the heathen. And this is just the fact the Apostle declares, when in the 1st chap. of Rom. he gives a picture of heathen sinfulness, and in the 2nd chap. charges the same upon the Jews; for what purpose?—Why, to show the universality of the Atonement by showing the necessities of all—that "God had concluded all in sin, that He might have mercy upon all." Now, in that sense we have all, without exception, violated law, and do yet. But you use the statement that "all have sinned," in a different sense from that in which the Apostle uses it. Or, if not, the proposition of Bro. Robey is without meaning. He says that the heathen have "all without exception violated" the law given by God. Of course, he means, violated it unto death; or wickedly violated it so as to insure the loss of the soul! Now, if the Apostle anywhere says this, or if it may be logically inferred from Scripture, then we have an end of controversy. To assume this, is to assume the very thing to be proved. The Apostle says they have all sinned, and so have we; but that does not prove that all of us are lost! Besides, to prove what you have assumed is impossible. If it be a fact, it is surely hidden from us. For when the Scripture declares of the heathen, that they have violated law, it teaches with the same explicitness that we have sinned and need Atonement: and all for the purpose of "concluding all in sin, that God may have mercy upon all;"—the law and light of the heathen, as well as our preached gospel, coming through that Atonement.

You must either deny that God has given the heathen a law to save them, or admit that some of them will be saved! For, if they have "all without exception" so violated law as to insure their damnation, then it demonstrates the conclusion that the law or light given by God was not sufficient to save, or surely one at least among the millions of poor heathen would have been saved by it.

Now let me state it plainly? God has given the heathen law and light, or He has not. If He has not then they are unconditionally reprobated or unconditionally saved. But if He has given them law and light, it must be for one of two purposes, either 1st. To furnish them with means of salvation, or 2nd. To give them just enough light to tantalize them and aggravate their destruction. But the last cannot be true, since God is good, and it follows, therefore, that God has given the heathen law and light to save them. But now, a little further. If NOT A SINGLE SOUL of all the millions of heathen, is saved, then the conclusion is inevitable that it was not sufficient to save them, and they were worse than unconditionally reprobated, for they were only tantalized with an insufficient light! Now, my good brother, here is a real dilemma. Will you state your position on it, as plainly and in few words as I have mine?

I hope to share that the church is not neglecting her duty to the heathen as much as some people would have us believe.

Yours in Christ Jesus,

E. A. YATES.

How to obtain Bibles from the American Bible Society: A Word to all Concerned.

The American Bible Society, the great Agency of the Church in the United States for supplying the country with Bibles, has planted its machinery in all parts of its vast field, and every individual may obtain the benefit of its truly Christian benevolence.

Its rule is to sell Bibles at the cost of publication to those able to pay it—to sell for less than cost and at any sum less that they can give to such as cannot afford to pay the cost, and to donate without money and without price to all who need Bibles and cannot purchase them.

It has a general and wisely matured system for its work, planting itself by its auxiliaries in every community, and operating through them, while these auxiliaries, at the same time, are designed to develop the resources and to enlist the co-operation of christians of all sections in this important department of the ministry of the Word.

Some of these auxiliaries are feeble and unable to keep on hand a large and varied supply of the Holy Scriptures; and as they purchase from the Parent Society at five per cent, under cost, it is proper that they should buy on credit only when it is absolutely necessary, the American Bible Society never receiving interest on debts due for books, and some of which stand for a long period. But under this admirable plan of operations pursued the resources of the whole system are available for the wants of every part, and whatever the number of Bibles needed at any given point, either for sale or donation, they can at once be supplied.

Each auxiliary has one or more Depositories, and any party wanting a Bible should apply to that Depository which is intended to supply the locality in which he resides: if the book sought is not on hand it can be ordered in the name of the auxiliary, and the dealings of individuals should be with their auxiliary, and not with the Parent Society. If there should be a large demand on a weak auxiliary for Bibles for donation, it should meet it fully, if satisfied the call is just; if it has the books it should give them, and if it has not it should order them, having them charged to its account, and on settlement it will be relieved of such parts of the cost of its benevolent work, properly incurred and shown, as it is unable to bear. No auxiliary, therefore, should refuse, on any account, a just application for needed Bibles or refer it to the Parent Society: within its field the Parent Society operates through it, will supplement its resources, and see that it is fully able to meet every proper demand.

On the other hand, individuals should not resort to the Parent Society—it works through its own channels, it and its auxiliaries are one system, and it is only by its auxiliaries, located on the spot, that it can know the character of persons, the merits of their claims and the manner in which they use Bibles granted to them.

It is, therefore, respectfully enjoined on auxiliaries to permit no want of the Holy Scriptures within their respective fields, to remain unsupplied. If there is a call for the purchase of Bibles not on hand, let the Depository receive the price of the books and of the transportation and order them, always deducting from the freight the five per cent discount to auxiliaries; and in this way weak Societies can furnish all classes without incurring debts in trying to keep on hand every kind of Bible that may be called for, and individuals can have forwarded a single Bible at a time, at the American Bible Society's price, by paying this and the freight. But these suggestions about the forwarding of orders in special cases are not intended to relieve auxiliaries of the responsibility of having always on hand, in Depositories conveniently located, such a full supply of Bibles, of different prices, as they deem it safe for them to purchase; on the contrary, the Societies are earnestly exhorted to exert themselves to keep their Depositories as full as possible, and to see that they are accessible and known to the public, and while so doing to complete their usefulness by being ready to forward orders for books not on hand.

Finally, let all who want Bibles, by purchase or donation, apply to their own auxiliaries. The auxiliaries belong to all within their field; they are the American Bible Society for that region, and every class and each person are interested in them, and should co operate with them. The Parent Society cannot be expected to ignore its own system, or to operate outside of its regular channels, except in the rare cases of well defined necessity; and I hereby request all concerned, who need Bibles of any description, or in any numbers, to be paid for, or to be used in benevolent work to apply for them in the manner herein indicated, and to report promptly and freely to me any difficulties that may occur in having their wants supplied.

The American Church says through its Bible Society that every soul that reads the Word of God shall have it when applied for: it is my aim, by Divine help, to see this pledge fully carried out in North Carolina, and to that end to sustain the system of administration devised whenever and wherever it can be made to subserve its beneficent purpose.

The Gentleness of Jesus.

The conversation of Christ with his disciples, when he took leave of them at his last supper, was most sweet, loving and friendly, talking with them lovingly, as a father with his children, when he must depart from them. He took their weakness in good part, and bore with them, though now and then their discourse was very full of simplicity: as when Philip said, "Show us the Father," etc; and Thomas, "We know not the way," etc.; and Peter, "I will go with thee unto death;" each freely showing the thoughts of his heart. Never, since the world began, was a more precious, sweet, and amiable conversation.

Is it not a shame that we are always afraid of Christ, whereas there never was in heaven or earth a more loving, familiar, or milder man, in words, works and demeanor, especially towards poor, sorrowful and tormented consciences? Hence the prophet Jeremiah prays, saying, "O Lord, grant that we be not afraid of thee."
